FACTORIES ACT (XV OF 1871)

—S. 15 (1) (E), Rule 22 III—Order or notice from Inspector of Factories — Necessity of.

No order or notice from the Inspector of Factories is necessary before a person, who has not conformed to the rules made under the Factories Act, can be charged for any offence under it. It is the duty of such person to obey the rules, and in case of his disobedience, he becomes liable to conviction whether there was any order or not from the Inspector calling upon him to obey the rules. Emperor v. Ranoomian Pirbhai.

5 I. C. 969 : 12 Bom. L. R. 225.

FACTORIES ACT (XV OF 1881)

—S. 2—Employed—Meaning of.

The work of drawing cotton forms part of the operations of a Cotton Mill, and a boy who does this work, comes within the definition of the word "employed" given in S. 2 of the Factories Act. Emperor v. Manilal Bhogilal.

9 Cr. L. J. 160 :
1 I. C. 102 : 11 Bom. L. R. 12.

—S. 9—Register of child labour—Necessity of keeping.

S. 9 and R. 10, Bombay Factory Rules, direct the occupier of a factory to keep a register of the children "employed" and their respective employments. The responsibility is personal. A person cannot get rid of his liability for the performance of a duty imposed upon him by law by delegating it to another person. It is the duty of the occupier of a factory to find out whether children are or not employed in the factory. His liability is not discharged under S. 17 of the Act, unless he proves that his failure to enter the children in the register was due to the act of some other person without his knowledge or consent. Emperor v. Manilal Bhogilal.

9 Cr. L. J. 160 :
1 I. C. 102 : 11 Bom. L. R. 12.

—S. 14—Notice of occupation—Necessity of.

The substance and import of S. 14, Factories Act, 1881, are that the occupier of a factory shall send the notice prescribed, within one month after his occupation has commenced. If any individual sends such a notice, that is evidence of a representation by him that he is the occupier, but there is nothing in the Act, which makes it necessarily conclusive evidence. The Court may treat the evidence of a notice as sufficient to discharge the onus of proof lying on the prosecution at the outset and to shift the burden on to the person who gave the notice. The Court is not bound to treat it as such. Whether it should so treat it or not, must depend on the circumstances of each case. Emperor v. Taylor.

—S. 15 (1) (e)—Manager residing on the premises—Whether occupier.

The manager of a factory, who resides in a part of the premises in which the factory is, is not an occupier of the factory within the meaning of the Indian Factories Act, 1881. Emperor v. Rampratap Magniram.

2 Cr. L. J. 428 :
7 Bom. L. R. 454 :
I. L. R. 29 Bom. 423.

—S. 17—"Occupier," meaning of.

The word "occupier" in S. 17, Factories Act, bears the same meaning as it bears in similar enactments in England, that is to say, a person who regulates a factory and controls the work that is done there. Emperor v. Dhanji.

20 I. C. 144 : 15 Bom. L. R. 328.

FACTORIES ACT (XII OF 1911)

—S. 2—Employed—Meaning of.

The definition given in S. 2 (2) provides that a person who works in a factory, whether for wages or not, in any of the ways enumerated in that clause, shall be deemed to be employed in that factory. Ramdil Mal v. Emperor.

35 Cr. L. J. 1401 :
151 I. C. 763 : 7 R. C. 173 :
61 Cal. 332 : 38 C. W. N. 801 :
A. I. R. 1934 Cal. 546.

—S. 2—Employed—Meaning of.

The Factories Act does not affect only the manual workers. As the provisions of the Act, now stand, the question whether a particular worker who comes strictly within the definition clauses of S. 2, which are of a very wide application, and in whose case an exception could be claimed under S. 29, has to be settled by the Inspector of Factories, who is the constituted authority under the law, as it now stands, to express the opinion whether that person held a position of supervision or management, or is employed in a confidential capacity as mentioned in S. 29 of the Act, and R. 59 framed under the Act, the opinion of the Inspector being dependent on the facts and circumstances of the case before him. Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. H. E. Watson.

38 C. W. N. 1008 : 7 R. C. 292 :
A. I. R. 1934 Cal. 730.

—S. 2—Factory—What is.

The word 'factory' as used in the Factories Act, means premises where anything is done towards the making or finishing of an article up to the stage when it is ready to be sold, or is in a suitable condition to be put on the market. Prag Narain v. Emperor.

29 Cr. L. J. 583 :
109 I. C. 599 : 8 Lah. 666 :
29 P. L. R. 234 : A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 78.

—Ss. 2, 18, 41 (1) —Factory —What is.

For the purposes of the definition of the word 'factory' in the Factories Act, the purpose for which the persons on the premises are employed, is not material. All that the definition requires is that a number of persons not less than twenty shall be simultaneously employed in the premises or within the precincts, and that mechanical power is used in aid of any manufacturing process. Ganpat Dattu v. Emperor.

31 Cr. L. J. 1094 :
126 I. C. 867 : 32 Bom. L. R. 329 :
A. I. R. 1930 Bom. 162.

—S. 2 (2)—Employment—What is.

The sorting of ground-nuts for use in ground-nut decortiating machine is work connected with the article, subject of manufacturing process, within the meaning of S. 2 (2) and amounts to employment under the Act. In re : Ramanadham.

28 Cr. L. J. 267 :

50 Mad. 834 : A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 345.

FACTORIES ACT (XII OF 1911)

—S. 2 (2), (3)—Employed—Meaning of.

A person, who sells the manufactured article, though he happens to occupy a room at the factory, cannot be said to be doing any kind of work incidental to, or connected with, the manufacturing process or "connected with the article made," and is not, therefore, a person 'employed' in the factory within the meaning of S. 2 (2), (3), Factories Act. Prag Narain v. Emperor.

29 Cr. L. J. 583 :
109 I. C. 599 : 8 Lah. 666 : 29 P. L. R. 234 :
A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 78.

—S. 2 (2), (3)—Factory—What is.

A drying yard, 5 or 6 yards from the wall of the building in which machinery for decorating ground-nuts is used, is part of a factory within the meaning of S. 2 (3) of the Factories Act. In re : Ramanadham.

28 Cr. L. J. 267 :
100 I. C. 235 : 25 L. W. 176 :
52 M. L. J. 207 : 38 M. L. T. 78 :
50 Mad. 834 : A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 345.

—S. 2 (2), (3)—Factory—What is.

A factory includes everything, machine, rooms, sheds, godowns and yards, if within the premises or precincts, mechanical power is used in aid of any process for altering for transport or sale of any article. The test is whether mechanical power is used in aid of a manufacturing process used in the premises. If it is so used in a particular room, the whole premises are a factory and not merely the room. In re : Ramanadham.

50 Mad. 834 : A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 345.

—S. 2 (3)—Premises—Meaning of.

The word 'premises' in S. 2 (3), Factories Act, means the main building and its appurtenances and the word 'precincts' is intended to include any adjunct thereof. In re : Ramanadham.

28 Cr. L. J. 267 :

—Ss. 7, 23 (a), 41 (a)—Girl, aged 14 years, whether 'child'—Certificate of fitness for employment, necessity of.

A girl aged 14 years comes under the definition of 'child' in the Factories Act, and cannot, therefore, be employed in a factory, unless she is in possession of a certificate as required by S. 28. Gokuldas Haridas v. Emperor.

—S. 18 (2)—Interpretation.

The words "serve on the manager an order in writing" in S. 18 (2), Factories Act, mean that such an order as is referred to in Form O should be served definitely on the manager of the factory and that it should specify exactly what measures the manager is to take in order to remove the danger. Narayan Anant Desai v. Emperor. 26 Cr. L. J. 482 : 85 I. C. 226 : 26 Bom. L. R. 1245 : A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 143.

———S. 18 (2)—Notice to manager—Necessity of.

S. 18 (2), Factories Act, contemplates that the Inspector is to make up his mind definitely what is the order which he requires to be carried out under the Act, and for breach of which, he will prosecute the factory owner or manager under the Act, and that equally definite notice is to be given to the latter. The mere fact that the manager was aware of what the Inspector wanted him to do is not a sufficient compliance with the specific requirements of the Act. A manager of a factory cannot, therefore, be prosecuted under S. 41 (g), Factories Act, unless the condition precedent mentioned therein is complied with, that is to say, that the requisite notice has been served on the manager of the factory. Narayan Anant Desai v. Emperor.

———S. 20—Partition in factory for separation of women and children—What is.

The intention of S. 20, Factories Act, is that there should be a separation of women and children from the room in which the main body of the cotton-opener is, and that there should not be a direct means of access to that room. The partition intended by the section is one which should prevent the access of a woman or a child from the room in which the feed-end of the cotton-opener is at work to the adjacent room in which the rest of the cotton-opener is. Where there is a door made in such a partition and that door is shown to open at a particular time or even although it is shut, yet it is not locked or other effective means are not taken to prevent its being opened by a woman or child wishing to get into the press room, then the partition is on the same footing as if it had a gap in it which would not effectively separate women and children from the press room; and there would be a contravention of the provisions of S. 20 of the Factories Act. Gamadia v. Emperor.

—S. 28—Breach of law under —Plea of good faith—Value of.

The law, in general, affords protection in the matter of prosecution for commission of offences, to persons acting in good faith. Good faith so far as commission of acts of which penalties may be imposed under the law, must involve due care and attention. Where, therefore, there was the representation of the manager to the Inspector of Factories by a letter showing the bona fides on the part of the manager of the factory, in the matter of the alleged infringement of the law as contained in S. 28 read with S. 41 (a), Factories Act : Held, that the accused person was not the person on whom penalty could be imposed under the Factories Act. *Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. The duty to inform the authority under the Factories Act, under S. 34, is laid on the manager. Both the occupier and the manager are made responsible jointly and severally for this contravention under S. 41-J of the Act. Wazir Chand v. Emperor. 31 Cr. L. J. 869 (b) : 125 I. C. 380 : A. I. FACTORIES ACT (XII OF 1911)

—S. 35—Employment Register.

The provision of the law as it stands in S. 35 is mandatory in its nature; and although the use of the word "shall" in some cases does not definitely indicate the intention of the Legislature, the expression "shall be kept," taken along with the proviso to S. 35 relating to an order in writing by the Inspector, makes the position clear that in the absence of such an order, one register in Form G must be kept, of all persons employed in a factory, of the hours of their work, and of the nature of their respective employment. *Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. —S. 41—Amount of fine under.

S. 41, Factories Act, is a penal section and ought to be construed strictly. The natural interpretation of the clause in the section relating to the penalty seems to be that the occupier and manager, both or either of them, can be required to pay a fine which may extend to Rs. 200, but that between the two they cannot be required to pay any sum exceeding Rs. 200 for each offence. *Vrijvallabhdas v. —S. 41—Occupier—Who is.

An "occupier" of a factory within the meaning of S. 41, Factories Act, is the person entitled to the possession or use of the factory. He is the controller, for the time being, of the factory, the person entitled to use the factory for his own or another's profit. He may be the owner, on the other hand, he may be only a lessee or a mortgagee with possession, but it is he who decides whether the factory is to work or to close down. The manager merely carries out the occupier's orders to work the factory, and if the occupier designates no manager, the occupier himself shall be deemed to be the manager for the purposes of the Act. *Niranjan Lal v. —S. 41 (a)—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), S. 71—Employing several persons to work in contravention of provisions of Act—Offences, whether separate.

The language of S. 41 (a), Factories Act, indicates that what is prohibited is the employment of any person or allowing any person to work contrary to the provisions of the Act, that is to say, it is an offence to employ any person, or allow him to work, contrary to the provisions of the Act. Therefore, where several persons are so employed, the offence is complete and separate in respect of each person employed or allowed to work contrary to any of the provisions of the Act. To such a case the provisions of S. 71, Penal Code, have no application, because the offence of each workman is distinct and separate and there is not one offence collectively merely by the fact of a number of these offences having been committed at the same time. Emperor v. Johnson.

—S. 42—Proceedings under.

The structure of S. 42 (1), Factories Act, indicates that one proceeding is split up into two proceedings and that while the manager or occupier is accused of having committed an offence under the Act, he is also a complainant on his complaint against the other person or persons he has brought in. In the proceedings in which the manager or occupier is the complainant, he is liable to be cross-examined by the other person or persons who has or have been brought before the Court on his complaint. Consequently, the manager or occupier qua-complainant must give evidence himself. In the circumstances contemplated in the latter part of the section, he goes into the witness-box not as an accused in the case originally started against him, but in his own right as a complainant on his complaint against the other person or persons whom he has brought in. *Superintendent and Remembrancer, Legal Affairs, Bengal v. FACTORIES ACT (XXV OF 1934)

FACTORIES ACT (XXV OF 1934)

—S. 2 (1)—Managing Agent—Who is.

A person appointed by the person who has ultimate control of a factory as the latter's Munim and who is the ultimate authority on the spot and who is managing the factory on behalf of his master, answers to the description of managing agent in S. 2 (1), Factories Act, and is 'occupier' of the factory. The word Munim as commonly used does connote agency and persons dealing with the chief authority in charge of the factory where it is situated would look upon him as the agent of the owner or occupier. The phrase 'managing agent' in the definition does not have any limited technical meaning but denotes simply an agent who manages the factory. The burden of proving any special contract of service or agency between him and his master is on him. Haribhau v. Emperor.

—Ss. 43, 42, 37, 60—Exemption—Order of, should be specific.

Where under rules made by the Local Government, exemptions as to special classes of persons exist, they have to be specific, and the sections from the provisions of which exemption is given have to be clearly specified in such rules. They cannot be deduced inferentially from other specified exemptions nor a particular exemption should be allowed to override the provisions of a section not specifically included in such exemption. It is impossible to infer that because the factory enjoyed an exemption as regards S. 37, Factories Act, it must be presumed that it was not required to observe the provisions of Ss. 39 and 40. An exemption from the provisions of S. 37 does not carry with it an exemption from the provisions of Ss. 39 and 40. Emperor v. R. J. Mistry. 38 Cr. L. J. 304 :

FACTORIES ACT (XXV OF 1934)

—S. 71—Complaint by accused under S. 71—Accused going into witness-box to prove his complaint—Factory Inspector as complainant in original complaint, if can cross-examine him.

When a complaint is lodged by an accused under S. 71, the Factory Inspector, as the complainant in the original complaint, has a right, in the interests of justice, to cross-examine the accused when he goes into the witness-box to prove his own complaint. The second complaint is merely a statutory defence to the first complaint, and where the accused on the first complaint, elects to avail himself of such statutory defence, and goes into the witness-box, the complainant on the first complaint is at liberty to cross-examine him in order to show that the defence to the first complaint is not well-founded. *Emperor v. —S. 71—Procedure—Admission of offence by alleged actual offender.

The complaint is made, in the first instance, by the Inspector of Factories against the manager or occupier under S. 60, Factories Act. The manager or occupier is then entitled under S. 71 to complain against the actual offender, and if he does so, the actual offender is given notice and brought before the Court and the trial proceeds as against both persons complained against; for the section contemplates both sets of complainants and accused being before the Court at the same time. Both parties complained against are concerned with the finding on this issue and both are entitled to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses at this stage, and to lead evidence to disprove the charge, but being accused persons, they would not be entitled to give evidence themselves. If the offence is proved, the Court should record an order to that effect and the manager or occupier is guilty under S. 60 of the Act. S. 71, however, affords the manager or occupier an opportunity of escaping liability provided he can give satisfactory proof of the facts required by S. 71 (1), (a) and (b). The actual offender who is the ultimate accused, would be entitled to call evidence, but not to give evidence himself. The difference in procedure being due to the fact that the actual offender occupies the role only of an accused, whereas the occupier or manager at this stage, besides being an accused, has to discharge the onus of positive proof required by S. 71 (1), (a) and (b), and in all probability he alone is capable of proving certain facts of which proof is thereby required. The Crown, which has initiated the proceedings, and has throughout retained the carriage of the proceedings, is entitled at this stage to cross-examine the occupier or manager if he gives evidence, and any witnesses called by him in support of his charge, and to call rebutting evidence.

S. 81, Factories Act, was inserted in the Act primarily, if not entirely, for the benefit of the inspecting staff. The manager or occupier who allows workmen to work beyond the prescribed hour is not, acting or intending to act under the Act. It is sufficient in a prosecution under the Factories Act to prove that the accused has infringed the Act or Rules under the Act and it is not necessary to show that the accused intended to infringe the Act or the Rules. But though S. 81, does not apply, it is open to the occupier or manager to show under S. 71 (1) that he has used due diligence to enforce the execution of the Act and that the offence was committed by some other person without his knowledge, consent or connivance. *Provincial Government, Central Provinces and Berar v. ———Accused known to complainant previously, mentioned as suspects—Value of.

Where the accused are previously known to the complainant and are mentioned in First Information Report not as persons who were indentified at the spot but only as suspects who were overheard the evening before a particular place asking certain others to come that night, no importance can be attached to their inclusion in the Report. *Mangal Singh v. ———Delay in making—Conflicting statements regarding number of accused—Inference.

Where a complainant has made conflicting statements with regard to the number of accused in the F. I. R. and his complaint, his evidence with regard to the identification of the accused persons should be looked upon with suspicion. The fact that the F. I. R. was made after considerable delay and that there is no satisfactory explanation of the delay, would add to the suspicion. Hashmat Hussain v. Emperor. 27 Cr. L. J. 225 : 92 I. C. 209 : 7 L. L. ———Mode of proof.

In admitting F. I. R. in evidence, the procedure laid down in S. 145, Evidence Act, must be strictly followed. It is not the duty of a Court of Justice to scrutinize the evidence which a witness has given on oath before the Court, and to compare it with some previous statement of his and then to

———S. 4 (1)—Jurisdiction.

The appellant Ibrahim, an Afghan, was a natural born subject of the Ameer of Afghanistan. In 1911, he was enlisted and enrolled as a soldier in a British Indian Regiment and took the oath of allegiance to His Majesty. He also made a solemn declaration to go wherever ordered by land or sea. In 1912, while serving with the detachment of that regiment at Shameen, the appellant murdered the Subedar of the regiment and was taken into custody almost at once. Some ten or fifteen minutes after the occurrence, the Officer Commanding the detachment came up and said to the appellant: "Why have you done such a senseless act?" To this the appellant replied, "Some three or four days he has been abusing me; without a doubt I killed him." The Judge of a Provincial Court having jurisdiction in the matter held the preliminary examination in the case and with the concurrence of the Commanding Officer, sent it to the Supreme Court of Hong Kong for trial which resulted in the appellant's conviction and death sentence being passed upon him. The Judge of the Court as well as the Commanding Officer were examined as prosecution witnesses in the case. The latter deposed as to the conversation he had had with the appellant, while the former deposed that the place of the murder was entirely within his jurisdiction; that the jurisdiction exercised at Canton on Shameen is the same ex-territorial jurisdiction as is exercised throughout China by the Supreme Court; that it is still in force; that "the Indian soldiers enjoy His Majesty's protection in Shameen, Canton, and the Court exercises jurisdiction over them;" and that "Consular protection extends to trying persons and protecting them if they are improperly arrested." By special leave, an appeal in forma pauperis was preferred to the Privy Council on the grounds, first that the Hong Kong Court had no jurisdiction to try the appellant, and second, there was a grave miscarriage of justice by reason of the misreception of evidence: Held, that S. 4 (1), Foreign Jurisdiction Act did not prevent the evidence of the Judge of the Provincial Court from being admissible upon the question of jurisdiction and that in the absence of contradiction and of any grounds of real doubt, that evidence by itself satisfied all the conditions of proof requisite to establish the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court at Hong Kong; that the evidence of the Judge of the Provincial Court shows: "that by usage, sufferance, or other lawful means" His Majesty has jurisdiction at Canton; that as the appellant was a soldier of the Crown and subject to Military Law while stationed at Shameen and as he "enjoyed His Majesty's protection" in China, as of right he was subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of China. When the Crown lawfully enlists in its forces aliens along with British subjects and requires of them the same service, loyalty and allegiance as are the duties of British enlisted subjects, it extends to them the same protection in a foreign country, where all are serving together in the armed forces of His Majesty. Ibrahim v. Emperor.

FOREIGNERS ACT (III OF 1864)

———S. 2—Cessation of territory—Allegiance, whether affected.

Where there is a State, the ordinary idea of Constitutional Law is that there are subjects in that State who are ruled by the Sovereign, and when territory is ceded, the inhabitants of that territory will ordinarily become subjects of the Sovereign to whom the territory is ceded. In the absence of an express provision in a treaty of cession regulating the future nationality of the inhabitants of the ceded territory, a relinquishment of the Government of a territory is not only a relinquishment of the right to the soil of the territory but also of the right over the inhabitants of the country. It is open to a subject of the ceded territory, unless the treaty expressly forbids, to elect to continue his former nationality and to prove such election. The burden of proving such election, however, lies on the person who asserts that he has made such election. It is not enough for him to merely assert, when the question arises, that he has elected to remain within the allegiance of his former Sovereign, there must be conduct on his part such as leaving the ceded territory and going to reside permanently in his former Sovereign's dominions, to indicate his previous election. *Jagardco Ramsumer Tewari v. It is incumbent on the Commissioner of Police to report the case to the Local Government at the same time as he issues a warrant for the apprehension of an alleged foreigner. The onus is on the apprehended person to prove that he is not a foreigner. Where after the apprehension of an alleged foreigner no orders have been obtained from the Government under S. 3 of the Foreigners Act, the continued detention of the person apprehended is an illegal or improper detention within the meaning of S. 401 (1) (b) of the Cr. An ordinance is a law, and an infringement of its provisions is an offence. Consequently, an inquiry into such an offence must, under S. 5, Cr. P. C., be dealt with according to the provisions of that Code, unless there is any other enactment in force prescribing a different method of inquiry into such an offence, and in the case of an offence under Ordinance III of 1914, unless there are rules promulgated in exercise of the power conferred by S. 7 of the Ordinance. Where, therefore, the petitioner was charged with having infringed an order under S. 3, Ordinance III of 1913, and the District Magistrate held a regular trial under the Cr. P. —S. 25 (d) — Permitting cattle to trespass—Question of fact.

The question whether an owner of cattle is guilty or not guilty of an offence of permitting cattle to trespass, under S. 25 (d), Forest Act, does not depend upon the absence or presence of the owner at the time but on the question of fact in each case, namely, whether he did or did not in fact permit his cattle to trespass, the answer will depend on the whole circumstances of each case. In a great many cases, the question will resolve itself into, did he or did he not take proper precautions to prevent such trespass. When the cattle of any owner are found trespassing within a reserved forest in the neighbourhood of his house, prima facie he must be held to have permitted the trespass, but the presumption may be rebutted. *Emperor v. ———Expert evidence alone insufficient for conviction.

It is very unsafe, as a general rule, to base a conviction simply upon the opinion of an expert. The evidence of a person supposed to be acquainted with the handwriting of another is not admissible under S. 47, Evidence Act, if he does not state facts which, according to the explanation to the section, would make his opinion relevant. In the case of a club, it is not usual for a charge to be made for the profit and benefit of the owner or occupier of the premises. The other point is that in the case of a club, the place is not open to any member of the public, but only to members of the club and perhaps their guests. Emperor v. Kallappa Gurappa Kotagunshi.

———Gaming and betting—Distinction.

The difference between gaming and betting depends on the nature of the event on which the bet is made. If the event is brought about solely for the purpose of being betted about, betting on it is gaming otherwise it is not. The distinction between the two terms is based on the scientific or historical meanings of gaming; but a more satisfactory distinction is to be found by considering the popular rather than the scientific use of the word. *Hari Singh v. A place may be a public place though it is the private property of an individual. A private place to which the public have access without the permission of, or prevention by, its owner is a public place within the meaning of the Gambling Act, II of 1867. Where a place is in any way dedicated to the use of the public, it is of course a public place. But where it is owned privately, and no such dedication has taken place, the question whether it is a public place depends on the character of the place itself and the use actually made of it. Where the place is an open piece of ground, the presumption that it is a public place is naturally more easily created than where it is a building or is surrounded by a wall. *Hari Singh v. A warrant was issued under Act No. III of 1867 for the search of "house No. 169 belonging to Jhunni Bakkal, mohalla Baniapara." The house in fact searched was a house in the occupation of Jhunni Bakkal, bearing No. 169, but in mohalla Shahnathan. But Shahnathan and Baniapara were adjoining mohallas, and in mohalla Baniapara, there was no No. 169. There was further evidence to show that the house which was searched under this warrant was the house concerning which information had been given and the house which the police intended to search: Held, that the wrong connotation given to the house, namely, that it was a house in mohalla Baniapara, was merely a misdescription which did not vitiate the warrant nor prevent the presumption provided for by S. 6 from arising. *Emperor v. Owing to a dispute between a landlord and his tenant as to the right of the former to lac growing on trees, the District Magistrate apprehended a breach of the peace and initiated proceedings under S. 145, Cr. P. C., and by a subsequent order, attached the trees with the lac thereon : the lac was collected and some of it sold, the sale-proceeds being deposited in the Treasury and the unsold lac stored away : the High Court set aside the proceedings as being without jurisdiction, and issued a Rule calling upon the District Magistrate and the tenants to show cause why the sale-proceeds of the lac and the unsold lac should not be made over to the landlord, or why such order should not be passed as to the Court might seem proper : Held, (1) that the High Court had inherent power to give directions as to the disposal of property attached in a criminal proceeding initiated without jurisdiction as might be necessary in the interests of justice ; (2) that in the present case, the proper order was to keep the sale-proceeds of the lac and the unsold lac in the custody of the Subordinate Judge of the District pending the decision of a suit to be instituted by the landlord for declaration of his right to the lac, and that, in default of such suit being instituted, the net sale-proceeds of the lac be distributed rateably among the tenants. *Ali Muhammad Mandal v. Although the Court of a Munsif is not an inferior Criminal Court within the meaning of S. 435, Cr. P. C., the High Court has ample power under S. 107, Government of India Act, to entertain an application for revision of an order made by a Munsif in a proceeding in which a suitor is called upon to show cause why he should not be committed for contempt of Court. An application was made to a Munsif by a Vakil on behalf of certain minor plaintiffs to set aside an order dismissing their suit in default, the said order being described in the application as one "against rules and against law." The Munsif stigmatised this as contempt of Court and issued notice to the minors to show cause why they should not be committed for contempt of Court in respect of the application. applicability of S. 107, Government of India Act, it is sufficient to say that the High Court should not interfere with the progress of an enquiry in which nothing final can be done by the presiding officer. The 'general superintendence' vested in the High Court under S. 107, Government of India Act, applies only to cases where a subordinate officer, be he a Judge or otherwise, acts without jurisdiction or in excess of jurisdiction. If proceedings, totally without legal foundation of legislative authority, are taken by a Magistrate in the name of proceedings under Chapter XII but not seriously purporting to be taken under or to comply with the provisions of that Chapter and the High Court is satisfied of that fact by reliable evidence, there is clearly a case for interference. It is always open to a party in such a case to satisfy the High Court that the property of which he is entitled to possession has been dealt with by an order which has no legal authority at all, and he may do so by an affidavit or in any other reliable manner, and thereby invoke the superintending power of the Court, but he cannot ask the High Court to interfere in revision or to send for the record merely by showing, that on the face of the judgment, the Magistrate has neglected or misinterpreted some of the provisions of the Chapter. *Sundar Nath v. S. 67-B, Government of India Act, 1919, did not lay down that a declaration by the Governor-General in regard to the state of emergency must necessarily synchronize with the date on which the Act was certified or made by him. In fact, it is possible to conceive of cases in which no state of emergency might have existed at the time when the Act was made by the Governor-General, but it might have come into existence subsequently when he might have been obliged to bring it into operation at once. It cannot, therefore, be argued that as some time had elapsed since the Act was made, the Governor-General had lost his power to declare the existence of a state of emergency although

The Proviso to S. 67-B (2), Government of India Act, 1919, must be taken to be in the nature of a condition on the provisions of the sub-clause itself and cannot be held to depend on it for its enforceability. In other words, the Act was required to be submitted to both the Houses of Parliament and then to His Majesty for assent only when the Governor-General did not consider that a state of emergency existed which would authorize him to enforce the Act made by him earlier. If those circumstances were found to be existing, the Governor-General was authorized to bring the Act into operation at once without waiting for the period which would have elapsed if the Act were to be laid before both the Houses of Parliament for a given number of days when they were in session and then presented to His Majesty for assent. The proper way to regard a Proviso is as a limitation upon the effect of the principal enactment. In re : Swami Arungiri Natha.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT, 1919

———S. 72—Promulgating Ordinances.

The High Court can examine an Act of the Legislature whether enacted by the Legislature itself or by the Governor-General-in-Council or by the Governor-General, in order to see whether the said Act or Ordinance has been made and promulgated within the scope of the powers conferred on the Legislature, the Governor-General-in-Council and the Governor-General, respectively, by the Government of India Act, 1919. Assuming that it is open to the Court to decide whether there was or was not a state of emergency within the meaning of S. 72, Government of India Act, there was an emergency for the making of Ordinance No. III of 1930 and the Ordinance was not, therefore, ultra vires. An Ordinance made by the Governor-General under S. 72, Government of India Act, is not invalid merely because it deprives the right of an accused person to be tried by a Sessions Judge aided by assessors and to prefer an appeal to the High Court, inasmuch as these are rights given to the accused by the Cr. P. C., and there is nothing to prevent the Legislature from amending the Code so as to lay down a different procedure. Des Raj v. Emperor.

When an enactment states that nothing therein shall be construed as having a particular effect, it is not right to interpret that provision merely as prohibiting a Court from placing a particular construction on the enactment. The latter part of S. 84 (2), Government of India Act, 1919, cannot be used to limit the significance of the earlier words, because the latter part relates not only to Acts of the Central Legislature but also to Acts of the Indian Legislature. It follows that notwithstanding the Devolution Rules framed under the Government of India Act of 1919, the Indian Legislature was competent to enact S. 100 (c), Cantonments Act of 1924. *The United Provinces v. The original criminal jurisdiction of the High Court of Lahore is co-extensive with that of the Chief Court of the Punjab and does not extend further. The High Court of Lahore has no jurisdiction to try an offence under S. 124, Government of India Act. Jurisdiction to take cognizance of offences must be expressly conferred. Inherent powers of the Court cannot be invoked for that purpose. Unless expressly prohibited by the Letters Patent to take cognizance of a certain offence, the High Courts constituted after 1915, when the present Government of India Act was enacted, have the power to take cognizance of all offences which have been made cognizable by such Courts by the statutory laws in force in this country. *Faqir Singh v. It is, however, difficult to maintain the position that a Ministry, chosen from the elected representatives of the people, and empowered, within prescribed limits, to dictate the policy of the executive Government, is, in any real sense, a body of officers subordinate to the Governor. *Dhirendra Nath Sen v. —Ss. 49 (1), 50 (3)—Executive duties of Governor—Ministers, if must be consulted.

There is no provision in the Government of India Act, 1935, which requires the Governor to consult his Ministers before performing executive acts. The Instrument of Instructions implies that he should consult his Ministers, for without consulting them, he would not be able to be guided by their advice, but he is not legally required to do so. The remedy for any unconstitutional act on the part of the Governor is not legal action but constitutional action—the resignation of the Ministers if they consider that the unconstitutional act of the Governor is of sufficient importance to warrant their resignation and a request that the Governor be recalled. *In re : S. respect of which the Governor is required to act in his discretion or to exercise his individual judgment. In the case of a sanction to prosecute under S. 100, Cr. P. C., the Governor is certainly not required to exercise his individual judgment; but that does not mean that in exercising his individual judgment he is acting unlawfully, and that his act can be called in question in Court of Law. There is nothing in the Government of India Act which imposes a legal obligation upon His Excellency the Governor to consult his Ministers before sanctioning the prosecution. *In re: S. S. ————S. 204 — Jurisdiction of Federal Court.

Federal Court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit for a declaration that S. 100, Cantonments Act of 1924, was ultra vires. The Federal Court has, by S. 204 (1), of the Act, an exclusive original jurisdiction in any dispute between the Governor-General-in-Council and any Province, if and in so far as the dispute involves any question, whether of law or fact, on which the existence or extent of a legal right depends. Cantonment Board is not an independent body and the Central Government exercises a considerable measure of control over it more indeed at the present time than it did before the Constitution Act came into force, as a reference to the adaptations and modifications which the adaptation order has made in the Cantonments Act of 1924, plainly shows. In these circumstances the Governor-General-in-Council has a sufficient interest in the subject-matter of the challenged enactment to make it possible for the Federal Court to entertain a suit against him at the instance of a Provincial Government for a declaration that the enactment is ————S. 204—'Legal right,' meaning of.

The term 'legal right' used in S. 204, Government of India Act, 1935, means recognised by law and capable of being enforced by the power of a State, but not necessarily in a Court of Law. It is a right of a party, the violation of which would be a legal wrong done to his interest and respect for which is a legal duty even though no action may actually lie. Where a Statute affords a new mode of suing, the cause of action need not arise subsequently to the period when the Statute comes into operation. Where a Statute creates a new jurisdiction, the new jurisdiction takes up all past cases and there is not the slightest injustice in this; for, although the circumstances may have occurred prior to the passing of the Statute, the suit or action may have been commenced subsequently. And so if a 'legal right' really existed under the old Act, S. 204 of the new Act would not be inapplicable merely because the right related to an earlier period. *The United Provinces v. ————S. 205—Judgment, if includes judgment in criminal cases.

The juxtaposition of the words "judgment, decree or final order" in S. 205, Government of India Act, is no doubt, suggestive of civil litigation; but it cannot be said that the word "judgment" is not comprehensive enough to include a judgment pronounced in a criminal case; unlike S. 206, Constitution Act, S. 205 is not in terms limited to civil cases. Per Sulaiman, J.—The word 'judgment' cannot be taken in its widest possible sense so as to include every order which terminates a proceeding pending in a High Court so far as that Court is concerned. The order of the High Court directing a re-hearing of the criminal appeal by the Sessions Court is not a judgment within the meaning of S. 205, Government of India Act. Similarly, the order of remand cannot be regarded as a final order within the meaning of S. 205 (1).

Where the office of the Chief Justice of a High Court remains vacant due to the death of the Chief Justice or other cause, it will be preposterous to hold that till the vacancy is filled up, there is no properly constituted High Court. The vacancy in any office implies that the office exists. Vacancy must be distinguished from abolition of the office. When a Chief Justice dies, the office does not die with him but still continues. It only remains vacant until it is filled up. So long as the office is not abolished, the constitution remains unbroken and unchanged. The only effect of the vacancy in the office of Chief Justice, so long as it continues is that there will be nobody to perform his duties unless the Governor-General appoints some one of the other Judges to do the same. But this does not affect the jurisdiction of the other Judges in the least. Emperor v. Solrai Koeri.

In other words, the Governor's "consent" is an essential pre-requisite to the competency of the Court to entertain the proceedings. It is the very foundation of the Court's jurisdiction, and its absence renders the entire proceedings void ab initio. Such an illegality cannot be cured under S. 537, Cr. P. C., even when no

———S. 270—"Servant of the Crown," meaning of.

In the Government of India Act, there is no definition of the expression "servant of the Crown." According to the definition in the Penal Code, Ss. 13, 14 and 17, a servant of the Queen is the same as a servant of the Crown. The words "servant of the Crown" in S. 270, Government of India Act, have the same meaning; a civil servant does not cease to be a servant of the Crown although the conditions of his service may be regulated by an Act of the Legislature. Crown services include the subordinate as well as the superior civil services and there is no warrant for the suggestion that S. 270 applies only to the case of the superior civil services. The word "duty" in S. 270 is not necessarily confined to a legal duty. Civil servants who are Medical Officers are obviously bound to obey the rules made for the guidance of such officers and it is their duty to obey them. The affairs of a Province in S. 270 does not mean only the affairs of the Executive Government. Local Self-Government within the Province is obviously a branch of provincial affairs, and Crown servants whose services are lent to local bodies can quite properly be said to be employed in connection with the affairs of the Province, as opposed to the affairs of the Central Government. S. D. Marathe v. Pandurang Narayan Joshi.

———S. 270 (1)—Consent, necessity of—Offence under S. 477-A, Penal Code.

It is not right to introduce the question of good faith or bad faith at the stage to which Sub-s. (1) of S. 270 relates. An act is not less one done or purporting to be done in execution of a duty because the officer concerned does it negligently. An offence under S. 477-A, Penal Code, is committed if an officer or servant or anyone employed or acting in such capacity, wilfully and with intent to defraud falsifies any book or account. Thus where it is his duty to maintain a record or a register, and in maintaining that register, he makes some entries which are false to his knowledge, he is certainly purporting to act, though not actually acting in the execution of his duty, because he is making certain entries in the register, knowing them to be false. He is ostensibly professing to be discharging his official duty in maintaining the register, which he is bound to maintain correctly. In making the entries, he pretends or purports to act in the execution of his duty; but in point of fact he is acting in direct dereliction of it. For the trial of such an offence, consent under S. 270 (1) is necessary. Dr. Hori Ram Singh v. Emperor. (F. B.) 40 Cr. L. J. 468 :

As the consent of the Governor, provided for in S. 270 (1), Government of India Act, is a condition precedent to the institution of proceedings against a public servant, the necessity for such consent cannot be made to depend upon the case which the accused or the defendant may put forward after the proceedings had been instituted, but must be determined with reference to the nature of the allegations made against the public servant, in the suit or criminal proceeding. *Dr. Hori Ram Singh v. ———S. 270 (1)—Scope of—Extent of—Protection.

For the protection under S. 270 (1) the offence should have been committed when an act is done in the execution of duty or when an act purports to be done in the execution of the duty. The test is not that the offence is capable of being committed only by a public servant and not by any one else, but that it is committed by a public servant in an act done or purporting to be done in the execution of his duty. The section cannot be confined to only such acts as are done by a public servant directly in pursuance of his public office, though in excess of the duty or under a mistaken belief as to the existence of such duty. If the act complained of is an offence, it must necessarily be not an execution of duty, but a dereliction of it. It must purport to be done in the official capacity with which the offender pretends to be clothed at the time, that is to say, under the cloak of an ostensibly official act, though of course, the offence would really amount to a breach of duty. An act cannot purport to be done in execution of duty unless the offender professes to be acting in pursuance of his official duty and means to convey to the mind of another the impression that he is so acting. The section is not intended to apply to acts done purely in a private capacity by a public servant. It must have been ostensibly done by him in his official capacity in execution of his duty, which would not necessarily be the case merely because it was done at a time when he held such office, nor even necessarily because he was engaged in his official business at the time. The question whether a criminal breach of trust can be committed while purporting to act in execution of duty is not capable of being answered hypothetically in the abstract, without any reference to the actual facts of the case. The question must depend on the special circumstances of each case. When a public servant simply embezzles some property entrusted to him and thereby commits a criminal breach of trust under S. 409, Penal Code, he is not doing an act, nor even purports to do an act in execution of his duty ; when he commits the act, he does not pretend to act in the official discharge of his duty. A case like that would not ordinarily fall within the scope of S. 270 (1). Dr. Hori Ram Singh v. Emperor. (F. B.) 40 Cr. L. J. 468 :

GUARDIANS AND WARDS ACT (VIII OF 1890)

———Brother under Hindu Law can arrange for marriage of his sister—He need not apply for guardianship.

When, under the Hindu Law, a brother is a guardian of his sister and has a right to arrange for her marriage, he should not apply to be made a guardian of the girl under the Act. Nek Ram v. Emperor.

28 Cr. L. J. 388 :
100 I. C. 1044 : A. I. R. 1927 Nag. 184.

———S. 12—Miscellaneous.

The father having obstinately declined to be appointed as guardian, the Court declared that the minor was the ward of the District Judge incumbent. The minor was left in the custody of her father with a clear admonition that he was not to perform her marriage without the District Judge's permission. The father, however, married the girl with a person who had done so with full knowledge of the prohibitory order passed against the father. The point for consideration was whether the District Judge himself could not lawfully deal with the case as one of a wilful disobedience to his own injunction: Held, that there was no disobedience on the part of the legal guardian; S. 43, Guardians and Wards Act could not, therefore, come into play. Nor, on the other hand, could O. XXXIX, r. 2 (3), C. P. C., be made applicable even by resorting to S. 141, C. P. C., unless any party to the proceeding had invoked the disciplinary jurisdiction of the District Judge. It was open to the Court to pass a prohibitory order suo motu under either of Ss. 12 or 43 of the Guardians and Wards Act unlike O. XXXIX, r. 2, C. P. C. If so, it must be equally open to the Court to deal with disobedience to such order suo motu. But in the special circumstances of this case, it was inadvisable to remit the case back to the District Judge as it would put him in the unenviable position of an aggrieved party being called upon to try his own case, especially when the issue had no bearing on the minor's interests. District Judge, Chindwara v. Basori Lal.

Where there is nothing to show that the detention of the girl is for unlawful purpose, nor is it suggested by specific allegations how the detention is for illegal purpose, but there is only a vague reference to the apprehension that the girl would be spoiled as she has been wrongly detained, the remedy of the guardian is by an application under S. 25, Guardians and Wards Act. *Om Radhe v. ———Detention under Indian Extradition Act—Power of High Court to issue writ under S. 491, Cr. P. C.

The High Court has jurisdiction, under S. 491, Cr. P. C., to give a direction of the nature of habeas corpus and to examine whether a person detained in public custody under the

HABITUAL OFFENDER

Indian Extradition Act is legally detained, and the jurisdiction in the matter is not taken away, merely because the Government of India have already issued a warrant for surrender under Sub-s. (8) of S. 3, Indian Extradition Act, 1903. The Government of India, when it issues the warrant, does so in exercise of a statutory authority ; such power can be exercised validly only after strict compliance with the necessary preliminary provisions formulated by the Legislature in the Extradition Act. Consequently, if the provisions of the Act have been contravened, the action of the Government may be successfully challenged even though the warrant for surrender has already been issued. The High Court, however, will not sit in appeal to review and weigh the evidence. It is sufficient that there should be some evidence of the offence upon which the Magistrate may reasonably act. But if there was no evidence before the Magistrate, the High Court will interfere. The illegality of the initial arrest of the accused does not vitiate the extradition proceedings. Therefore, even if it be assumed that the accused was illegally arrested, that circumstance does not invalidate the inquiry under S. 3, Sub-s. (3), Extradition Act; that he was in Court was sufficient to entitle the Magistrate to hold the inquiry no matter how he had been brought before the Magistrate. The Government may issue its order to any Magistrate provided he is one who has jurisdiction to inquire into the crime of the nature of that for which extradition is sought, and he is not disqualified merely because the accused resided beyond the limits of his jurisdiction. In re : Rudolph Stallman.

HACKNEY CARRIAGE ACT (XIV OF 1879)

—Offering carriages for hire without licence—Conviction for—Legality of—Hackney-carriage—Offer of carriage for hire—Advertisement—Passenger.

The accused published an advertisement to the effect that certain carriages might be had on hire or for sale on application being made to him. He was prosecuted under S. 7, Hackney Carriage Act for offering hackney carriages for hire without a licence as required under a Municipal rule made under S. 3 of the Act, and was convicted. The conviction was based merely on the fact of publication of the advertisement and the fact that the accused had no licence: Held, that the conviction was bad as there was no proof that the accused actually possessed the carriages mentioned in the advertisement: Held, further, that regard being had to the meaning of the word "passengers" used in the definition of hackney carriage in S. 2 of the Act, and in the absence of anything to show on what terms the accused intended to let out the carriages for hire, he could not be convicted of an offence under the Act even if he were proved to have possessed the carriages. H. A. Garstin v. Emperor. 7 Cr. L. J. 71 : 4 L. B. R. 80.

—Ss. 6, 7—Insein Rules, r. 15—Refusal by driver to ply hackney carriage for hire—Liability of driver and owner for such refusal.

The driver of a hackney carriage who refuses to ply it for hire is not punishable for infringement of r. 15 of the Insein Rules under the Hackney Carriages Act, because he cannot properly be said to "keep" the carriage which he happens to be driving. And the "owner" or "keeper" of a carriage is not punishable for the refusal of his servant, i. e., the driver. It must be shown that the hirer applied to the "owner" or "keeper" and was refused by him. Emperor v. Kamali Khan. 15 Cr. L. J. 552 : 24 I. C. 960 : A. I. R. 1914 L. Bur. 234.

—Confirmation of death sentence by—Principles for.

As the law stands in India, where the alternative penalties of death and transportation are prescribed for murder, the High Court ought not to confirm the death sentence unless it considers that sentence ought to be carried out when it is confirmed. Where, in an appeal from a capital sentence, one of the Judges of the High Court was in favour of an acquittal and some delay had occurred in hearing the appeal, this was considered to be a sufficient reason for not imposing the extreme penalty. *Aular Singh v. ———Marriage—Consent of parties, necessity of—Factum valet, applicability of.

A Hindu marriage is a sacrament and not a contract, and the presence of a consenting mind is not indispensable. If the marriage rites are duly performed, and there is no impediment to the marriage in the shape of identity of gotra or prohibited degrees or relationship, the doctrine of factum valet applies and makes the marriage indissoluble in the absence of proof of any force or fraud. The reason for the exception seems to be that where the girl is abducted by force or fraud and married, there is neither any gift by the lawful guardian nor performance of any religious ceremony in the proper sense and there is consequently an absence of the essential ingredients necessary to constitute a valid marriage. Kshitish Chandra Chakraborty v. Emperor. (F. B.)

———Marriage—Parties to marriage belonging to different sub-castes—Marriage, if valid.

There is no rule of Hindu Law which prevents a man and woman belonging to two sub-castes of a twice-born class from entering into a lawful marriage. The Shastras dealing with the Hindu Law of Marriage do not contain any injunction forbidding marriages between persons belonging to different divisions of the same varna. The fact that marriages between members of different sub-castes of the same caste do not ordinarily take place, does not imply that such a marriage is interdicted and would, if performed, be declared to be invalid. There may be a disinclination to marry outside a sub-caste inspired probably by a social prejudice; but it cannot be seriously maintained that there is any custom which has acquired the force of law. Kshitish Chandra Chakraborty v. Emperor. (F. B.)

HINDU 'WIDOWS' RE-MARRIAGE ACT (XV OF 1856)

The purpose of S. 6, Hindu Widows' Remarriage Act, is to validate widow marriages, that prior to the passing of that Act, could not be validated, it was the purpose of the Act not to limit but rather to increase the rights of Hindu widows, not to restrict any existing custom of re-marriage among Hindu widows but to give the right to Hindu widows to whom it had hitherto been denied. HOME RULE FOR INDIA ———Advocacy of, legality of—Speeches, construction of, mode of.

The advocacy of principles, the object of which is to obtain for Indians an increased and gradually increasing share of political authority and to subject the administration of the country to the control of the people or peoples of India is not per se an infringement of the law. To advocate the establishment of Home Rule for India on the contentions that Indian administrators govern Native States without complaint; that in British India British Officials are paid too highly and Indians, though they are free to discuss, have no effective control over finance or policy; that the present officials being in fact alien by race,

HOME RULE OR SELF-GOVERNMENT FOR INDIA ON COLONIAL LINES

———Agitation for, whether lawful—Methods of advocacy—Legitimate discussion and propaganda, principles governing.

The advocacy of any Home Rule propaganda for India cannot be regarded as illegal per se. It lies entirely with the Sovereign, that is, the King in Parliament to establish any Government he chooses for India or any other part of the British Empire. There can be nothing wrong, therefore, in a subject of the Crown urging the desirability of a change in the machinery of the Government in India. In certain stages of society, reforms in the constitution of the Government are a biological and political necessity. Any discussion about 'Home Rule' for India is not per se objectionable. Two essentials should be kept in mind in asking for changes in the machinery of Government. The allegiance to the throne and person of the Sovereign should be held as inviolate, and there should be no suggestion that the connection which makes India an integral part of the British Empire should be severed. Within these limits, it is permissible to ask that the details of the administrative machinery should be re-adjusted to meet the exigencies of the times. Annie Besant v. Government of Madras.

The power to identify varies according to the power of observation and observation may be based upon small minutiae which a witness cannot describe himself or explain. It is impossible to lay down any useful principles as to the exact amount of identification which is required in any particular case. The Court will consider the value of the evidence of identification against each accused, and satisfy itself as to whether the man is or is not guilty. Evidence which goes to prove that a person has identified another person as having taken part in a particular offence either in Jail identification proceedings or elsewhere, is admissible though the value of such evidence is weakened perceptibly as a general rule by failure to identify subsequently in Court. Bachchu v. Emperor.

IDENTIFICATION

———Mode of holding identification parade.

It is desirable that, when an identification parade is held, each person who might reasonably be expected to identify an offender should be kept apart from the other prosecution witnesses and not remain present whilst an identification by any other person is proceeding. When one witness has picked out some or all of the supposed offenders, the next witness should be brought upon the scene and invited to pick out the person or persons whom he can identify, without any opportunity of communicating with the first witness who has already done so. This procedure should be followed till every witness has had an independent opportunity of picking out of the identification parade the supposed criminal or criminals. Nga Po Thit v. The King.

———Parade, value of.

The principal evidence of identification is the evidence of the witness given in Court as to how and under what circumstances he came to pick out a particular accused person and the details of the part which that accused took in the crime in question. The statement made by such a witness at an identification parade might be used to corroborate his evidence given in Court, but, otherwise, the evidence of identification furnished by an identification parade can only be hearsay except as to the simple fact that the witness was in a position

It would be perfectly fair for a Police Officer to enquire from a witness, without holding an identification parade, whether he could identify certain person, it is a totally different matter to get that person to make a confession in front of a proposed witness and then see if the witness would be prepared to identify him in a farce called an identification parade, and to crown all this, commit perjury in Court by denying the incident. *Jahangiri Lal v. IDENTIFICATION

-----Relevancy of, in criminal trial—Use of.

The question whether a witness has or has not identified a man during the investigation is not one which is in itself irrelevant at the trial. Identification parade should be held as a check upon the veracity of people who are believed to know something about the matter. The actual evidence regarding identification is that which is given by the witness in Court. It will not be strengthened by proof of the facts that they alleged recognition of an accused at a parade held during the investigation, though on the other hand, its value will be destroyed if it is shown that they have ever failed to identify the accused prior to the trial. Mohammad Hussain v. Emperor.

———Ss. 22, 28, 52—Mitigation of sentence—Penal Code Act (XLV of 1860), S. 177—False return—Revised true return—Offence under S. 177, whether condoned.

A person who makes a statement in a verification mentioned in S. 22 (2) Income Tax Act, which is false and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, commits an offence under S. 177, Penal Code, read with S. 52, Income Tax Act, as soon as the statement is made and a subsequent rectification of the statement in a revised return filed under S. 22 (3), Income Tax Act, cannot make it any the less an offence, though it may be considered as an extenuating circumstance in awarding sentence. Ganga Sagar v. Emperor.

An assessee applied for cancellation of an assessment under S. 27, Income Tax Act, pleading that he was prevented from making a return as his books of account were produced in a criminal case. This case was decided in October 1927, and the best judgment assessment was made in 1928. The assessee was asked to produce a copy of the application that he said he had made for return of the books. He had over a month's time to produce this but could not produce a copy and the Income Tax Officer refused to review the case: Held, that, in the circumstances of the case, the assessee was not prevented by sufficient cause from making a return of his income within the meaning of S. 27, Income Tax Act, and the order of the Income-tax Officer was perfectly justified. *Ram Kumar Mohan Lal v. In the absence of evidence as to such sanction, it cannot be presumed that it was not obtained in the ordinary course of official business. The mere omission to obtain a previous sanction does not render any law or regulation of a local Legislature invalid, provided it is assented to by the Governor-General subsequently. An assent subsequently obtained has the effect of prior command or sanction. Emperor v. Elias Ezekiel.

A serang of a launch which collided with and sank another vessel, was examined on 4th July 1910, as a witness in an investigation under Ss. 31 and 32, Inland Steam Vessels Act, 1884. He was then charged with incompetency or misconduct, and again examined on 18th July. On both occasions he was put on solemn affirmation. The District Magistrate, Rangoon, considering that the serang has given false evidence on both occasions, ordered his prosecution for perjury before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, who, however, discharged the accused, holding that the District Magistrate had no power under the Rules framed under the Act to administer an oath or affirmation to a party: Held, that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate was right as regards the statements made on the 18th July as the serang was then in the position of an accused person under S. 342, Cr. INTENT AND ATTEMPT

An intent to commit an offence punishable with imprisonment is not the same thing as an attempt to commit such offence. It exists before the attempt is begun. A mere intent is not by itself an offence, therefore, where it is used as essential to bring a particular act within the category of criminal offences, and proof has been given that such an act accompanied by such an intent has been committed, the offence is complete, even though the further act intended may not have been committed or even attempted. *Emperor v. INTERPRETATION ———Doctrine of ex-territoriality, value of.

A public ship of a nation in Foreign waters is not and is not treated as territory of her own nation. The doctrine of ex-territoriality which regards the public ship "as a floating portion of the flag State," must be rejected. The true view is that in accordance with the conventions of International Law, the territorial sovereign grants to foreign sovereigns and their envoys and public ships and the naval forces carried by such ships certain immunities. These immunities flow from a waiver by the local sovereign of his full territorial jurisdiction and can themselves be waived. The original jurisdiction in such a case flows afresh. Chung Chi Cheung v. The King.

———Jurisdiction.

The murder was committed on board the Chinese Maritime Customs cruiser Cheung, Keng while that vessel was in Hong Kong territorial waters. Both the murdered man and the accused were in the service of the Chinese Government as members of the officers and crew of the cruiser. The former was Captain, the accused was cabin boy. The accused shot and killed the Captain. He then shot at and wounded the acting Chief Officer, and then went below and shot and wounded himself. The acting Chief Officer as soon as he was wounded, directed the boatswain to proceed to Hong Kong at full speed and hail the Police launch. He wanted, he said, help to arrest the accused from the Hong Kong Police. Within a couple of hours the launch of the Hong Kong Water Police came alongside in answer to the cruiser's signal. The Police took the wounded officer and the accused to hospital. Extradition proceedings were commenced subsequently against the accused on the requisition of the Chairman of the Provincial Government of Kwangtung alleging murder and attempted murder on board the Chinese Customs cruiser within the jurisdiction of China. The crime was in reality committed within British waters. After many adjournments, the Magistrate decided, on evidence called for the defence, that the accused was a British national and that the proceedings, therefore, failed. The accused was at once re-arrested and charged with murder "in the waters of this colony" and duly committed and was tried by British Court: Held, that the Chinese Government could clearly have had jurisdiction over the offence. Chung Chi Cheung v. The King.

INTERPRETATION

———Intention of Legislature when can be referred to—Power to stopping public street.

When the ordinary grammatical construction of a Statute leads to a manifest contradiction of the apparent purpose of the enactment, the rules of grammar must give way to those of common sense and the Statute must be construed with reference to the intention of the Legislature. Powers materially affecting the welfare of a community must, of course, be exercised not arbitrarily or capriciously but in a reasonable manner, and with due regard to the well-known maxim which has been applied in cases where highways are concerned, salus populi suprema lex that "regard for the public welfare is the highest law." Hyderabad Municipality v. Fakhurudin. 25 Cr. L. J. 646 : 81 I. C. 134 : 17 S. L. R. 273 : A. I. R. 1925 Sind 90.

INTERPRETATION OF STATUTES

—————Procedure—Law, alteration of—Retrospective effect—Appeal, right of, if affected.

A new procedure affect bygone transactions, and alterations in procedure are always retrospective. Where the right of appeal is given by law, a suitor cannot be deprived of that right, in a pending action, by an alteration of the law. Nataraja Pillai v. Rangaswamy Pillai. 25 Cr. L. J. 361 :

INTERPRETATION AND EFFECT

—————Statute of Westminster, 1931, Cls. 2, 3, 7.

The limitations imposed on the Dominion Legislature by the Colonial Laws Validity Act and by the principle or rule that its powers were limited by the doctrine forbidding extra-territorial legislation have now been abrogated by the Statute of Westminster. There now remain only such limitations as flow from the Act itself, the operation of which as affecting the competence of Dominion Legislation was saved by S. 7 of the Statute, a section which excludes from the competence of the Dominion and Provincial Parliaments any power of "repeal, amendment or alteration" of the Act. British Coal Corporation v. The King.

INTERPRETATION OF ACT

It is an ordinary canon of construction that a word which occurs more than once in the same Act, must be given the same meaning throughout the Act, unless some definition in the Act or the context shows that the Legislature used the word in different senses. Emperor v. Mukunda. 8 Cr. L. J. 18 :

———Ambiguity.

It is a rule of construction that in interpreting a section which is ambiguous, the Court may look to the state of the law as it had existed before the Statute containing the section was passed. Bhikaji v. Maneckji.

5 Cr. L. J. 334 ;
9 Bom. L. R. 359.

———Ambiguity.

The interpretation clause contained in most modern Statutes should be used for interpreting words which are ambiguous or equivocal only, and not so as to disturb the meaning of such as are plain. It is not to be construed as a positive enactment. Manik Ram Ahir v. Emperor.

18 Cr. L. J. 404 ;

———Bye-laws.

Where there is a competent authority to which an Act of Parliament entrusts the power of making regulations, it is for the authority to decide what regulations are necessary ; and any regulations which they may decide to make should be supported unless they are manifestly unreasonable or unfair. S. R. Varma v. Emperor.

It is not permissible to create a casus omissus by interpretation save in some case of strong necessity. Emperor v. Rustumji.

5 Cr. L. J. 338 ;
9 Bom. L. R. 363.

———Change of language in Statute—Presumption.

A change of language in the same Code or Act may be presumed to indicate a change of intention on the part of the Legislature. Farid v. Piru.

In interpreting a constituent or organic statute, that construction most beneficial to the widest possible amplitude of its powers must be adopted. British Coal Corporation v. The King.

157 I. C. 571 P. C. ; 8 R. P. C. 38 ;
A. I. R. 1935 P. C. 158.

———Construction of comprehensive defining clause.

The rule with regard to the effect of interpretation clause of a comprehensive nature, such as those defining a term as "including" something, is that they are not to be taken as strictly defining what the meaning of a word must be under all circumstances but merely as declaring what things may be comprehended within the term where the circumstances require they should. Emperor v. Braz H. De Souza.

12 Cr. L. J. 426 ;
11 I. C. 610 ; 13 Bom. L. R. 494 ;
35 Bom. 412.

—Crown.

It is a universal rule of construction that the Crown is not bound by an Act of Parliament unless named therein expressly or by necessary implication. Hiranand Khushiram Kirpalani v. Secretary of State.

153 I. C. 142 : 36 Bom. L. R. 820 :
58 Bom. 635 : 7 R. B. 212 (2).
A. I. R. 1934 Bom. 379.

—Double construction possible.

In construing an Act of the Legislature, the wording of which is open to two possible constructions, the Court must look at what appears to have been the real object of the Act in order to determine which of the two rival constructions should be adopted. Bastiao v. Emperor.

35 Cr. L. J. 1036 (2) :
149 I. C. 1129 : 36 Bom. L. R. 430 :
6 R. B. 415 : A. I. R. 1934 Bom. 213.

—Duty of Court.

It is not within the competence of any Court to usurp the functions of the Legislature, and a Court cannot, in any way, limit or extend the scope of any provision of the law on grounds of policy or other considerations. Shebalak Singh v. Kamaruddin Mandal.

23 Cr. L. J. 549 :

—Duty of Court.

No universal rule can be laid down for the construction of Statutes, as to whether mandatory enactments shall be considered directory only or obligatory with an implied nullification for disobedience. It is the duty of Courts of Justice to try to get at the real intention of the Legislature by carefully attending to the whole scope of the Statute to be construed. Government of Assam v. Sahebulla.

24 Cr. L. J. 881 :
75 I. C. 129 : 38 C. L. J. 77 : 27 C. W. N. 857 :
51 Cal. 1 : A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 1.

—Duty of Court—Principles.

The fact, that a Judge thinks that a particular enactment is irrational or unfair, is irrelevant, provided the enactment is in such clear terms as to admit of no doubt as to its meaning. But a Judge, construing an Act of Parliament, is not a mere automaton whose only duty is to give out what he considers to be the primary meaning of the language used. A Judge must always consider the effect of any construction which he is asked to put on an Act of Parliament, and if he comes to the conclusion that a particular construction leads to a result which he considers irrational or unfair, he is entitled, and indeed bound to assume that the Legislature did not intend such a construction to be adopted, and to try to find some more rational meaning to which the words are sensible. Emperor v. Somabhai Govindbhai. (F. B.)

INTERPRETATION OF STATUTES

—Duty of Court.

When once the intention of the Legislature is plain, it is not the province of the Court to scan its wisdom or its policy. Its duty is not to make the law reasonable but expound it as it stands, according to the real sense of the words. Emperor v. Thakordas Motiram.

8 R. M. 331 : A. I. R. 1935 Mad. 528.

—English Law.

Construction of an Indian Statute depends entirely upon the meaning of words therein used and its interpretation must not be influenced by any similar provisions of the English Law. Sukhan v. Emperor.

—English Law—English case interpreting English Act—Whether can be a guide in interpreting Indian Provincial Act.

There is a danger in accepting an English case interpreting an Act of Parliament as a guide for the interpretation of a section of an Indian Provincial Statute. Tarachand Pribhdas v. Emperor.

—Fiscal and Penal Statutes.

Where there is reasonable ground for doubt as to the correct interpretation of an enactment that interpretation should be adopted which is most in favour of the person to be penalised. This principle is of general application to Fiscal and Penal Statutes. Where the matter is in doubt, that interpretation should be given to the Statute which will prevent or will not permit of an abuse of the process of the law. Emperor v. Himanchal Singh. (F. B.)

INTERPRETATION OF STATUTES

—General and Special Act.

Where there is nothing in the Special Act to exclude the operation of the general criminal law, it cannot be inferred that there was an intention on the part of the Legislature to exclude it. Joti Prasad Gupta v. Emperor.

INTERPRETATION OF STATUTES

———Illustrations — Illustrations as aid to interpretation.

Illustrations are part and parcel of enactment, and when a Court is called upon to interpret a piece of an enactment which comprises both the substantive provision and an illustration of the same, the Court is not justified in rejecting the illustration as a guide to the interpretation of the substantive provision. *Ram Lal v. Where a provision of an enactment has been interpreted by Courts in a particular manner and that enactment has been subsequently amended but the said provision of it has been left intact, the conclusion is irresistible that the interpretation of the Court is in accordance with the intention of the Legislature. *Thiraj v. INTERPRETATION OF STATUTES ———Intention of Legislature—History of legislation, when can be referred to.

A reference to the history of legislation can only be legitimately made when reasonable doubt is entertained as to the true construction of a Statute. The proper course is, in the first instance, to examine the language of the Statute, to interpret it, to ask what is its natural meaning, uninfluenced by considerations derived from the previous state of the law. To begin with, an examination of the previous state of the law on the point is to attack the problem at the wrong end; and it is a grave error to force upon the plain language of the section of an Indian Statute, an interpretation which the words will bear, on the assumption of a supposed policy on the part of the Legislature to adopt or to vary, as the case may be, the rules of the English Law on the subject. The intention of the Legislature is to be gathered from the words used in the context in which they stand. Emperor v. Barendra Kumar Ghose. (F. B.)

81 I. C. 353 : 38 C. L. J. 411 :
28 C. W. N. 170 : A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 257.

———Intention of Legislature.

In construing an Act of Parliament the Court always has to ascertain the intention of the Legislature from the language of the whole enactment, and it sometimes becomes necessary to do a certain amount of violence to the language in order to give effect to the intention to be gathered from the enactment as a whole. Vaijappa v. Emperor.

158 I. C. 649 : 37 Bom. L. R. 739 :
8 R. B. 138 : 60 Bom. 55 :
A. I. R. 1935 Bom. 402.

———Intention of Legislature.

In order to find out the intention of the Legislature in enacting a particular provision in a Statute, the Court must have regard to the language of the whole section and not confine itself to its words detached from the whole of the context. Bhikaji v. Maneckji.

5 Cr. L. J. 334 :
9 Bom. L. R. 359.

———Intention of Legislature.

It must always be presumed that the Legislature does not intend to make any alteration in the law beyond what it explicitly declares, either in express terms or by implication, or in other words beyond the immediate scope and object of the Statute. In all general matters beyond that the law remains undisturbed. It is in the highest degree improbable that the Legislature would overthrow fundamental principles or depart from the general system of law without expressing its intention with irresistible clearness. Sobhraj Dwarkadas v. Emperor.

45 I. C. 399 : 11 S. L. R. 128 :

———Intention of Legislature.

Provisions should be reconciled as far as possible—Intention of Legislature must be given effect to. Giribala Dasi v. Madu Gazi.

34 Cr. L. J. 433 (2) :

I. R. 1933 Cal. 317 : A. I. R. 1932 Cal. 699.

———Intention of Legislature.

Where the language of a Statute is clear and unambiguous, it must be interpreted in its ordinary sense. A reasonable interpretation is to be preferred to one that leads to unreasonable results. The state of the law at the time a Statute was passed is a matter material to be considered to arrive at the intention of the Legislature. Dwarka Mahlon v. Patna City Municipality.

———Jurisdiction.

Courts ought not to be astute in finding reasons for assuming jurisdiction to deal with crimes committed outside their jurisdiction, and if there is a section dealing with a particular form of crime, it would require strong words to show that any section of more general application was intended to deal also with that particular crime. : In re : Jivandas Savchand.

———Language.

In construing a Statute, the proper course is, in the first instance, to examine the language of the Statute and to ask what is its natural meaning, uninfluenced by any considerations derived from the previous state of the law and not to start with inquiring how the law previously stood and then assuming that it was probably intended to leave it unaltered, to see if the words of the enactment will bear an interpretation in conformity with this view. Emperor v. Nga Tha Din.

INTERPRETATION OF STATUTES

———Language—Language of section clear—Court should not indulge in surmises.

Where the language of a section is clear, it is not for a Court to probe into the mind of the Legislature or to indulge in surmises. Qamarali v. Tulsi.

39 Cr. L. J. 981 :
178 I. C. 54 : 11 R. N. 197 :
A. I. R. 1938 Nag. 433.

———Language—Speculation as to meaning is not proper.

The object of the Legislature must be ascertained from within the four corners of the Act. It is not open to the Court to speculate as to what the Legislature probably meant, and then do violence to the language of the enactment in order to give effect to the presumed intention. Emperor v. Chhotalal Amarchand. (F. B.)

38 Cr. L. J. 156 :

———Language—Speculation regarding intention of Legislature—Construction favourable to subject preferred.

It is a well-established proposition, that when the language of a Statute is clear, it is not permissible to speculate as to the intention of the Legislature. It is a cardinal principle of construction of Penal Statutes, that in case of doubt, the construction favourable to the subject should be preferred. Therefore, where the question is about the right of appeal to an accused person and the plain construction of the section appears to be in favour of such a right, it should not be rejected on the basis of any speculation as to the intention of the Legislature. Thiraj v. Emperor.

———Language.

The proper method of construction of a Statute is to interpret its language as it stands uninfluenced by considerations of what the law may be elsewhere. Venkatachala Goundan v. Emperor.

A. I. R. 1932 Mad. 21.

———Later enactment.

Where the words and expressions in a Statute are plainly taken from an earlier Statute in pari materia and have received judicial interpretation, it must be assumed that the Legislature was aware of such interpretation and intended it to be followed in the later enactment. A decision under the old Succession Act was relied on in construing the new Act of 1925. In the goods of : Sarah Ezra.

134 I. C. 443 : 58 Cal. 761 :
I. R. 1931 Cal. 827 :
A. I. R. 1931 Cal. 560.

———Legal terms.

In interpreting a Statute, the settled rule of construction is that where the Legislature uses a legal term which has a known significance, it must be assumed that the term has been used in that sense and in no other. Jhari Singha v. Emperor. 21 Cr. L. J. 443 :

56 I. C. 235 : A. I. R. 1920 Pat. 349.

———Liberal construction—Performance of duty in strictest language of Act, idle or impossible—Enactment to be understood as dispensing with strict performance of that duty.

If in the interpretation of Statute, the Court finds the duty either impossible of performance and beyond the normal capacity of a reasonable or prudent man, or when performance in the strictest language of the enactment is either idle or impossible, then the enactment must be understood as dispensing with the strict performance of that duty. Emperor v. Ganpal Laxman Kalgutkar. 39 Cr. L. J. 933 :

11 R. B. 112 : A. I. R. 1938 Bom. 427.

———Literal construction—Literal construction, if prevails when opposed to intention of Legislature.

It is a well-recognized canon of construction that the more literal construction ought not to prevail if it is opposed to the intentions of the Legislature as apparent from the Statute, and if the words are sufficiently flexible to admit of some other construction by which the intention will be better appreciated. Bachoo Kandero v. Emperor. (F. B.)

———Literal construction—Section to be construed literally unless it is repugnant to general purpose of Act or other section cuts down its meaning.

It is a cardinal rule of construction that a section of a statute must be construed literally unless the section itself is repugnant to the general purpose of the Act, and there is some other section which cuts down its meaning. Minho v. Emperor. 39 Cr. L. J. 294 :

173 I. C. 325 : 10 R. S. 201 :

32 S. L. R. 129 : A. I. R. 1938 Sind 9.

———Literal sense.

The words have to be read in their literal sense. The Courts cannot put upon them a construction which they believe to represent the intention of the Legislature at the time of the passing of the Statute. Government Advocate, N.-W. F. Province v. Fazal Rahim.

34 Cr. L. J. 670 :

143 I. C. 508 : 1 R. 1933 Pesh. 29 :

A. I. R. 1933 Pesh. 69.

———Marginal notes—Implied repeal.

Side notes to sections are no real guides to the intention of the Legislature, the safest guide to it being the language of the section itself. Abrogation of a section by implication is permissible under law. Bhagia v. Emperor. 28 Cr. L. J. 340 :

100 I. C. 820 : A. I. R. 1927 Nag. 203.

———Marginal notes.

It is not a legitimate canon of construction

———'May' and 'shall'.

Where the Legislature in revising a Statute alters the word 'shall' into 'may', the deduction which is usually made from the change is that whatever it was said shall be done before was compulsory, whereas the alteration of "shall" to "may" makes the action discretionary. *K. ———Meaning of words—Words should be construed in reference to context—Same word has same meaning in Statute.

It is the primary principle of construction of Statutes that the words used in any enactment are to be construed with reference to their context. There is a presumption that the Legislature uses, as far as possible, the same word in the same sense in a Statute. This rule will apply with greater force when in one and the same section the same word is used. Amdu Miyan v. Emperor. (F. B.)

Where a Sessions Judge, in referring to the evidence of certain witnesses who had knowledge of the commission of an offence but did not give out the information for some time until they were threatened with prosecution for keeping back the knowledge of the fact, warned the Jury with regard to their evidence, told them about the suspicion arising from the delay, and also placed before the Jury the explanation which those witnesses gave for the delay and advised the Jury to place proper value on their evidence, the mere fact that he did not expressly tell the Jury that these witnesses were no better than mere accomplices, does not amount to a misdirection of the Jury. *Umed Sheikh v. INTERPRETATION OF STATUTES ———Omissions, when can be supplied.

An omission which the context shows with reasonable certainty to have been unintended may be supplied, at least in enactments which are construed beneficially, as distinguished from strictly. The tendency of modern decisions upon the whole is to narrow materially the difference between what is called a strict and a beneficial construction. All Statutes are now construed with a mere attentive regard to the language, and criminal Statutes with a more rational regard to the aim and intention of the Legislature than formerly. *Emperor v. INTERPRETATION OF STATUTES —Penal Statutes.

It is an ordinary canon of construction that a word which occurs more than once in the same Act must be given the same meaning throughout the Act, unless some definition in the Act or the context shows that the Legislature used the word in different senses. Rameshwar Prasad v. Emperor.

—Penal Statutes.

It is no doubt true that a Penal Statute or a Notification conferring criminal jurisdiction in pursuance of powers vested by a Penal Statute should be construed strictly and that omissions, if any, may not be supplied lightly, but there is no absolute bar to the omissions being supplied in fit cases and it may be inferred in a proper case that the Legislature has impliedly conferred criminal jurisdiction on inferior Criminal Courts, though there are no express words in that behalf. Emperor v. Noor Mahomed.

28 Cr. L. J. 913 :
105 I. C. 433 : A. I. R. 1928 Sind 1.

—Penal Statute.

It is true that a Penal Statute should be strictly construed, but every Statute should be construed in a manner consistent with common sense, and that if the intention of the Legislature is not apparent from the words of the Statute itself, it ought to be presumed to have been such as is consistent with reason and justice. Jogendra Chandra Roy v. Superintendent of the Dum Dum Special Jail.

—Penal Statutes—More than one interpretation—Interpretation should be in favour of subject.

Although the language of a Statute is the first test for its interpretation, there are other equally important tests, when the language is not clear and unambiguous, and when more than one interpretation is possible. In such circumstances, the interpretation which appears to be most 'in accord with reason, convenience and justice' is to be preferred. Another canon of interpretation is that a Penal Statute should be construed strictly and that in case of doubt, the benefit should go to the subject. Parmanand v. Emperor. (F. B.)

INTERPRETATION OF STATUTES

—Penal Statutes.

Penal Statutes must be construed in the strict and narrow sense. Rameshwar Prasad v. Emperor.

I. R. 1931 Nag. 182 :
A. I. R. 1931 Nag. 177.

—Penal Statutes—Strict construction.

In dealing with a penal provision, the rule of strict construction requires that the language shall be construed so that no cases shall be held to fall within it which do not fall within the reasonable interpretation of the enactment. Dattatraya Mallhar Bidkar v. Emperor.

38 Cr. L. J. 145 :
166 I. C. 263 : 38 Bom. L. R. 1115 :
9 R. B. 230 : A. I. R. 1937 Bom. 28.

—Penal Statutes.

Where the thing is brought within the words and within the spirit, a penal enactment must be construed, like any other instrument, according to the fair common sense meaning of the language used, and the Court is not to find or make any doubt or ambiguity in the language of a Penal Statute where such doubt or ambiguity would clearly not be found or made in the same language in any other instrument. What the Legislature intended to be done or not to be done can only be legitimately ascertained from what it has chosen to enact, either in express words or by reasonable and necessary implication. Gamadia v. Emperor.

8 R. Rang. 40 : A. I. R. 1935 Rang. 181.

—Plain intention of Legislature.

The Legislature may have unconsciously done a thing deemed injurious. It may have acted with improvidence or without sufficient forethought; but, if so, it must be left to correct its own error, and the Court has no power to defeat its plain intention because of the result which it may or may not have contemplated. Hakam Khuda Yar v. Emperor. (F. B.)

—Plain meaning—Meaning of words of section, plain and declaring intention of Legislature—Court cannot consider advantages or disadvantages of applying plain meaning—Supposed intentions cannot be considered.

When the meaning of words of a section is plain, it is not the duty of the Courts to busy themselves with supposed intentions, when the words themselves declare the intention of the Legislature. It is inadmissible to consider the advantages or disadvantages of applying the plain meaning whether in the interests of the prosecution or the accused. Pakola Narayana Swami v. The King-Emperor.

———Plain meaning—Statute to be interpreted according to plain meaning of words and sentences.

The first and foremost canon of interpretation is that a Statute should be construed according to the plain meaning of the words and sentences contained therein. Emperor v. Jagiri Lal.

———Plain meaning.

Where it appears upon the face of the proceedings that the inferior Court has jurisdiction, it will be intended that the proceedings are regular, but unless it so appears, that is, if it appears affirmatively that the inferior Court has no jurisdiction or if it be left in doubt whether it has jurisdiction or not—no such intentment will be made. Jurisdiction does not arise from an intention presumed to exist in the mind of the author of the Notification but from apt words giving effect to that intention. The doctrine of interpretation 'ut res magis valeret quam periret' has never been invoked so as to confer jurisdiction. If the precise words are plain and unambiguous, Court is bound to construe them in their ordinary sense, even though, it do lead to an absurdity and manifest injustice. Nothing is intended to do within the jurisdiction of an inferior Court but that which is expressly alleged. Emperor v. Noor Mohamed.

When the words used in a Statute are of doubtful import and particularly when it is contended, that the enactment in question was not intended to go beyond the scope of the enactment which was repealed, it is imperative to look into the history of this legislation. Dewan Singh Mastoon v. Emperor.

———Previous rulings, if should be relied on—Question of law depending upon interpretation of Statutes.

There is grave danger in relying upon a course of rulings rather than upon the terms of the Statute itself when a question of law arises which depends on the interpretation of a Statute. Zahid Beg v. Emperor.

———Procedure prescribed by Statutes—Proceedings of Legislature—Special offences created by Statute.

A Court is not authorised to look into the proceedings of the Legislature to see what took place there during the passage of the bill which passed into law or what was the reason why a particular clause was put in for the purpose of interpreting a Statute. Where a special offence is created by a Statute and the mode how the penalty should be imposed is provided in that Statute, it can only be imposed in the mode provided therein and in no other mode. *T. ———Public policy.

Courts should carefully refrain from extending their powers on grounds of public policy, that is to say, of expediency, and thus encroach on the province of the Legislature. It is better that the public, if it is of the opinion that a certain course is opposed to public policy, should make its view clear through constitutional channels, i. e., the Legislature. *Hoondaraj Mithomal v. ———Re-enactment.

Under S. 25 of the Bengal General Clauses Act, where an Act is repealed and re-enacted, Notifications issued under the old enactment which are not inconsistent with the provisions of the new enactment are attracted to the new enactment and prosecutions under such Notifications must be founded on the new enactment and not on the repealed one.

INTERPRETATION OF STATUTES

32 C. W. N. 476 : I. R. 1929 Cal. 230 :
A. I. R. 1928 Cal. 484.

—————Repeal of earlier enactment.

It is no doubt true that it is one of the canons of the interpretation of Statutes that repeal by implication of an earlier enactment is not to be favoured especially when the earlier enactment dealt with a particular subject. But if the later Statute is so worded that the repeal flows from it as a necessary consequence, it is the duty of the Courts to give effect to it. Hakam Khuda Yar v. Emperor. (F. B.) 41 Cr. L. —————Retrospective effect.

An enactment ought not to be construed so as to give it a retrospective operation, especially in the case of a criminal matter, unless the language used indicates such intention in the Legislature. Chuni Lal v. Corporation of Calcutta. 34 Cr. L. J. 1228 :

—————Retrospective effect—Law of Limitation.

The general rule of construction is nova constitutio futuris formam imponere debet non proteritis. But this rule does not apply to Statutes relating to procedure and the Law of Limitation is a law of procedure. Such a law has retrospective effect unless there is a distinct provision to the contrary. Nuralhaqshah v. Emperor. (F. B.) 38 Cr. L. J. 723 :

—————Rules made Act.

Rules made under statutory power enforceable by penalties are to be construed like other provisions encroaching on the ordinary rights of persons. They must, on pain of invalidity, be not unreasonable nor in excess of the statutory power authorising them, nor be repugnant to the Statute or to the general principles of law. *Eng Hock v. It is not permissible in India to refer to the Statement of Objects and Reasons which accompanies the Draft Bill when it is first introduced in the Legislative body. Unlike the preamble, the headings and marginal notes, the Statement of Objects and Reasons is no part of the Act as passed by the Legislature. ———Temporary enactments.

It is a recognised rule of construction which applies with equal force to Statutes that had been expressly repealed, and to temporary Statutes, the terms of which had expired that transactions that have been completed, rights that have been acquired and penalties that have been incurred while a Statute is in force, are not affected by the mere fact of the Statute having ceased to be in force. *Jogendra Chandra Roy v. ———True construction — Court is bound to adopt true construction irrespective of consequences.

It is not the function of the Court to legislate or to look into the possible inconvenience that may arise to the prosecution or to the accused if the true construction of the Statute is adopted. The Court is bound to adopt the true construction of the Statute aided by the meaning of the words deliberately adopted by the Legislature irrespective of the consequences that it may have on an assumed policy of the Legislature or on its unexpressed intention. *Ram Prasad v. If a statutory enactment is ambiguous and capable of two interpretations, one is entitled to take into consideration that there are certain consequences which it may be presumed the Legislature did not intend to bring about and to prefer a construction which would avoid such consequences rather than one which would lead to them. *Sheo Nandan Prasad Singh v. JAIL ADMINISTRATION

———Convicts, torture of.

Whipping for insubordination may be legally administered in jails under proper precautions and in accordance with the rules given in the Jail Manual. In prisons where habitual and other long term convicts are confined, such a whipping for the purpose of enforcing discipline may at times be a regrettable necessity, but it is not arguable that an illegal and unauthorized beating or torture can afford a defence in the case of alleged insubordination. *Chaman Lal v. JOINT TRIAL

———Illegality—Omission to take objection—
Cr. P. C., Ss. 233 and 234—S. 106.

Where three persons laid three separate complaints against the accused alleging that they (the accused) committed rioting and individually caused hurt to each of the complainants and threw away and spoilt their foreign salts and other articles : Held, that though the origin and the preparations for the commission of the offences might be the same, the offences were distinct from each other and the joint trial of the accused for the offences was illegal and the illegality could not be cured by the fact that no objection to the joint trial was taken either in the Court of first instance or in the Appellate Court. The illegality has affected the jurisdiction of the Court. That S. 284, Cr. P. C., does not authorise such a joint trial, as that section refers to different acts done by the same individual or sets of individuals against the same complainant or complainants so connected with each other that they may in law be taken to be one person. *Nanda Kumar v. The jurisdiction of a Court to hear a case depends on the allegations on which its help is sought. It may be that after a trial it is found that the case has been materially exaggerated, but unless it is found at the very outset that the allegations made by the complainant are exaggerated with the intention of seeking a particular Court for redress, the statement of the complainant must be accepted for purposes of jurisdiction. *Raghunandan Prasad v. The Notification No. 84 I. The words "any consequence that has ensued" in S. 179, Cr. P. C., mean some consequence modifying or completing the act or acts constituting the offence, and do not include the loss resulting to an employer from criminal breach of trust by his servant. The complainant despatched goods from Delhi to the accused at Calcutta for sale on commission. The accused mortgaged the goods and appropriated the money to their own use : Held, that the Calcutta Court alone had jurisdiction to try the offence ; the offence alleged was complete as soon as the money had been misappropriated, and the fact that the money should have been, and was not, sent to Delhi, did not give the Delhi Court jurisdiction. *Gokal Chand v. The Magistrate convicted him under S. 480, Cr. P. On the application of one of the tenants of a house that another tenant had locked up the whole house with the applicant's goods in it, a Magistrate directed the Police to break open the house and make a list of its contents. The Police did this and put the goods in the hands of a custodian. The other tenant then appeared and applied to the Magistrate for possession of the house and his goods. The Magistrate declined to take any further action and referred him to the Civil Court. He moved the High Court in revision : Held, (1) that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to direct the lock to be broken and the property to be handed over to a custodian ; (2) that the High Court had —Duty of Judge—Reference against acquittal.

In case of reference against the verdict of the Jury where acquittals are concerned, there is a much greater onus upon the Judge to convince an Appellate Court with extreme particularity than there is when he makes a reference with regard to a conviction. Where a case depends entirely on the statements of an approver and two retracted confessions of the type of non-incriminating nature and the Jury hold that the evidence is not sufficiently corroborated and acquits the accused, the Judge has absolutely no right to put up to the High Court a report which is intended to substitute his judgment on a pure question of fact, rather than the judgment and opinion of the Jury, who were sitting with him. *Emperor v. —————Irregularity—Charge—Charge held misleading—Medical evidence—Evidence conflicting—Nature of charge regarding such evidence.

Held, after considering the charge, that the passage in the charge seemed nevertheless to be open to very serious objection. It is not primarily or at all a general comment, which would be and was quite admissible, on the fact that the appellant was not called to give evidence. Nor was it a direction that any specific named fact was one which fell within the section with the result that the onus of proving that fact was upon the appellant. It was a direction as to facts generally, and, therefore, it was particularly unfortunate that the relevant passage in the charge should have been expressed thus: "He has got to explain.....In the absence of explanation, the only inference is that he is guilty." Its tendency would be to lead the Jury to suppose that if anything was unexplained which they thought the appellant could explain, they not only might but must find him guilty. In a very difficult and quite exceptionally mysterious case the area of the unexplained was extensive, and how much the appellant himself could explain depended on where he was at material times, and indeed, on the very matter at issue in the trial, namely his guilt or innocence. Stephen Seneviratne v. The King.

In a trial by Jury, the Judge ought to tell the Jury that the evidence of witnesses taken under S. 164, Cr. P. C., must be accepted with a great deal of caution. He ought to point out that it is not always proper for the Police officer to get such statements recorded for the purpose of pinning the witnesses down to some statement, especially at a time when they are not entirely free from police influence. It is misdirection for the Judge to say that he sees no reasons to disbelieve a particular witness. He ought to leave the question of believing or disbelieving to the Jury. In placing a suggestion made by the Crown Prosecutor without any evidence to support it, before the Jury, the Judge ought to point out that there is no evidence to support the suggestion. *Kali Singh v. —————Misdirection—Death caused by injury with weapon—Omission to put case of grievous hurt before Jury—Penal Code, Ss. 301 (2), 320 (8).

Where death has been caused by a blow with a weapon, that does not necessarily suggest an intention to cause such bodily injury as would, in the ordinary course of nature, cause death, and it is presumed, in the accused's favour, that he had no knowledge that the injury was likely to cause death. The Jury should be directed that it is open to them to find the accused guilty of the lesser offence, namely, of causing grievous hurt under S. 320 (8), Penal Code, S. 304 (2) is not appropriate to a case where there was a deliberate intention to inflict bodily injury to the person whose death resulted from such injury. *Emperor v. His defence was that at 8-30 that same evening he was acquitted and released by the Sub-Magistrate of Tenkasi in another case and that, therefore, he could not possibly have been present at the scene of this dacoity. After arrest in the present case, he took this ground in a bail application before the same Sub-Magistrate, but the Sub-Magistrate disposed of the application without taking notice of this ground. The Sub-Magistrate, in his evidence, stated that the point was not brought to his notice, but the Sessions Judge told the Jury that the obvious answer to the defence argument was that, if the Magistrate accepted the statement as true, he would have granted the bail: Held, that this was a clear misdirection.

The right of private defence of property commences when reasonable apprehension of danger to the property commences, and if persons have begun to cut and carry away one's crop, it cannot be said that he is bound to go nine miles to fetch the Police. It was, therefore, misdirection on the part of the Judge to leave it to the Jury to say whether the fact that the Thana was only nine miles distant from the place of occurrence, did not take away the right of private defence. No rulings or authorities are even to be cited by the Judge to the Jury, nor are they to be asked to differentiate or form any opinion whatever on any authorities. ———Misdirection—Rioting—Common—Suggestion by Judge that real case might be between cases alleged by both sides—Statement by prosecution witness that accused had been bound down, whether admissible—Evidence of bad character—Evidence Act (I of 1872), S. 54.

In a case of rioting in which one common object was alleged throughout, the Judge suggested to the Jury that the case might not be precisely as the prosecution alleged, nor what the defence set up, but something between the two: Held, that there was no misdirection; that the Judge left it entirely open to the Jury as to whether they would accept his suggestion or not; and that the acceptance of it by the Jury would not destroy the case for the prosecution. In his charge to the Jury, it is not necessary for the Judge to go into the minutest details in the evidence. In a prosecution for riot, the statement by a prosecution witness that he had brought a case under S. 107, Cr. P. C., against some of the accused who had been bound down, is admissible, if introduced not for the purpose of proving the bad character of the accused, but as part of the res gestae the events which had transpired before, and which eventually led

There was absolutely no evidence on the record to show that the accused when he inflicted a stab wound had any intention other than the one which must normally be drawn in cases in which one man intentionally stabs another with sufficient force to penetrate the abdominal walls. In the charge to the Jury, the Judge stated: "if you find that A. P. (accused) was there and inflicted this stab wound, you ought to find him guilty of murder". The trial was impeached on the ground that this constituted misdirection as the question of what the intention of the accused was, was a matter of fact, and that should have been left to the Jury; and the direction to the Jury to find as a matter of law that if stab wound was inflicted by accused, they must find him guilty of murder, amounted to misdirection: Held, that the summing-up was correct and there was no misdirection. *Emperor v. In a charge to a Jury in a conspiracy case, it is very necessary not only that there should be a consideration of the conspiracy and a determination as to what was its nature and by what evidence it is proved, but unless it is quite clear that if there was a conspiracy, all the accused were members of it, there should be somewhere a separate statement and criticism of the proved actions of each of the members of the conspiracy. ———Communications with Juror pending trial, effect of.

It is undesirable that jurymen should have communications with strangers upon the subject of a pending trial, but the fact that the jurymen on his way to the Court house or to the waiting room is addressed by a stranger some remarks on the case to which he does not reply, cannot have the effect of invalidating the trial. The mere presence of a Police Officer near the Jury room during the jurymen's deliberations will not render the trial invalid, unless it is proved that the Police Officer spoke to the jurymen about the case or interfered in their deliberations. It is not desirable that a Policeman should be stationed anywhere or in any position in which he can hear the deliberations of the jurymen. There is nothing wrong in the Clerk of the Crown being sent to the jury-room during their deliberations to ascertain from the jurors if they require further assistance from Court, especially in complicated cases where verdict has to be given on a number of charges. A jurymen would be ill-advised to communicate, except to his fellow-jurymen, what happened in the jury-room and it will be dangerous for a Court to rely upon anything except the verdict of the Jury. In the matter of: Bonomally Gupta.

—————Duty of Judge.

A Judge should warn the Jury that the statement of an accused not amounting to confession cannot be considered against the co-accused. A Judge should not ridicule the defence at the very outset of the charge before the discussion of the evidence, for that may have a pernicious influence on the mind of the Jury and make them distrust the defence theory without giving sufficient consideration to it. A Judge may express his opinion in the charge to the Jury but at the same time he should be careful to add that it is for the Jury to form their opinion on the evidence. Misdirection itself is no ground for setting aside a trial. Topandas v. Emperor.

—————Duty of Judge—Charge—Practice of having long series of charges, defects of—Reference to reports, propriety of.

Where an accused person is put upon his trial, the charges against him should be so clear and so readily capable of explanation by the trial Judge that the Jury will have no difficulty in appreciating the law which they have to apply to the facts of the case before them. The practice of having a long series of charges and trying the accused on as many charges as could be devised is to be condemned. It is the duty of the Judge to tell the Jury how to apply the law to the facts found by them. He would be failing in the proper discharge of his duty if he merely places the proper facts before the Jury without telling them how they should decide the guilt or otherwise of the accused on the law. It is often useful to illustrate the meaning of a legal doctrine by relevant examples called from the books or stated by the learned Judge in his own words, but the practice of reading out headnotes or other portions of the report of a case not before them to the members of the Jury is a dangerous practice which is to be discouraged as more likely to mystify than enlighten the Jurors. Jabannallah v. Emperor.

—————Duty of Judge.

The Judge's duty is to determine whether any evidence has been given on which the Jury could properly find the question for the party on whom the onus of proof lies, for that is a question of law. It is not enough to say that there was some evidence. A scintilla of evidence would not justify the Judge in leaving the case to the Jury. There must be evidence on which they might reasonably and properly conclude the fact to be established. It is the duty of the Judge to keep the Jury within proper limits, and for this purpose, to simplify as far as he can, the issues fairly and properly before the Court and direct the minds of the Jurors to those issues and those issues alone. *Emperor v. In a trial by Jury it is the duty of the Sessions Judge in making his summing-up to take care that whatever he says to the Jury must be true as the latter are bound to believe him. He should also obtain from the Jury a decision on all the material points which go towards establishing a particular offence under the Penal Code. In an offence under S. 366-A, Penal Code, the Judge must put the question of girl's age to the Jury and where he omits to do so, he misdirects himself and the whole trial is vitiated. It is the duty of a Judge in his summing-up to repeat in some form the gist of Counsel's arguments and the alleged discrepancies in the case and not to deal with the case as though the discrepancies in the evidence were of no value and the arguments of Counsel might safely be ignored. *Nehru Mal v. JURY TRIAL ———Function of Jury.

It is for the Jury to say whether and how far the evidence is to be believed. And if the facts as to which evidence is given, are such that from them a further inference of fact may legitimately be drawn, it is for the Jury to say whether that inference is to be drawn or not. But it is for the Judge to determine, subject to review, as a matter of law, whether from those facts that further inference may legitimately be drawn. Emperor v. Upendra Nath Das. 16 Cr. L. The Jury are the only persons who can pronounce a definite opinion on the guilt or otherwise of the accused who are tried before them, and they cannot abdicate their functions in favour of the Judge. Where a Jury returned a verdict that they agreed with whatever opinion the Sessions Judge might form, and on being asked to give a proper verdict, came back within 9 minutes with another verdict and the Judge accepted the verdict remarking that he disagreed with it: Held, that it could not be held under the circumstances that the Jury had properly considered the case and brought in a genuine verdict, and that the case should be re-tried. *Abdul Barik v. But a conviction cannot be upset on this ground where the evidence of the approver is corroborated and the Judge explains to the Jury in his charge the nature of the corroboration and directs the Jury to arrive at their verdict after considering the evidence of the approver and the evidence of corroboration together. *Mani Ram v. Where the Jury who were 9 in number retired to consider their verdict and at 4 p.m., 5 of them came out and sat in Court and the remaining 4 came out at 4-30 p.m. and the Jury then gave the verdict: Held, that the verdict was not a legal verdict as the Jury had separated before they returned the verdict and the accused had thereby been deprived of the benefit of their joint consultation and consideration. If the jurymen are not able to come to a decision or agree upon a verdict before retiring, then the law requires that they should retire to consider their verdict, and it follows that they should all be in their retiring room together during the whole of the time between the moment of their retirement and the moment when their verdict is taken by the presiding Judge. The rule against separation of the Jury has a great deal of common sense in it and it should be strictly adhered to. Kaseruddin Mahaldar v. Emperor.

———Misdirection.

A Judge should not, in his charge to the Jury, express his opinions in terms too dogmatic and unqualified and state his own view on important matters of fact so positively as to leave the Jury no loophole for taking any other view; his doing so vitiates the verdict of the Jury. A charge to the Jury must be read as a whole, and if upon the general view taken, the case has been fairly left within the Jury's province, there is no misdirection. It is not to be expected that the Judge should comment on every point that could possibly be urged in favour of the accused. It is sufficient if he deals with the more important points and does not unduly press on the Jury his own view on questions of fact. Where the summing-up is calculated to leave a misleading impression on the mind of the Jury, it amounts to a misdirection. A Judge in his charge to the Jury must not make an appeal or exhortation to the Jury. When the High Court finds that there is a misdirection such as to vitiate the verdict of the Jury, it has the power either to direct a re-trial of the accused or enter into the merits of the case and dispose of it. It is permissible for a Judge and indeed (especially in India) it is often necessary for a Judge to express his opinion extremely clearly to the Jury. It is also permissible though not always or indeed often advisable to admonish the Jury as to their duty. But it is unfair to the Jury if the Judge says to them: "I am thoroughly convinced of the guilt of the accused, return a just verdict. If you do not, both you and I will be disgraced for ever." Topandas v. Emperor. 25 Cr. L. J. 761 : 81 I. C. 249 : A. I. R. 1925 Sind 116.

———Misdirection—Advice to ignore certain witnesses—Dogmatic opinion, expression of—Summing-up—Judge, duty of.

An advice given to the Jury to ignore the evidence of certain witnesses for the prosecution, is not a proper direction to the Jury. The duty of the Judge in summing-up is to place the entire evidence, for or against the accused, before the Jury and leave the ultimate decision of questions of fact to it. He is not debarred from expressing his own opinion on the evidence; but it should be done in such a way as not to create any impression in the mind of the Jury that it was a direction from the Judge which they should follow; and such opinion should not be expressed strongly and dogmatically. Where there are no eye-witnesses and no sufficient evidence of motive, it is proper to leave the whole case to the Jury. Naiballa (Nayab-ullah) Sheikh v. Emperor. 27 Cr. L. J. 1038 : 96 I. ———Misdirection—Charge to Jury.

Where the accused was found in possession of stolen property three weeks after the theft : Held, that the proper presumption was not that he committed the theft, but that he received the property knowing or having reason to believe it to be stolen. Where a Sessions Judge directed the Jury, in a case, where the accused was found in possession of stolen property, that the presumption was more in favour of the possessor being the thief than the receiver unless there was evidence to the contrary and that no presumption as to the latter should be made unless, besides the discovery of the stolen property, there was something to show that the accused received it knowing it to be stolen : Held, that there was misdirection. In re : Gorle Kandungadu. 13 Cr. ———Misdirection—Direction by Judge that retracted confession of no value, whether desirable—Whether Judge to comment on every point that could possibly be argued in favour of accused.

A Judge is unnecessarily favourable to an accused when he tells the Jury that the value of a retracted confession is almost nil even against the maker of it. A Judge is not expected in his charge to the Jury to comment on every point that could be possibly argued in favour of accused. It is sufficient if he deals with more important points and does not unduly press on the Jury his own views on questions of fact. In deciding whether there had been misdirection on the facts, the charge to the Jury must be considered as a whole. Abdul Salim v. Emperor. 23 Cr. L. J. 657 : 69 I. C. 145 : 35 C. L. J. 279 : 26 C. ———Misdirection—Judge's charge to Jury—Judge, duty of, in stating law—Judge giving his own opinion.

Where in a trial by Jury the Judge wishes to inform the Jury as to what are the terms of a particular provision of the law, it is necessary for him to read the actual words of the section containing that provision to the Jury, and, if necessary, to explain what is meant by the section; if instead of doing this, the Judge gives his own opinion of the meaning of the section, that would amount to a misdirection. Emperor v. Durga Charan Bepari. 23 Cr. L. J. 567 (b) : 68 I. C. 407 : 36 C. L. J. 171 : 26 C. W. N. 1002 : A. I. R. 1922 Cal. 124.

———Misdirection—Penal Code, Ss. 392, 404—Robbery, gist of—Madras Criminal Rules of Practice, r. 238—Offence of robbery and murder—Joint trial, legality of.

Under r. 238, Madras Criminal Rules of Practice, in a trial on charges of robbery and murder, the charges should be tried separately. It is irregular for a Sessions Judge to try both charges together, the first with a Jury and the second with jurors sitting as assessors. Where the jewellery of a deceased child was discovered in the possession of an accused charged with robbery and murder and the Judge told the Jury that if it had been removed from her person after her death, the offence committed was one under S. 404, Penal Code : Held, that that was not a proper direction, inasmuch as the question for consideration was whether the murder had been committed for the purpose of stealing the jewels, and if it had been committed for that purpose, the offence was one under S. 302, Penal Code. In re : Muniyan. 27 Cr. L. J. 1368 : 98 I. C. 488 : A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 243.

———Misdirection—Procedure.

Where grave and sudden provocation was no part of the defence case in the Sessions Court nor is any direct evidence given at the trial of such grave and sudden provocation or of facts from which this exception can be legitimately inferred, the trial Judge is quite justified in excluding inquiry into the exception. In fact, it would be an error on his part to lay down law as to a matter which is not legally and properly before the Jury. Where a trial for culpable homicide is proceeding before a Jury, it is not an appropriate mode of laying down the law to discourse on all branches and departments of this complicated topic of crime. To do so is calculated to confuse the Jury and possibly to direct their deliberations into channels that have nothing to do with the case. The duty of the Judge is to lay down the law in reference to the case presented to the Court and the facts of the case, and not to perplex the minds of the Jury with considerations that are outside the legitimate scope of the inquiry. *Emperor v. To justify the reversal of a unanimous verdict of a Jury on the ground that the Judge in his charge misdirected the Jury, it must be shown that the verdict has occasioned a failure of justice, that the verdict was due to the misdirection, and that, apart from this, the Jury would not have come to the same conclusion. *Superintendent and Remembrancer, Legal Affairs, Bengal v. A unanimous verdict of a Jury is bound to be accepted by the Judge and under S. 305, Cr. P. In a Jury trial, the Court cannot lightly interfere with or set aside the verdict of the Jury unless it is satisfied that there has been such misdirection as, in its opinion, has occasioned a failure of justice. *Ayub Mandal v. The verdict of the Jury cannot be set aside on the mere ground that there has been a miscarriage of justice. To entitle the Court to interfere with such a verdict, it must further be established that the failure of justice was the result of a misdirection of the Judge in his charge to the Jury. A non-direction is not a misdirection unless the Jury has been misled or unless the non-direction is of primary importance. A charge must be such as to enable the Jury to grasp the points for decision. A charge should set out the case against each of the accused separately. Champa Pasin v. Emperor.

A man is not entitled to get off with a small sentence merely because he is a person of high position and one who has done good service for the Government in the past. An accused is, however, entitled to some sympathy on account of his previous blameless character, and on account of the fact that in a case of embezzlement, he has made good the whole of the defalcations. The fact that a person of high position, undergoes in the loss of his reputation and of his position, a much greater punishment than would be represented by rigorous imprisonment to a common man must also be considered. *Qabul Ahmad v. ———Murder—Wife unfaithful—Murder, deliberate premeditation.

The mere fact that a woman has been unfaithful to her husband is not in itself sufficient ground for substitution of the lesser sentence where there has been deliberate premeditation. Fazal Karim v. Emperor.

A. I. R. 1936 Lah. 580.

———Murder, mitigating circumstances.

In a murder case, the mere youth of the accused without any other extenuating circumstance is not a sufficient ground for not imposing the capital sentence. The bare fact that a brutal murder has been committed without any apparent motive is no ground for assuming that there has been some provoking cause which would amount to a mitigating circumstance. *Gehnu v. tion and to the conviction of the principal criminal. She had already served a considerable sentence and had also suffered by reason of the birth of her child in jail: Held, that the situation of a girl whose mother and husband were determined on murder, was not an enviable one and that though her sentence of transportation for life on the charge of murder could not be reduced, there could not be a stronger case for prerogative of mercy. Aziz Begum v. Emperor. 39 Cr. L. J. 16 : 171 I. C. 954 : 39 P. L. R. 394 : 10 R. L. 254 : A. I. R. 1937 Lah. 689.

—Murder case—Extent.

Where two persons are convicted under S. 302, Penal Code, for the murder of two men, the reasoning that five persons should not be sentenced to death for the murder of two, is not in accordance with law and cannot be sustained. *Kuar Kocri v. —Nature of—Punishment—Deterrent.

Combination of people to flout lawful authority—Punishment must be deterrent. Ahmad Usman v. Emperor. 35 Cr. L. J. 830 : 148 I. C. 982 : 28 S. L. R. 73 : 6 R. S. 212 : A. I. R. 1934 Sind 34.

—Nature of.

Sentence—Person trying to overawe witness of other side—Witness refusing—Assault on such witness—Case held serious and not fit for mere admonition. Hira Kurmi v. Emperor. 37 Cr. L. J. 502 : 161 I. C. 932 : 2 B. R. 392 : 17 P. L. T. 327 : 8 R. P. 493 : A. I. R. 1936 Pat. 175.

—Nature of.

Where the accused have had superior education and belong to superior social status, a sentence of imprisonment will be irksome and deterrent in their cases than in the cases of hardened criminals who actually carried out the dacoity. Maung Tha Ka Do v. Emperor. 37 Cr. L. J. 280 : 160 I. C. 292 : 8 R. Rang. 363 : A. I. R. 1935 Rang. 491.

SENTENCE

—Object of.

Every sentence must be as heavy as is necessary to deter others from doing it from fear of sharing the same fate and no heavier. Emperor v. Daulat Singh. 30 Cr. L. J. 220 : 113 I. C. 911 : 11 N. L. J. 245 : A. I. R. 1928 Nag. 343.

—Offence of petty theft.

S. a young man of 25, with no previous convictions against him, was convicted of theft of 8 annas worth green wheat and sentenced to one year's rigorous imprisonment: Held, that such a case was obviously one for whipping. Sentence reduced to 4 months. Sangar Singh v. Emperor. 4 Cr. L. J. 362 : 1 P. W. R. Cr. 16 : 7 P. L. R. 465.

—Offence punishable under two provisions.

Where a person is found guilty of a criminal act which is punishable under two different sections of Penal Code, he may be convicted under both the sections, but should be punished only under that section which imposes the higher penalty. Emperor v. Lajji Mandan. 41 Cr. L. J. 183 : 185 I. C. 413 (2) : 41 Bom. L. R. 980 : 12 R. B. 253 : A. I. R. 1939 Bom. 452.

—Period of trial cannot be included in period of sentence.

A Magistrate in awarding a sentence has no jurisdiction to direct that any portion of the period during which the accused has been detained in custody as an under-trial prisoner should count as part of the sentence. Dangar Khan v. Emperor. 23 Cr. L. J. 593 : 68 I. C. 817 : A. I. R. 1923 Lah. 104.

—Policeman committing burglary.

Where a Policeman committed burglary and was sentenced to five years' rigorous imprisonment: Held, that the sentence was not by any means excessive. Sardara v. Emperor. 31 Cr. L. J. 877 : 125 I. C. 639 : A. I. R. 1930 Lah. 667.

—Political offences.

In the case of political offences, arising out of the beliefs of the accused, severe sentences defeat their object. In practice, such sentences confirm the offenders in their beliefs and create other offenders, thus increasing the evil and the danger to the public. Jhabwala v. Emperor. 34 Cr. L. J. 967 : 145 I. C. 481 : 1933 A. L. J. 799 : 6 R. A. 65 : A. I. R. 1933 All. 690.

—Previous character of accused—Relevancy.

The previous character may be taken into account in awarding sentence. Khuda Bakhsh v. Emperor. 38 Cr. L. J. 24 : 165 I. C. 909 : 17 Lah. 284 : 38 P. L. R. 630 : 9 R. L. 321 : A. I. R. 1936 Lah. 914.

—Previous conviction, effect of.

Where there has been previous conviction, short sentences are to be deprecated. Govinda v. Emperor. 38 Cr. L. J. 423 : 167 I. C. 521 : 9 R. N. 193 : I. L. R. 1937 Nag. 181 : A. I. R. 1936 Nag. 245.

—Principles governing apportionment.

When the Legislature has laid down a maximum punishment for an offence or a series of offences, it is the duty of the trial Court to apportion punishment in each case after considering all the circumstances having a bearing upon it, and not to shirk its responsibility by imposing the maximum penalty upon every offender. Kher Singh v. Emperor. 30 Cr. L. J. 15 : 112 I. C. 783 : I. R. 1929 Lah. 85 : 10 Lah. 524 : 30 P. L. R. 638 : A. I. R. 1929 Lah. 29.

—Prolonged proceedings, consideration of.

However guilty an accused person may be, it is most undesirable that he should be subjected to the strain and anxiety of prolonged proceedings unless it is absolutely unavoidable, and such delay may be legitimately taken into consideration in passing the sentence. Billinghurst v. Emperor.

25 Cr. L. J. 1313 : 82 I. C. 545 : 27 C. W. N. 821 : A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 18.

—Provocation, effect of.

A severe sentence is not called for where an offence has been committed on a considerable provocation caused by an unjustifiable act. Emperor v. Sada.

11 Cr. L. J. 99 : 4 I. C. 980 : 14 P. W. R. 1909 Cr.

—Punishment, necessity of.

There is no law that says a penalty must always follow a conviction. The maximum penalty for each breach of the law is fixed by it but there is no minimum except in a very few special cases. Sitaram Kunbi v. Emperor.

147 I. C. 698 (1) : 10 O. W. N. 1349 : 1934 O. L. R. 148 : 6 R. O. 293 : A. I. R. 1934 Oudh 18.

—Reduction.

Accused, old man of 73, and co-accused young man of 20—Doubt as to who struck blow—Sudden fight—Sentence should be reduced. Mohammad Nabi Khan v. Emperor. 35 Cr. L. J. 943 : 149 I. C. 343 : 11 O. W. N. 698 : 6 R. O. 551 : A. I. R. 1934 Oudh 251.

—Reduction—Considerations.

In passing sentence, the Court should consider the period which the accused have already spent in Jail in the course of the proceedings and in the case of a lengthy trial, the sentences passed on the accused should be reduced on that account. S. H. Jhabwala v. Emperor. 34 Cr. L. J. 967 : 145 I. C. 481 : 6 R. A. 65 : 1933 A. L. J. 799 : A. I. R. 1933 All. 690.

—Reduction.

In view of the fact that the accused also was injured and of the possibility that he merely exceeded the right of private defence, his sentence was reduced. Mala Singh v. Emperor.

5 L. L. J. 121 : A. I. R. 1924 Lah. 61.

—Reduction.

The accused were convicted of having trespassed into the haveli of the complainant and beaten him causing severe injuries, and then having carried him to a house of one of the accused, where they charged him of having entered the house to commit theft. The accused were sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for eight months, including one month's solitary confinement. The Sessions Judge in appeal believed the version of the accused and disbelieved all the witnesses for the prosecution, but maintained the sentence : Held, that the sentence originally imposed should not have been maintained. *Ganda Singh v. —Reduction of.

Motor lorry driver not participating in crime of abduction at initial stages but circumstances compelling him to continue: Held, sentence could be reduced. Mahammad Shafi v. Emperor. 37 Cr. L. J. 430 : 161 I. C. 313 : 38 P. L. R. 323 : 8 R. L. 718 : A. I. R. 1936 Lah. 15.

—Reduction of.

Rash and negligent driving—Accident—Accused repentant—Speed of car not more than 25 miles—Severe sentence is not called for. Ganga Bux v. Emperor. 147 I. C. 698 (1) : 10 O. W. N. 1349 : 6 R. O. 293 : A. I. R. 1934 Oudh 18.

—Reduction of.

Where the injuries inflicted are of a minor nature and are detected only after four or five days, a sentence of six months and three months on the accused is too severe. Altaf Hussain Shah v. Emperor. 35 Cr. L. J. 605 (1) : 147 I. C. 1226 (1) : 34 P. L. R. 68 : 6 R. L. 491 (1) : A. I. R. 1933 Lah. 311 (1).

—Reduction—Previous conviction.

The accused, on conviction of an offence under S. 457, Penal Code, was sentenced to transportation for life. The Sessions Judge, who convicted the accused, took into consideration against him his two previous convictions and a statement made by him as informer in another case wherein he had admitted having committed a long series of thefts and burglaries and that he belonged to a gang of dacoits. The Chief Court on appeal, reduced the sentence to one of seven years' transportation. Imam Din v. Emperor. 2 Cr. L. J. 206 : 6 P. L. R. 90.

—Reduction.

Where the evidence is not clear as to what part they actually took in the riot, the High Court will be justified in recommending that the local Government might consider the question of reducing the sentence of transportation for life imposed on them. Ramhit v. Emperor. 35 Cr. L. J. 919 : 149 I. C. 210 : 4 A. W. R. 191 : 6 R. A. 872 : A. I. R. 1934 All. 776.

—Respectable accused.

The law is not a respecter of persons, and a respectable person as such, must not escape with a lesser sentence. Jehangir Ardeshir Cama v. Emperor. 28 Cr. L. J. 1012 : 106 I. C. 100 : 29 Bom. L. R. 996 : A. I. R. 1927 Bom. 501.

—Revision.

Unless there is something that is manifestly wrong with the sentence, unless it is clearly out of proportion to the offence, if it is within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate and he has exercised his discretion, no interference in revision should take place. Sheikh Gulzar v. Emperor. 35 Cr. L. J. 1327 : 151 I. C. 361 : 13 Pat. 63 : 15 P. L. T. 196 : 7 R. P. 82 : A. I. R. 1934 Pat. 214.

—Robbery for political purposes.

The gravity of a robbery is not extenuated by the fact that it was committed not for the personal gain of the robbers but solely in order to obtain funds for the furtherance of a political cause. Ram Prasad v. Emperor. 29 Cr. L. J. 129 : 106 I. C. 721 : 1 Luck. Cas. 339 : 2 Luck. 631 : A. I. R. 1927 Oudh 369.

—Sentence.

Sentence of detention in Borstal School and whipping for separate offences is legal. Nga Ohn Shwe v. Emperor. 35 Cr. L. J. 959 : 149 I. C. 107 : 12 Rang. 344 : 6 R. Rang. 286 : A. I. R. 1934 Rang. 125.

—Sentence of fine.

Where fines were imposed on the accused and it was contended that the accused being unable to pay the fines, would have to stay in jail for a long period but it was found that the fine was imposed because it was represented to the Judge that a friend might pay it: Held, that the fines were rightly imposed. Rattan Lal v. Emperor. 38 Cr. L. J. 51 : 165 I. C. 544 : 9 R. L. 265.

—Sentence of solitary confinement.

Where a person is convicted of separate offences, separate sentences of solitary confinement are not illegal, but as a matter of practice, a sentence of more than 3 months' solitary confinement should not be passed at one trial. Dangar Khan v. Emperor. 23 Cr. L. J. 593 : 68 I. C. 817 : A. I. R. 1923 Lah. 104.

—Sentence under Penal Code, meaning of.

A sentence imposed upon a person for an offence punishable under the Penal Code, is a sentence under the Cr. P. C., for an offence rendered punishable by the Penal Code. Akbar v. Emperor. 35 Cr. L. J. 399 : 147 I. C. 180 : 6 R. Pesh. 26 : A. I. R. 1933 Pesh. 90.

—Separate sentences.

The offence of conspiracy is a separate offence from the offence of participation in a particular dacoity or the dishonest reception of property stolen in a dacoity knowing it to be stolen. Separate sentences can be awarded to run consecutively for participation in separate dacoities and to these can also be added a consecutive sentence of participation in conspiracy. Hazari Beria v. Emperor. 30 Cr. L. J. 473 : 115 I. C. 276 : 5 O. W. N. 985 : I. R. 1929 Oudh 228 : A. I. R. 1928 Oudh 507.

Separate sentences passed upon persons for the offences of rioting and hurt are not legal where it is found that such persons individually did not cause hurt, but were guilty of that offence under S. 149, Penal Code. But where each of the accused took an individual part in the assault, separate sentences under Ss. 147 and 323, Penal Code, would be legal. Harbans Pandey v. Emperor.

14 Cr. L. J. 66 :
18 I. C. 402 : 40 Cal. 511.

———Separate sentences.

Separate punishments can be awarded if the offences committed are two separate and distinct dacoities. Nga Po Nyein v. Emperor.

———Severe punishment, when necessary.

One element in awarding sentences is the element of vengeance; the natural resentment of the aggrieved persons must be satisfied lest they take the law into their own hands. In a case where this element does not arise, a severe punishment is not necessary. Harnam Singh v. Emperor.

———Tender age of accused—Mitigation.

While sentencing the accused the Magistrate remarked: "the accused persons are young boys of tender ages. They have committed the offence in the heat of their youth and dashing courage unmindful of consequences. This weighs much before me. A light fine will meet the ends of justice." One of the accused was a young man of 25: Held, that to call a man of 25 years a boy of tender age is inaccurate. The remarks of the Magistrate were ———Sentence of death.

Judges must not shrink from the duty, however painful it may be, of passing sentence of death in capital cases, when the offence is proved beyond reasonable doubt, and is of such a nature as to deserve the extreme penalty. Emperor v. Nga Tun

SEPARATE CONVICTIONS

It is illegal to pass separate sentences for the offences of rioting and grievous hurt upon persons who are not proved to have individually committed any act which amounts to voluntarily causing hurt. Sahadev Ahir v. Emperor. 1 Cr. L. J. 199 : 8 C. W. N. 344.

SESSIONS CASE

———Adjournment.

Intention of the Cr. P. C., is that Sessions trial should proceed and be dealt with continuously from its inception to its finish. Adjournments should be granted only on the strongest possible ground and for the shortest possible period. Badri Prasad v. Emperor. 13 Cr. L. J. 861 : 17 I. C. 797 : 10 A. L. J. 473 : 35 All. 63.

———Power of Committing Magistrate.

A Magistrate should not treat a grave offence beyond his jurisdiction as a less grave offence in order to bring it within his jurisdiction, and he should not ordinarily go into the defence evidence in a case triable exclusively by the Court of Session in which a prima facie case for committal has been made out by the prosecution. *Jamal Mahomed v. SESSIONS TRIAL

———De novo trial—Change of Judge—Evidence recorded by one Judge and orders passed by another—Validity—Difference of Judge and Assessors—Retrial.

A Sessions Judge cannot act on evidence recorded by his predecessor in office. On a change of the Judge, a Sessions trial must commence de novo. The judgment on evidence partly recorded by his predecessor in office is illegal. Where a trial has been invalidated on legal grounds and the real question in the case has not been legally tried, a retrial ought to be held, unless it appears from the record that there is no evidence against the prisoner or that there is very little chance of a conviction. Mere disagreement between Judge and assessors is no sufficient reason for refusing a retrial. Durga Charan Sanyal v. Emperor. 8 Cr. L. J. 121 : 8 C. L. J. 59 : 4 M. L. T. 148.

———De novo trial.

In a Sessions trial, after the conclusion of the evidence and after the conclusion of the address of the Public Prosecutor and before the defence had been heard in full and before the Sessions Judge had summed up the case to the Jury, one of the Jurors, in a room occupied by the clerks of Pleaders, in answer to some questions put to him, made a fairly distinct intimation that he had formed the opinion that the accused was guilty of the charge against him: Held, that there should be a fresh trial ———Same transaction—Concerted action by accused—Acts forming part of same transaction—Misjoinder of charges.

Where a number of accused persons are charged with having associated themselves to commit an offence and having done acts forming part of the same transaction, it is not necessary, in order to sustain the charge, to prove that all of them acted together from start to finish in order to make their acts parts of one single transaction. It is enough to show that as each batch of them joined the principal accused they adopted his intention. Madasamy Chetty v. Emperor. 12 Cr. L. J. 268 :

The mixture of the funds of another with one's own fund may be in many cases natural and proper and in another case convenient but irregular and in the third both irregular and criminal. ———Existence of necessity.

The justification for the acts of the military lies not merely in their bona fides but in the existence of necessity, i. e., in the proof of such a state of war, insurrection or armed resistance as to justify the cessation of the ordinary law and its replacement by military force, pure and simple. ———S. 9-A—Rules of Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court, Ch. I, S. 2, (2)—Judicial Commissioner sitting as Sessions Judge, whether can quash commitment—Single Judge, whether can deal with application.

The Judicial Commissioner when sitting in the Sessions Division is not divested of his dual capacity as a High Court Judge, and he has full power to make an order under S. 215, Cr. P. C., even when sitting as a Sessions Judge. Clause (2) of S. 2 of Chapter I of the Rules of the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind, which provides that every application for quashing a commitment under S. 215 of the Cr. P. A Pleader by virtue of his sanad has certain rights and privileges, but he is not a chartered libertine and those rights and privileges carry with them corresponding duties and restraints. A Pleader is an officer of the Court and is bound to assist the Court in the administration of justice. Criticism which is permissible to a private individual is not permissible to a Pleader. The co-operation of Pleader and Judge would be impossible if the Pleader were attacking the Judge in the public press. Nor would it be possible for the business of the Court to be conducted with dignity, decorum and impartiality when the Pleader is posing in public as the chastiser of the Judge. Such conduct is not only a breach of the Pleader's duty to the Court but must also result in an actual obstruction to the administration of justice. Mr. M. Pleader, Re : Enquiry against.

———S. 16—Duty of Pleader.

A legal practitioner has the right to entertain political opinions, but that should be in conformity with the position he has obtained by virtue of the licence granted to him. One cardinal principle a practising Pleader wishing to remain on the roll has to remember is, that those who live by the law should keep the law and not encourage others in its breach by publicly extolling and glorifying persons sentenced and by showing hearty sympathy towards a seditious and disloyal movement. *In re : Hurbuz v. The jurisdiction of the Judicial Commissioner under S. 16, Sind Courts Act, extends not only to professional misbehaviour but to general misbehaviour, but while this jurisdiction is unlimited, the Court is reluctant to take cognizance of misconduct not connected with the office of Pleader unless it is morally disgraceful or shows that the individual is not a proper person to hold that office. *Mr. M. ———S. 16—Misbehaviour—Inquiry under, nature of—Disciplinary action against Pleader—When to be taken.

The inquiry contemplated by S. 16, Sind Courts Act, is of a quasi-criminal character and strong proof is necessary for action. But the proposition to be proved is not that the inculpated Pleader has brought himself within one of the sections of the Penal Code. What is to be proved is that he has been guilty of some such misbehaviour as would justify the High Court in removing or suspending him from practice. A notice was issued to a Pleader to show cause why action should not be taken against him under S. 16, Sind Courts Act. It was admitted (1) that the Pleader drew out moneys belonging to his client; (2) that he paid the cheque to his own credit in his own bank; (8) that he did not enter those moneys in his client's account; (4) that he was not able to refund those moneys when called upon, and that he had not refunded them in full even at the time of hearing of the case: Held, that the Pleader was guilty of such misbehaviour as to justify the court in taking action under S. 16, Sind Courts Act. *In re: G. ———S. 16—Misconduct.

Misconduct must be made out by the admission of the party concerned or on evidence to the satisfaction of the Court. Where there is a positive sworn denial and repudiation of misconduct by the attorney coupled with an explanation which was not demonstrably false, even a strong case of suspicion would not justify disciplinary action against the attorney on a summary proceeding. *Re: Enquiry against Mr. L. ———S. 16—Pleader, if can be put on oath during inquiry against him.

It is extremely undesirable that a Pleader should be compelled to answer questions on oath in an inquiry against him and then be prosecuted for perjury, for giving false answer to such questions. There is no reason, however, why a Pleader who voluntarily and deliberately commits perjury for the purpose of avoiding punishment in disciplinary proceedings, should not likewise be dealt with. A broad distinction has to be drawn between acts done by a Pleader in his professional capacity or in the presence of the Court, and acts not done in such capacity and not in the presence of the Court. *Re: Enquiry against Mr. L. The rules framed by Immovable property does not describe or name itself or itself proclaim the identity of its owner, and where, a certain share in the lands is shown as the property of the zamindar in the Record of Rights published by the Manager under S. 12 of the Act in the Sind Official Gazette, the manager can rely upon the presumption raised by S. 135-J, Land Revenue Code, and the share can be held to be property of which he is in management under S. 10 in spite of a third person disputing the title of the zamindar to that share. *Sher Khan Dhani Baksh v. KATHIAWAR POLICE LAWS

—S. 35—Scope of—Corresponding to S. 44 of Bombay District Police Act.

A District Magistrate having ordered, owing to the existence of a dispute creating a likelihood of a breach of the peace, that in future all music in processions or of any sort on the road should be stopped within 15 paces of a certain masjid on either side at any time of the day or night, some Hindus applied for revision stating that S. 35, Kathiwar Police Law, did not contemplate such a permanent order: Held, that the terms of the section justified the order, because if they referred only to a particular settled festival (such as the Holi) then no order could be passed under that section in respect of any future procession of uncertain date and the very mischief which the section was intended to prevent would be permissible by a little ingenuity of the mischief-makers. *Thakore Jagdishji Joraji v. —Kidnapping and concealing minor girl (under 16) of low caste to marry her in high caste—Penal Code, Ss. 366, 368, 373.

Where an accused kidnapped a married minor Koli girl of about 15 years of age, in order to marry her to a Soni, and was arrested while he had concealed her in his house before she was to be taken away for that purpose: Held, that if the girl was already married in her own caste, the intercourse intended was undoubtedly most illicit; that the word "seduce" in S. 366, I. P. C., properly meant, not merely to procure a first surrender of chastity, but rather to draw aside from the path of rectitude and duty in any manner, to entice to evil, to lead astray, to tempt and to lead to iniquity: Held, further, that the language of S. 373, I. P. C., did not necessarily imply or demand the intervention of a third person; that, though buying or importing a minor girl for marriage would not necessarily come under S. 373, I. P. C., yet here, as the accused knew that the girl was already married, it was undoubtedly immoral to marry her again for his own profit; that there was a breach of Hindu Law and an attempt to procure bigamy and surely the ultimate necessity of cheating by personation or cheating to obtain a personal advantage; that the accused was guilty both under S. 366 read with S. 368, and under S. 373, I. P. C., but that, as the offences formed part of one transaction, a single sentence should be passed. Emperor v. Mauji Govind.

Where ill-feeling between the accused and the murdered person was proved, and the accused were seen among the assailants attacking him and his watchman with sticks at night in his field, owing to moonlight by the watchman who was attacked by one and grappled with the other: Held, that (1) as they were at close quarters and as he knew them well, it was perfectly natural and credible that he was able to identify them; (2) but that, as probably an ordinary bamboo stick, which would be metal shod, was the weapon employed in each case, there was probably no such knowledge or intention as would substantiate a conviction for murder; and that they should be convicted under S. 304, Part II in respect of the deceased, and under S. 385, I. The defendants started proceedings under S. 147, Cr. P. C., their case being that they had a right of way over the lands in suit and the plaintiffs were attempting to obstruct the pathway. At the date when this proceeding was started, there were no obstructions, but during the pendency of the proceedings, the plaintiffs fenced the lands. The proceedings under S. 147 terminated in favour of the defendants. The order was in terms of S. 147 (2), that is, the plaintiffs were prohibited from interfering with exercise of the right of the defendants to use the land as a pathway. The defendants removed the fencing and began to exercise their right of way. On January 9, 1938, a suit under S. 9, Specific Relief Act, was filed: Held, that the plaintiffs' suit under S. 9, Specific Relief Act, was not entertainable and that the act of the defendants in passing over the lands did not amount to dispossession within the meaning of that section. The plaintiffs had misconceived their remedy and if they felt aggrieved by the order passed by the Magistrate under S. 147 (2), Cr. P. C., their relief lay in instituting a regular suit. Jogendra Ohandra Das v. Birendra Lal Das.

M and S executed a sale-deed conveying certain property to R. The consideration for the sale was Rs. 20,000 of which only Rs. 1,000 was paid down in cash, the covenant for the remainder being that R should keep the sum of Rs. 19,000 in deposit to the credit of the vendors, the latter to draw upon it at their convenience. Before anything more was paid, R re-conveyed the same property to M, the sale-deed purporting to be simply for a consideration of Rs. 1,000 paid down in cash: Held, that R committed an offence punishable under S. 64 (a). *Remeshar Das v. In the absence of any specific provision of law giving finality to the acts of the executive authorities, the initial presumption is that a Court of law will have jurisdiction to enquire whether the conditions imposed by law for the exercise of their powers have been fulfilled if it becomes necessary to do so in order to determine any question properly coming before it for decision, and where the language used by the Legislature is ambiguous, the construction giving jurisdiction to Court must be preferred as it is beneficial to the subject. *Des Raj v. Construction of.

The proper course is to examine the language of the Statute and to ask what is its natural meaning uninfluenced by any considerations derived from the previous state of the law, and not to start with enquiring how the law previously stood, and then assuming that it was probably intended to leave it unaltered, to see if the words of the enactment will bear an interpretation in conformity with this view. The purpose of a Statute surely is that, on any point specifically dealt with by it, the law should be ascertained by interpreting the language used instead of, as before, roaming over a vast number of authorities in order to discover what the law was, extracting it by a minute critical examination of the prior decisions. *Ram Sagar Mondal v. —Interpretation of—Jurisdiction of Superior Court, ousting of.

It is a cardinal principle of interpretation of Statutes that the construction which produces the greatest harmony and the least inconsistency between different parts of the same Statute should prevail, and this rule equally applies where the Court is called upon to examine if the general words "employed in any one part of the Statute were not intended to be applied without some limitation." The fact standing alone that there is a civil suit would not, in all cases, be a sound reason for staying the criminal proceedings, yet where the document in question is a necessary part of the case of the defendant and the question whether it is genuine will be a principal issue in the suit, it is desirable that the criminal proceedings should be stayed. *Sasi Bhusan Seal v. ———S. 7 (b)—Rules under—Scope of.

R. 14 of U. P. Sugarcane Rules, 1934, deals with two matters, namely (1) the cognizance of a complaint by a Court, and (2) the making of a complaint made by a District Magistrate. The word ‘shall’ in Part 2 of the rule deals with the second matter and is only for the guidance of the District Magistrates. As soon as a complaint is made by a District Magistrate, it would be presumed that he has satisfied himself that there was a general complaint of non-payment within the prescribed time. Unless a District Magistrate is so satisfied, he would never make a complaint. Zahid Husain v. Emperor.

———S. 7 (3)—Breach of rules under—Offence.

In Ss. 64 to 67, Penal Code, the word ‘offence’ is used in the meaning given in Cl. 2, S. 40, Penal Code. The definitions are in Ss. 41 and 42, a ‘special law’ being a law applicable to a particular subject and a ‘local law’ being a law applicable only to a particular part of British India. Thus an offence under a local or special law (e. g., under rules made under Sugarcane Act) is an offence for the purpose of Ss. 64 to 67. Sakaldeo Singh v. Emperor.

—S. 8—Duty of Magistrate.

Although it is not incumbent upon a Magistrate to frame a charge against an accused in a case which is being tried as a summons case, yet it would be proper if the Magistrate actually frames a charge or summarises the ingredients of the offence (and read them over to the accused, before the trial begins) which the accused are required to meet in the case under the Sugar Excise Duty Act of 1934. In order to see whether the persons accused under S. 8 evaded payment of duty, it is necessary to consider the provisions under which the duty payable by the owner of a factory is assessed. *Behari Ram v. SUMMARY TRIAL —Duty of Magistrate—Notes of evidence.

Although the object of summary procedure is to shorten the course of a trial, it is nevertheless incumbent on a Magistrate to put on record sufficient evidence to justify his order. The notes of evidence should form part of the record and their destruction renders a conviction improper. Atma Ram v. Emperor.

Where, in a summary trial, the Magistrate makes short notes of the evidence of the witnesses heard by him in the course of the trial, such notes form part of the record and the Magistrate is bound to keep them on the record and not destroy them. The accused was prosecuted for an offence under S. 9, Opium Act, punishable with one year's rigorous imprisonment. The Additional Township Magistrate tried the case in a summary manner and imposed a sentence for four months' rigorous imprisonment. The District Magistrate having declared the trial void, the Magistrate retried the case in the regular manner and imposed the same punishment: Held, that both the trials were void ab initio. The summary trial was ultra vires, as the offence being punishable with one year's rigorous imprisonment, the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try the case summarily. The regular trial was ultra vires, as the former proceedings not having been quashed by the High Court, the accused could not be tried over again. Emperor v. Nga Sit Cho.

SUPPRESSION OF IMMORAL TRAFFIC ACT

———Method of recording evidence—Record must show ingredients of offence charged—S. 355, Cr. P. C., not applicable.

The Magistrate's record in summary trials, however, brief, must show the necessary ingredients of the offence charged. It is not necessary for a record of evidence to be made in summary trials even where an appeal lies, but S. 264 provides that the substance of the evidence must be embodied in a judgment as well as the particulars in S. 263. S. 355 merely prescribes a briefer record in summons cases and other cases which may be tried summarily when they are, as a matter of fact, tried regularly. Kuchi v. Emperor.

—————Secretary of State, liability of, for acts of Government servants.

The Secretary of State is not usually liable for acts done by Government servants and would only be liable in such cases as the East India Company was formerly liable. As regards the East India Company, a distinction was drawn between sovereign acts and acts of trading. As regards sovereign acts, the Company was held not to be liable for defaults of its servants. Consequently, when a Constable during investigation seizes property suspected of having been stolen, no argument can be put forward that the Constable was not entrusted with dominion over the property on behalf of Government because Government would not be liable for his tortious acts. *Local Government v. TRADE MARK —————Colourable imitation—Infringement.

The question whether the trade mark, the subject-matter of the prosecution, is a colourable imitation of another trade mark is one of fact and the Court must come to its own conclusion after having placed itself in the position of an unwary customer. It is enough that there should be such similarity that an unwary customer may not be able to distinguish the one from the other, especially when he sees the one without having the other before him. The question is not whether anyone has been deceived in fact but whether an average customer can be deceived. Girdharilal Marwari v. Emperor.

3 B. R. 71 : 9 R. P. 203 :
A. I. R. 1936 Pat. 579.

—————Counterfeit.

A counterfeit trade mark may be defined as a trade mark which is either designed and used with the intention of deceiving or which, by reason of its resemblance to another pre-existing and already established mark, is calculated to deceive, apart from any dishonest intention. Nemi Chand v. Wallace.

4 Cr. L. J. 247 :
4 C. L. J. 268.

—————Deliberate design—Expert evidence, if admissible—Malice in law, not sufficient—Malice in fact to be proved.

It lies upon the plaintiff to establish affirmatively that the marks of resemblance were accidental and not designed. If the plaintiff, having the opportunity, deliberately abstains from showing that the resemblance adopted by him was accidental and innocent, it necessarily follows that it was the result and outcome of deliberate design and intention. If the Court, on the facts before it, must presume that the resemblance is not accidental but intentional and designed, then the imitation must have been designed with the object of deceiving. If the object was to deceive, then the Court will presume as against the wrong-doer, that the means employed to cause deception, were calculated to effect that purpose. This is the effect of the ruling in John Smidt v. Reddaway. It is only if the fraudulent design is negatived, that it becomes material to enquire whether the resemblance between the two combinations of marks, was calculated to deceive. Evidence of experts or men in the trade cannot be given to show whether or not a combination is such as is calculated to deceive the purchaser. It is a question entirely for the Judge. Evidence of facts, which may assist the Judge to come to a conclusion whether one mark is a colourable imitation of another may be given. Malice in law is not sufficient, i.e., it is not sufficient to show that the mark or combination of the plaintiff was falsely charged as a colourable imitation without legal justification or excuse. Malice in fact must be proved. Nemi Chand v. Wallace.

TRADE MARK

———Bona fide dispute as to right of, user of.

Where there is a bona fide dispute as to whether the complainant has any trade mark at all or whether the accused is or is not entitled to use the mark he is using, and the Magistrate is satisfied as to this bona fide dispute, he should not deal with the matter as a criminal matter, but leave it to the complainant to establish his right in a Civil Court. After the Civil Court declares the complainant's right, the case can be brought into a Criminal Court. Dowlal Ram v. Emperor.

2 Cr. L. J. 326 :
I. L. R. 32 Cal. 431.

———How can be acquired.

In India, where there is no provision for registration of trade marks, a trade mark may be acquired by adoption and user upon a vendible article, and a trade mark so acquired, falls within S. 478, Penal Code. Photographs, such as those produced before the Magistrate, are vendible articles, and if a photographer applies a trade mark to photographs which he sells, the provisions of the Penal Code are as applicable to such trade mark as they are to trade marks on other goods and vendible articles. The trade mark claimed was "P. Klier." It was contended that, because, the name was printed in ordinary type, it could not be trade mark: Held, that this would be so in England, because, under the Patents, Designs and Trade Marks Act of 1883, a name of an individual cannot be registered as a trade mark unless it is printed, impressed or woven in some particular and distinctive manner; but that in India there is no similar provision of law and S. 478 of the Penal Code covers any and every mark used for denoting that goods are the manufacture or merchandise of a particular person. Klier v. Ahuja.

———Infringement.

It is doubtful whether there can be a continuing offence in respect of infringement of trade mark in the sense in which there can be a continuing tort or continuing breach of contract. A person cannot be charged with committing an offence de die in diem over a substantial period. Emperor v. Ohhotlal Amarchand. (F. B.).

The accused began to use a label which had been got up to resemble his label very closely but with certain additions to it. Subsequently complainant registered a label with further additions but incorporating one of the additions introduced by the accused. He filed a complaint for infringement of trade mark: Held, that the complainant was entitled to have his case tried and the accused entitled to argue ———Infringement.

The improper use of a trade name may fall within the purview of S. 5, Merchandise Marks Act, and be punishable under S. 6 or 7 as a false trade description. But when the accused is charged under Ss. 482, 485 and 486, Penal Code, the complainant must prove that he has a trade mark which the accused has infringed. The complainant claimed simply the use of a certain name on umbrellas manufactured by him and charged the accused under Ss. 482, 485 and 486, Penal Code: Held, that the dispute between the parties was one of a civil nature and ought never to have been brought in the Criminal Court. *Anath Nath Dey v. ———Infringement, test of.

The proper test for determining whether a trade mark has been infringed is whether the get-up of the defendant's goods is likely to deceive a purchaser who is acquainted with the plaintiff's 'get-up' but trusts to his memory. The adoption by a rival trader of any mark which will cause his goods to be known under the same name in the market as another's is not necessarily a violation of the rights of the owner of the first mark. A. M. Malumiar & Co. v. Finlay Fleming & Co.

A. I. R. 1936 Rang. 96.

———Kind of customers 'who are likely to be deceived.'

In considering whether customers are likely to be deceived, the kind of customer which the Courts ought to think of is not the ignorant customer, but the customer who knows the distinguishing characteristics of the plaintiff's goods from other goods on the market so far as relates to general characteristics. An intent to defraud is an ingredient of the offence under S. 482 of the Penal Code. A. M. Malumiar & Co. v. Finlay Fleming & Co.

———Dispute over—Jurisdiction of Civil and Criminal Court—Test.

In deciding the question whether a dispute over trade marks and commercial designs should be brought in Civil and Criminal Court, the real practical test is this that the Criminal

TRADE MARK

Procedure Code is only to be used in simple and clear-cut cases where a very speedy relief is required by the prosecution. In all cases where complicated matters of registration, abandonment of user and so on are concerned, it is very much better that the dispute should be given to the decision of the Civil Courts. Ashutosh Das v. Keshab Chandra Ghosh.

Registration.

In India there is no method by which a trade mark may be registered, but property in or right in respect of a mark may be acquired by user. P. A. Pakir Mohammad v. Emperor.

A. I. R. 1929 Rang. 322.

Combination of letters—Infringement of trade mark—Right of aggrieved party to proceed criminally.

There is no authority for the proposition that a letter or a combination of letters cannot constitute a trade mark. A person aggrieved by the infringement of his trade mark has two remedies open to him; (1) he can institute criminal proceedings under the Penal Code, or (2) he can bring an action for an injunction and damages. But a Criminal Court may in view of the peculiar circumstances of a particular case, stay its own hands and direct the complainant to establish his right in a Civil Court. Banarsi Das v. Emperor.

Using false trade mark.

Where the accused had, in close proximity to the shop of the complainant, opened a shop from which he was selling rose-water in bottles which were similar to those which contained rose-water sold by the complainant and the accused had applied labels to his bottles which were similar to those used by the complainant, but on closer examination, great differences in the labels were discernible: Held, that the accused was not guilty under Ss. 482 and 486, Penal Code, of using a false trade mark or of selling goods to which a counterfeit trade mark was applied. When a bona fide dispute exists between the parties as to the right to use a trade mark, action should be taken before a Civil and not before a Criminal Court. Surja Prasad v. Mahabir Prasad.

Trade mark—What is.

A trade mark must be some visible concrete device or design affixed to goods to indicate that they are the manufacture of the person whose property the trade mark is. Bias of Magistrate.

Where a Magistrate starts a fresh inquiry on his own account under S. 202, Cr. P. C. after having sent the complaint under S. 406, Penal Code, for inquiry to another Magistrate and receiving his report, the procedure is irregular. And where apart from the irregularity of conducting a second inquiry, there is also the inordinate delay, the complainant may well feel some apprehension that the fate of his case so far as the admission of the complaint under S. 406, Penal Code is concerned, will not rest entirely on the consideration of the —————Dismissal by District Magistrate—Refusal to supply copy of order—Apprehension—Transfer.

An order of a District Magistrate dismissing an application for transfer is a judicial order, a copy of which ought to be given on requisition. It is absurd for the Court to refuse to supply the copy on the ground that the District Magistrate's sanction was necessary. Where the copy is refused on such a ground together with refusal to supply copy of statement of prosecution witnesses, the party has a reasonable apprehension that he may not receive a fair trial in the Magistrate's Court, and in such a case, the case should be transferred under S. 520 (1) (a). *Gurdas Ram v. A Magistrate has discretion to refuse bail and the fact that he has refused bail will not constitute a ground for transferring a case from his Board. A witness who had been examined by the Police can reasonably be asked whether a particular version which he was giving in Court was given by him to the Police. If he did give it, he is not contradicted. But if he did not, or if there is no mention of it in the diary, the value to be attached to the omission will depend upon the circumstances and may even mean the rejection of the version. The question, in any case, would be perfectly relevant and legitimate. However, rejection of the question cannot be a ground for transfer. It may well be that it is advisable for a District Magistrate ordinarily to issue notice to the accused or complainant or both before transferring a case from one Court to another but there is certainly no law which requires him to do so. Any person may bring facts to the notice of the District Magistrate which might suggest to that Magistrate that it is advisable to transfer a case from one Court to another. -----S. 105—Prosecution—City of Bombay Municipal Act (III of 1888), S. 231.

The Bombay Municipality acquired some stables but allowed the occupants to continue on the premises by leave and licence. Later on the Municipality entered into an agreement with the applicant whereby the applicant was to pay to the Municipality a monthly sum of Rs. 180 as compensation for the use and occupation by him as licensee of the said premises. During the continuance of the agreement, the licensee was to be at liberty to continue the occupancy of the remaining occupants of the premises as licensees, to recover from them the amounts they had agreed to pay for their occupancy of the premises as licensees, and in case any of them vacated the premises, to substitute for him any other occupant but on condition that such new occupant was to occupy the premises only as licensee and would vacate the same on being given forty-eight hours' notice. The agreement further provided that the applicant was to give vacant possession of the premises to the Municipality on being given one month's notice. In a prosecution of the applicant for non-compliance with a notice issued by the Municipality under S. 231 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act, the applicant contended that he was not an "occupier" within the meaning of the said section but only a licensee : Held, (i) that the agreement amounted to a lease and was not a mere licence : (ii) that if the applicant was the sole tenant of the premises, he would be the occupier within the meaning of S. 231, and, therefore, liable to comply with the requisition : (iii) that if the applicant had allowed other persons to occupy parts of the premises and recovered money or any other consideration from them in respect of such occupancy, whether it be called rent or compensation for use and occupation, he would be a rent farmer, and he would then be an 'owner' and would be liable to comply with a requisition under S. 231. *Sherif Dadumiyaji v. It is not incumbent upon a decree-holder to obtain possession of the property through Court. If he can turn out the judgment-debtor peacefully without using unnecessary force he will save the trouble of going to the Executing Court. It is only when a decree-holder finds that it is not possible for him without breach of the peace to obtain possession of the property or properties decreed in his favour in the Civil Court that he resorts to execution proceedings. *Jang Bahadur Singh v. He, therefore, charged them in three separate groups and proceeded against them in three separate trials, but without rehearing of the evidence for the prosecution separately, although parts of it which were relevant against others of the accused had no connection with the case of the appellant: Held, that the word "trial" includes the hearing of the evidence for the prosecution, as well as the subsequent procedure laid down in Chap. TRIAL BY JURY ———Charge of rioting and murder—Deceased already suffering from infirmity. Charge to Jury—Duty of Judge—Misdirection.

Where in a trial by Jury upon charges of rioting armed with deadly weapons, and murder, it appears that the person whose death was caused was suffering from a disease which accelerated his death, and the injuries described in the medical evidence were in themselves not apparently sufficient to cause immediate death it is the duty of the Judge in his charge to the Jury, to place these facts before them. An omission on the part of the Judge to do this amounts to a misdirection to the Jury. Ainudi Chowkidar v. Emperor.

———Duty of Judge.

Under S. 367, Cr. P. C., a Judge is called upon to show by the heads of his charge to the Jury in what way the law on the subject was explained to the Jury, and the heads of charge ought to show that the evidence was properly laid before the Jury. Whatever the Judge's opinion of the defence evidence may be and whatever he may think of the prisoner's Counsel in dealing with his own evidence he should state to the Jury accurately the substance of the evidence relied upon by each accused. It is for the Jury and the Jury alone to decide whether that evidence is worthy of consideration. Ikramuddin v. Emperor.

39 I. C. 331 : 15 A. L. J. 205 :
39 All. 348 : A. I. R. 1917 All. 173.

———Essence of.

The whole essence of a trial by Jury is that if an accused has a right to a Jury, he is entitled as of right to call upon the prosecution to obtain a verdict against him on the facts laid before the Jury before he can be convicted at all. It is not for the Appellate Court to look at the evidence with a view to see whether another Jury might not have arrived at a verdict of guilty upon another charge. That is to usurp the function of the Jury and to substitute the Appellate Court's opinion for the verdict of the Jury. Ikramuddin v. Emperor.

———Functions of Jury.

The question of the relevancy and admissibility of a confession is for the Judge to decide. When he has decided that it is relevant and it has been laid before the Jury, it is for them to appraise its value as evidence and one test which they will have to apply is whether it appears to them to have been freely and voluntarily made. *Emperor v. ———Power of Appellate Court to alter conviction.

An Appellate Court in the case of a trial by Jury may look at the evidence to see whether the misdirection has caused a miscarriage of justice in this sense, namely whether in spite of the misdirection the conviction and the verdict are not justified in law as they stand, and if they are, it will refuse to interfere. It may also look at the evidence to see whether there is a case worthy to be sent down for a retrial. But it has no power to look at the evidence and find the accused guilty of any offence with which he was not charged in the Trial Court and which was not laid before the Jury. *Ikram-ud-Din v. ———Question for determination—Verdict sought to be set aside.

In a case where the verdict of the Jury is sought to be set aside, the question is not whether their Lordships would have arrived at the same conclusion as the Jury arrived at after seeing and hearing the witnesses, but whether the Jury arrived at an unreasonable conclusion or one unsupported by evidence fit for their consideration. *Holford Stewart v. TRIAL OF SESSIONS CASES ———Procedure as to postponement of Sessions cases—Oudh Criminal Digest, Rule 69.

Sessions cases should not be tried piecemeal. Before commencing a trial a Judge should satisfy himself that all necessary evidence is available. If it is not, he may postpone the case; but once having commenced, he should, except for some very pressing reason to be recorded by him according to Rule 69 of the Oudh Criminal Digest, proceed de die

The mere discovery of a phial of illicit cocaine, however, on certain premises affords only a slender basis for the inference that the owner of such premises, not himself residing there, knew or had reason to believe that the resident or residents of the house were breaking the law in the matter. *Durga v. All that S. 60 (a) requires is that the accused should be in possession of an excisable article. His object is perfectly immaterial. A penal provision should be construed strictly and the word "possess" occurring in S. 60 (a) should be taken in the strict legal sense. As such, it does not imply mere physical detention. A person cannot be said to be in possession of liquor, unless he is conscious of the fact that the liquid in his possession contains alcohol. But by S. 71 the burden of proving want of knowledge is thrown on the person who is found to possess such liquor. Emperor v. Sita Ram.

—Ss. 64, 71—Liability of Master—Servant appointed to watch in grove—Sale of toddy by servant after prescribed hours.

Under S. 71 the holder of a licence who puts his servant, however innocently, in a position in which he would have an opportunity of contravening the law, is as much guilty as the servant, if the latter commits an offence. But where a licensee allows his servant to remain in a palm grove to watch the trees and the juice, and the servant keeps some of the toddy for himself and sells it after prescribed hours in the grove, the licensee cannot be convicted of an offence under S. 64 read with S. 71. Azimuddin v. Emperor.

—Criminal prosecution.

Where the allegation against a legal practitioner amounts to a charge of criminal prosecution, the correct procedure to be followed is that proceedings under the Legal Practitioners' Act should not be taken, but that, if it was thought necessary to take action, it should be by way of criminal prosecution. *Emperor v. —Criminal prosecution.

While conviction for a criminal offence is prima facie evidence of misconduct, all criminal convictions are not grounds for the exercise of the Court's disciplinary jurisdiction. A mere conviction of a legal practitioner under S. 124-A, Penal Code, does not necessarily involve his removal or suspension but the Court must take into consideration the facts on which the conviction is based. In the matter of : N, an Advocate.

—Disciplinary action.

A speech calling upon the audience to break those laws which the All-India Congress Committee orders to be broken, is a clear incitement to break laws which another body might decide should be broken and is inconsistent with the duty of a legal practitioner to assist in the administration of the laws. Such a —Disciplinary action—Allahabad High Court can take action against vakil or advocate on its roll but practising at Ajmere even though Ajmere Court does not choose to deal with him—Regulation 9 of 1926.

The mere fact that the Ajmere Court might have power to deal with a legal practitioner practising there and did not choose to exercise that power would in no way whatever prevent Allahabad High Court, if it thought fit, taking action against that legal practitioner if he was on the rolls of Allahabad High Court as a vakil or an advocate. In the matter of : A Vakil of Bcawar.

When a legal practitioner is debarred from further practice by a High Court, the latter has jurisdiction to rescind the order and reinstate him under its inherent powers. But before exercising such powers, the Court should be clearly convinced, that the delinquent has reformed his character. In such a case, the legal practitioner should apply to a Bench presided over by the Chief Justice and ask for a rule in the matter. The Bench may, if a prima facie case is made out, direct that a rule be issued and call upon the Government Advocate to show cause why the applicant should not be reinstated. The matter will then come up before and be determined by a Bench specially constituted. In the matter of : Mathra Prasad.

The toll is leviable not on passengers but on a laden vehicle. The amount of toll would vary according to the number of passengers in a laden vehicle. In spite of the fact that the amount of toll tax has to be calculated according to the number of passengers, the tax remains leviable on the vehicle. Under bye-law No. 3 it is the person in charge of a laden vehicle who is liable for the payment of the toll due on the laden vehicle in his charge. As soon as the person in charge of a laden vehicle passes into the Municipal limits, he becomes liable for the toll tax, and if he does not pay it, he becomes liable for the penalty extending to Rs. 50 provided in the bye-laws for their breach. The question whe-

Whether the opening of a doorway upon a common courtyard is or is not a material alteration within the meaning of 178, is a question of fact. But there is no reason for thinking that the opening of these doors is a matter with which the Municipal Board is really concerned. The issuing of a notice by the Board under the provisions of S. 186 is not a condition precedent to the institution of a prosecution under S. 185. In a case in which a person allows a sanction by the Municipal Board to erect a building to lapse and then proceeds to set up the building without giving fresh notice or submitting any fresh application to the Municipal Board, a prosecution for an offence against the Act is a more appropriate remedy than an order for the demolition of the building. *Emperor v. Under the provisions of Bye-law No. 3 framed under S. 298-H, U. P. It is certainly the duty of the Executive Officer to satisfy himself on these points, and if he finds that the place is not safe and suitable, permission must be refused but it does not follow that if the place is found to be safe and suitable, permission will automatically be granted. It will be the duty

S. 307—Daily fine—When to be imposed.

The liability to a daily fine in the event of a continuing breach, has been imposed by the Legislature in order that a person contumaciously disobeying an order lawfully issued by a Municipal Board may not claim to have purged his offence once and for all by payment of the fine imposed upon him for neglect or refusal to comply with the said order. The liability will require to be enforced as often as the Municipal Board may consider necessary, by institution of a second prosecution in which the questions for consideration will be, how many days have elapsed from the date of the first conviction under the same section during which the offender is proved to have persisted in the offence, and secondly, the appropriate amount of the daily fine to be imposed under

A Magistrate passed certain strictures against a defence witness in his judgment in a criminal case. My client still sincerely and honestly believes that you had no material to make objectionable remarks against him in your judgment. Before proceeding to take any action against you, my client thinks it his humble duty to draw your attention to the judgment and objectionable remarks therein and to give you sufficient opportunity to withdraw them" : Held, that the fact that the letter was written under instructions from the client was no justification for it and that its writing amounted to misconduct. It is perfectly open to a Pleader, on instructions from his client, to send a Magistrate notice under S. 80, C. P. ———Ss. 318, 321—Bye-laws relating to dangerous and offensive trades - Licence, whether can be refused arbitrarily—Remedy of person aggrieved—Injunction, suit for, whether maintainable—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts.

A Municipal Board would not be justified in refusing to grant a licence properly applied for, under the bye-laws relating to dangerous and offensive trades, not on any grounds of public safety, health or public convenience, but merely in order to secure an advantage to itself in a dispute about a question of title with another person. Under the U. P. Municipalities Act, the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts is limited by Ss. 318 and 321. Under these sections, the only remedy of a person who considers himself aggrieved by a bye-law made under S. 298 (G) is by way of appeal to the higher authority referred to in S. 318 but it is by no means equally clear that a suit would not lie for an injunction to compel a Municipal Board to grant the plaintiff a licence for carrying on a particular trade upon a particular spot, provided always that the plaintiff was prepared to take out the licence subject to all the conditions prescribed by the bye-laws and could satisfy the Court that the Municipal Board had refused him the licence for reasons wholly unconnected with the public health, safety or convenience. *Mannua v. —S. 4—Scope and application.

The expression "to the prejudice of the purchaser" in S. 4 (1), goes with the first portion of the section only and not with the second. The first portion of the section applies to a case where the article has actually been sold to a purchaser, while the second portion can apply even while the article is offered or exposed for sale or is manufactured for sale without there being a purchaser. In the latter case, there can be no prejudice to the purchaser in fact and for the second portion of the section to be applicable, all that is necessary is that an article of food not of the nature, substance or quality which it purports to be, should either have been sold or offered or exposed for sale or manufactured for sale. Where therefore a vendor who has a licence for sale of pure vegetable oil exposes for sale vegetable oil mixed with ghee, he is guilty of an offence under the second portion of S. 4. *Suraj Narain v. U. P. PREVENTION OF ADULTERATION ACT (VI OF 1912)

—S. 5—'Adulteration,' meaning of.

The word 'adulterated' when used with reference to ghi, necessarily means that the ghi contains an article which was used to debase it and which, therefore, could not have been derived from milk at all. Ram Dayal Gupta v. Emperor. 28 Cr. L. J. 39 (a) : 99 I. C. 71 : A. I. R. 1927 All. 730 (a).

—S. 6—Applicability.

S. 6 (a) does not apply to a commission agent who has not purchased the adulterated article and who does not sell it but merely exposes it for sale. Kedarnath v. Emperor.

—S. 6—Written warranty.

A bazar Chaudhri of the Agra Cantonment Board took a sample of ghee from the shop of the accused and the Analyst stated that it contained fat or oil foreign to pure ghee. All that had been produced by the accused as defence was a number of cash vouchers showing that a wholesale firm, supplied him ghee on various occasions. In the cash vouchers, there was a printed line which states that the ghee sold by the firm was actual village ghee and that the groceries were sold at the cheap rate: Held, that the line was not in any sense a written warranty and the mere fact that the signature of the vendor occurred at a totally different place in the bottom of the form did not imply that the signature was attached to that line. The line in question was a mere advertisement alleging that the ghee was good and the groceries were cheap. Pancham Ram v. Emperor.

—Ss. 15, 12—Failure to give particulars in summons required by S. 15, if justifies acquittal.

There is nothing in the Act which justifies the conclusion that it was the intention of the Legislature that a failure to give the particulars in the summons required by S. 15, would justify an acquittal even if it were perfectly clear that the person charged had been guilty of an offence and had had a full opportunity of defending his conduct. *Hira Lal v. It is only the licence-holder who can be penalized under S. 17 if he commits a breach of r. 8 framed under S. 16. Any other person, whatever his relation to the licence-holder may be, cannot be rightfully charged with an offence under S. 17 for committing a breach of r. 8 for that rule does not cast any duty upon him. *Murari Lal v. —S. 18—Expression "in which ghee is manufactured" applies to manufactory, shop or place.

The words "in which ghee is manufactured" in S. 18 apply to the three previous things mentioned that is "manufactory, shop or place." If this were not so, then it would be an offence to keep any substance to be used for the adulteration of such ghee in any kind of a factory or any kind of a shop. That cannot be what was intended by the Legislature, but the Legislature did intend that the manufactory or the shop were those in which ghee was manufactured. Changa Mal v. Emperor.

—S. 18—Point that ghee is not manufactured at shop cannot be taken for first time in revision.

In the case of a prosecution under S. 18, it is for the accused to take the plea that his shop is not such a manufactory, shop, or place in which ghee is manufactured, under S. 242, Cr. P. C., in the trial Court. If he fails to do this, he cannot raise it for the first time in revision. Changa Mal v. Emperor.

UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLY

———S. 71—Collector dismissing under S. 71, application of accused found guilty by Village Panchayat—Revision to Chief Court, if lies.

A Village Panchayat constituted under U. P. Village Panchayat Act, is not a Court "constituted under any law other than this Code," as defined under S. 6, Cr. P. C., and is, therefore, not a body subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the Chief Court. No revision, therefore, lies to the Chief Court against an order of a Collector dismissing under S. 71 an application made to him by an accused who had been found guilty of an offence under Penal Code, by a village Panchayat. *Badri Nath v. S. 13 (1), Burma Vaccination Law (Amendment) Act of 1909, relates to the refusal of a person to be vaccinated himself and has nothing to do with the refusal of parents to allow their children to be vaccinated. There is nothing in Burma Act I of 1909, to authorise any officer to require the parent of a child over six months of age to have it vaccinated, and for such a case, provision is made only in S. 9 of the Vaccination Act of 1880. Under S. 17, Vaccination Act before enforcing the provisions of S. 9 of the said Act a notice must be served on the parent, requiring him to attend at a time and place to be specified in the notice to have the child vaccinated, and then under S. 18, if that notice is not complied with, the Superintendent of Vaccination must report the matter to a Magistrate duly appointed in that behalf, who shall summon the parent and demand his explanation, and if such explanation is not satisfactory, make an order directing the parent to comply with the notice before a date to be specified, and it is only on the failure of the parent to obey the order of the Magistrate that he can be convicted. *Emperor v. WHIPPING —Concurrent sentences of whipping, legality and meaning of.

A sentence of whipping in one case cannot be directed to run concurrently with a similar sentence in another, the word "concurrent" properly applies only to sentences of imprisonment and the literal meaning of "concurrent sentences of whipping" would be that the prisoner is to be flogged by two operators simultaneously, a monstrous result which could not have been intended. *Emperor v. ———Misconduct—Appropriation of client's money by Advocate—Name struck off the roll—Reinstatement, when advisable.

Where an Advocate misappropriates a considerable sum of his clients, the act of professional misconduct committed by him is a very grave one, and it is not possible to allow him to continue practising in an honourable profession. But that does not mean that the Court is precluded from reinstating him when adequate punishment has been imposed and he has shown that he has rehabilitated himself in such a manner that he is fitted to be admitted into his profession again. *In the matter of: K. 146 I. C. 193 : 6 R. Rang. 77 :
A. I. R. 1933 Rang. 193.

———"Enquiry" and "trial," meaning of—
Trial when commences.

A trial is a judicial proceeding which ends in conviction or acquittal. All other proceedings are mere enquiries. Therefore, if a Magistrate on receipt of a complaint issues process against the accused and ultimately concludes that an offence triable at Sessions has been committed and commits the accused, the trial does not begin until the accused appears at the Sessions and the proceedings before the Magistrate constitute an enquiry only. Hema Singh v. Emperor.

———"Respectable witness,"—Meaning of.

Respectability does not connote any particular status or wealth or anything of that kind. Any person is entitled to claim respectability provided he is not disreputable in any way, that is, if he is not a thief or a criminal of some kind or a person perhaps of grossly immoral habits. Being a prosecution witness is not sufficient to deprive one of one's title to respectability. Ashfaq v. Emperor.

WORKMAN'S BREACH OF CONTRACT
ACT (XIII OF 1859)

———"Applicability of."

The Workman's Breach of Contract Act does not apply where an advance is literally or practically in the nature of a debt and where, even assuming that the advance is not in the nature of a debt, the conditions are inequitable. Nor does the Act apply where the advance is not to be paid off by the work done but out of the wages which the workman is to receive. In re : Abdul Rasul Ismailji.

12 Cr. L. J. 402 :
11 I. C. 586 : 13 Bom. L. T. 548.

———"Applicability of."

The Workman's Breach of Contract Act was not intended to apply to a contract to perform agricultural service. Emperor v. Khuda Bakhsh.

16 Cr. L. J. 229 :
27 I. C. 901 : 38 P. R. 1914 Cr. :
207 P. L. R. 1915 : A. I. R. 1914 Lah. 561.

workman not for doing any specific work.

The loans that can be recovered under the Act are the loans which are advanced by employers to their workmen for doing specific work. Where a loan was advanced to a workman not for doing any particular work, and the work which he was doing at the time that he took the loan had been finished and nothing of it remained to be done : Held, the Act did not apply. Giga v. Muhammad Amin.

13 Cr. L. J. 863 :
17 I. C. 799 : 10 A. L. J. 468 :
35 All. 61.

———"Applicability."

The Act is intended to apply only to cases of advance ; it does not apply to cases where the consideration is so grossly inadequate as to suggest that the so-called advance was merely a device to bring the contract within the Act, nor to cases where the contract provides for payment of wages according to custom or the advance is in reality a debt. Emperor v. Namdeo Sakharam. 11 Cr. L. J. 273 : 5 I. C. 863 : 12 Bom. L. R. 135.

Applicability.

The Workman's Breach of Contract Act, applies only where there has been a contract for work with money given as wages in advance. It does not apply where money has been given as a loan, with a condition attached that the borrower is to work for the lender. Emperor v. Gooroomoondian. 4 Cr. L. J. 200 : 3 L. B. R. 187 : 12 Bur. L. R. 272.

Applicability.

Where a contract prescribes a penalty for its breach, the remedy prescribed by the Act cannot be availed of. Emperor v. Khuda Bakhsh. 16 Cr. L. J. 229 : 27 I. C. 901 : 38 P. R. 1914 Cr. : 207 P. L. R. 1915 : A. I. R. 1914 Lah. 561.

Applicability.

Where an advance made to a workman is merely a loan, Act XIII of 1859 does not apply. In re : Ambu. 15 Cr. L. J. 384 : 23 I. C. 752 : A. L. R. 1914 Mad. 473.

Bandsman, if workman.

A musician in a band is not an artificer or labourer and is, therefore, not a workman within the meaning of the Act. Re : Rosario Quadros. 16 Cr. L. J. 629 (a) : 30 I. C. 453 : 38 Mad. 551 : A. I. R. 1916 Mad. 660 (a).

Construction.

The Act being of a penal nature must be construed strictly. Ganesh Lal v. Shugan Chand. 11 Cr. L. J. 329 : 5 I. C. 914 : 9 P. R. 1910 Cr. : 12 P. W. R. 1910 Cr.

Contract entered into where Act not in force, effect of—Minor, contract with, or for more than one year, validity of.

A contract entered into under the Workman's Breach of Contract Act at a place where that Act is not in force cannot be enforced, and the contracting workman is not liable for any breach of the contract. Mozhar Husain v. Emperor. 22 Cr. L. J. 50 : 59 I. C. 194 : A. I. R. 1920 All. 288.

S. 1—Contract not within scope.

A contract to be performed outside British India does not come within the purview of the Workman's Breach of Contract Act: Po Thil S. v. Ma Saw Shin. 20 Cr. L. J. 576 : 52 I. C. 64 : 19 Bur. L. T. 223 : 10 L. B. R. 53 : A. I. R. 1919 L. B. 55.

WORKMAN'S BREACH OF CONTRACT ACT (XIII OF 1859)

Contract not within scope.

A contract to cart logs of wood from a forest to a forest depot is not a contract of an artificer, workman or labourer within the meaning of the Workman's Breach of Contract Act. Devappa Ramappa Naik v. Emperor. 20 Cr. L. J. 316 (b) : 50 I. C. 492 : 21 Bom. L. R. 277 : 43 Bom. 607 : A. I. R. 1919 Bom. 158.

Contract not within scope.

A contract, the performance of which is to take place in a foreign territory, cannot be enforced under the Workman's Breach of Contract Act. In re : Sinna Karbuppan. 16 Cr. L. J. 61 (a) : 26 I. C. 653 : 16 M. L. T. 303 : A. I. R. 1915 Mad. 581.

Contract not within scope.

The Act does not apply to a contract which is made by a person who is not himself an artificer, workman or labourer. Maung Thein Win v. Messrs. Steel Brothers and Co. 18 Cr. L. J. 984 : 42 I. C. 600 : A. I. R. 1918 L. B. 109.

Contract to work for twelve years.

A contract to work 8 hours a day for 12 years, for wages not shown to be above the market-rate, and to live in any house that may be provided, being otherwise a form of slavery, is illegal. In re : Ambu. 15 Cr. L. J. 384 : 23 I. C. 752 : A. I. R. 1914 Mad. 473.

Contract within scope—What is.

A case in which the contract is that the workman shall work for wages, deducting from his wages a certain sum periodically to make good an advance, is within Act XIII of 1859. Jelagan Subramania Naidu v. K. Singara Mudali. 16 Cr. L. J. 112 : 27 I. C. 160 : 27 M. L. J. 616 : A. I. R. 1915 Mad. 602 (a).

Duty of complainant to prove accused is workman within the Act.

The status of the accused person against whom the Act is sought to be enforced, whether he is, 'an artificer, workman or labourer', is an integral part of the case which the complainant has to establish, and if no evidence is let in on the point, the complaint should be dismissed, whether the accused does or does not raise the point. Natulhodi Kunhi Moidin v. Chamu Nair. 19 Cr. L. J. 211 : 43 I. C. 787 : 33 M. L. J. 607 : 22 M. L. T. 435 : 6 L. W. 745 : 1917 M. W. N. 825 : 41 Mad. 182 : A. I. R. 1918 Mad. 281.

Interpretation.

The Workman's Breach of Contract Act, is a statute which calls for strict interpretation. Emperor v. Naga Tima. 13 Cr. L. J. 853 : 17 I. C. 789 : 14 Bom. L. R. 956.

WORKMAN'S BREACH OF CONTRACT ACT (XIII OF 1859)

—Preamble—Construction of.

The preamble of the Act cannot be construed as limiting the operation of the Act to private manufacturers, carrying on business for their private gain. Emperor vt Naga Tun Zan.

11, Workman's Breach of Contract, p. 1.

—Refusal to work, if punishable.

In a prosecution under the Act, if it is proved that the workman has refused to work and that there is a finding that he is physically fit for the same, he must be held to have refused "wilfully and without lawful or reasonable excuse." Heeth Lal Kodria v. Maksud Ali.

A. I. R. 1923 L. Bur. 79.

—Remedy under—Applicability.

Where a contract by a workman provides a definite penalty for breach, the employer cannot, under any circumstances, adopt the remedy by proceeding in terms of the Act. Emperor v. Muhammad Din.

15 Cr. L. J. 166 :

A. I. R. 1914 Lah. 465.

—Scope.

A contract of service entered into for more than three years cannot be enforced even for a limited period under the Act. The general provision of law is that a man cannot be treated as a criminal for not performing a contract which could not be enforced against him by a civil process. Where the accused in proceedings under the Act entered into a contract whereby he agreed to repay the initial loan or advance out of wages earned : Held, that the agreement was quite different from a contract contemplated by the Act. Emperor v. Muhammad Din.

A. I. R. 1914 Lah. 465.

—Scope.

An agreement to render services far higher than those of manual labour is not a contract within the meaning of Workman's Breach of Contract Act. Ramzan v. Noor Muhammad Yacub.

15 Cr. L. J. 383 :
23 I. C. 751 : 7 S. L. R. 100 :
A. I. R. 1914 Sind 17.

—Scope.

The Workman's Breach of Contract Act relates to contracts in which workmen have received advances of money on account of the work which they have contracted to perform, and has no application to a contract of service for a term of years accompanied with an advance of money which may be paid off from the wages the workman is to earn, as such a contract is not one made on account of the work which he has contracted to perform. Ramkrishna Haribhau Vadke v. Emperor.

20 Cr. L. J. 701 :
52 I. C. 669 : 21 Bom. L. R. 753 :
A. I. R. 1919 Bom. 96.

—Scope and applicability.

The provisions of the Act can only apply to the case of a workman, who has received from his employer an advance of money on account of any work which he has contracted to perform; they do not apply to a case in which the workman concerned has only received a loan from his master or employer without any reference to his wages for the work which he has agreed to do, and which loan has to be repaid by monthly instalments extending over a certain period without any deductions being made from the wages in respect of these instalments. Ganeshi Lal v. Shugan Chand.

11 Cr. L. J. 329 :
5 I. C. 914 : 9 P. R. 1910 Cr. :
12 P. W. R. 1910 Cr.

—Scope—Terms of contract to be accurately ascertained.

In a proceeding under the Workman's Breach of Contract Act, the first thing to be ascertained is whether the artificer, workman or labourer entered into a valid contract and, if so, has wilfully and without lawful or reasonable excuse neglected or refused to perform work according to the terms of the contract. In order to do this, the terms and circumstances of the contract must be accurately ascertained. Emperor v. Namdeo Sakharam.

11 Cr. L. J. 273 :
5 I. C. 863 : 12 Bom. L. R. 135.

—'Void contract'—What is.

A contract under the Act for a period exceeding one year, or by a person under the age of 18 years, is void. Mazhar Husain v. Emperor.

22 Cr. L. J. 50 :
59 I. C. 194 : A. I. R. 1920 All. 288.

—Whether applicable to contracts with Government.

The Workman's Breach of Contract Act, is applicable to a contract made with Government, and a Government Officer carrying on business on behalf of Government can avail himself of the Act. Emperor v. Nga Tun Zan.

—Who can move.

Act XIII of 1859 can be put in motion only by the employer. A Magistrate has no power to pass an order under that Act when the case before him is one under the Penal Code. Ohhedi v. Mohammad Ali.

14 Cr. L. J. 133.
18 I. C. 885 : 11 A. L. J. 117 :
34 All. 143.

—Who can set in motion.

A person who is not an employer of labour or a master but is a mere broker or middle-

17 I. C. 789 : 14 Bom. L. R. 956.

—————Work performed through the agency of others—Jurisdiction of Magistrate.

In order to give jurisdiction to a Magistrate, there are only two conditions, namely, an advance of money and wilful failure to perform the work. If these conditions are fulfilled, the Magistrate is bound either to order the repayment of the advance or so much of it as remains due or to order the work to be performed. The fact that the work has been completed by the complainant through the agency of others does not deprive the Court of its jurisdiction. The only effect of the work having been performed by the agency of others is to leave open only the one alternative of recovering the advance or so much as is still due, because the work cannot be ordered to be done over again and the law will not compel the performance of the impossible. Habibullah v. Sumar.

6 I. C. 879 : 3 S. L. R. 223.

The Secretary of State for India in Council, or the Government of India, or the Local Government of any Province of India is not a master or employer resident or carrying on business in any place to which the Workman's Breach of Contract Act applies. Emperor v. Ramiah.

2 Cr. L. J. 725 :

There was an agreement between the parties by which the person was entitled to get the work done by contract and also to a statement of accounts annually and to receive a certain percentage on the profits and was entitled to a percentage of the reserve fund in the event of that Company being wound up. The person left his employment on the allegation that his employers failed to perform their part of the agreement: Held, that the Workman's Breach of Contract Act had no application. Purna Chandra v. Tarak Nath.

10 Cr. L. J. 577 :

An agreement between an employer and a workman whereby the latter agrees to repay the advance received by him by periodical deductions from the amount of his wages and by working out the amount is an agreement which falls under S. 1. Bhogirathu Somanna v. Kandivada Chelapathi.

The accused took from the applicant Rs. 170 in advance under a written agreement whereby he agreed in consideration of the loan to work at the latter's factory as a shoemaker for three years. The Magistrate discharged the accused on the ground that the contract was not for work to be done, but was in order to bind the accused down to work for a period of three years: Held, that the terms of the contract were within the provisions of the Act. In re: Sehambur.

5 Cr. L. J. 337 :
9 Bom. L. R. 362.

—————S. 1—Dismissal for default of application—Effect of—Cr. P. C. Ss. 247, 403.

An application under S. 1 was dismissed for default before any order had been passed by the Magistrate under S. 2. Three years later, when the offender was found by the applicant, the application was renewed but dismissed by the Magistrate, who held that there were no sufficient grounds for going on with a case determined so long ago: Held, (1) that no "offence" against the Act having yet been committed, there was no "acquittal" and S. 408, Cr. P. C., did not bar the re-opening of the proceedings: (2) that as the delay was due to the applicant's inability to find the offender, there was no ground for refusing to continue the inquiry. Krishna Perdan v. Pasand. 14 Cr. L. J. 404 : 20 I. C. 228 : 6 Bur. L. T. 108 : 7 L. B. R. 35.

WORKMAN'S BREACH OF CONTRACT ACT (XIII OF 1859)

—S. 1—Applicability.

An advance of money paid to a workman on condition of its being reimbursed by monthly deductions from his wages is 'an advance of money on account of any work which he shall have contracted to perform, etc.' within the meaning of Act XIII of 1859. Govinda Chetty v. Munngany Naik. 14 Cr. L. J. 400 (a) : 20 I. C. 224.

—S. 1—"Artificer," meaning of.

It is not necessary for a prosecution that an artificer should work with his own hands. S. 1 covers the case of a head-artificer or workman who undertakes to get certain work done by other artificers, workmen or labourers under his own supervision and direction. Sein Yin v. Ah Moon Shoke. 15 Cr. L. J. 235 : 23 I. C. 187 : 7 L. B. R. 82 : A. I. R. 1914 L. Bur. 163.

—S. 1—Dealer in stones, whether artificer, workman or labourer.

Accused who dealt in stones took an advance from the complainant under an agreement to supply the latter with stones from time to time according to the terms of an agreement entered into between the parties. Accused failed to supply the stones and complainant made an application under the Workman's Breach of Contract Act: Held, that the contract was not a contract by an artificer, workman or labourer nor was the money advanced on account of work to be performed by an artificer, workman or labourer, and therefore, the Act had no application. Bhagwan Din v. Mahmud Ali. 19 Cr. L. J. 598 : 45 I. C. 502 : 16 A. L. J. 407 : A. I. R. 1918 All. 381.

An elephant driver is a workman or labourer within the meaning of S. 1. Kutta Bella Ravat v. Emperor. 27 Cr. L. J. 160 : 91 I. C. 896 : 27 Bom. L. R. 1415 : [A. I. R. 1926 Bom. 80.]

WORKMAN'S BREACH OF CONTRACT ACT (XIII OF 1859)

—S. 1—Magistrate of Police, meaning of.

The term "a Magistrate of Police" in S. 1 must be limited to a Magistrate in the territorial limits of whose jurisdiction the employer resides or carries on business. Sobhraj Dwarakadas v. Emperor. 19 Cr. L. J. 591 : 45 I. C. 399 : 11 S. L. R. 128 : A. I. R. 1918 Sind 22.

—S. 1—Shall wilfully, etc., meaning of.

The words "shall wilfully, and without lawful or reasonable excuse, neglect or refuse to perform such work according to the terms of his contract" in S. 1 are equivalent to the expression "fraudulent breach of contract" mentioned in the preamble. Purna Chandra v. Tarak Nath. 10 Cr. L. J. 577 : 4 I. C. 413 : 36 Cal. 917.

—S. 1—Jurisdiction.

There is nothing in S. 1 which gives special jurisdiction to a Magistrate, within whose jurisdiction the contract was made or the advance received, to try an offence under the Act, committed beyond his jurisdiction. Sobhraj Dwarakadas v. Emperor. 19 Cr. L. J. 591 : 45 I. C. 399 : 11 S. L. R. 128 : A. I. R. 1918 Sind 22.

—S. 1—Proceedings under—Nature of.

An inquiry under S. 1 cannot be held to be governed by Chap. XX, Cr. P. C., and an order of acquittal of an accused person on account of the non-appearance of the complainant on the day of hearing even though purported to be made under S. 247 of the Code, cannot be considered to have been passed under that section. Such an order is merely one of dismissal of the complaint which the Magistrate can review if he sees cause to do so. Ramamma v. Gurunatham. 24 Cr. L. J. 465 : 72 I. C. 881 : 32 M. L. T. 347 : 1923 M. W. N. 402 : 45 M. L. J. 336 : 18 L. W. 111 : 46 Mad. 723 : A. I. R. 1923 Mad. 719.

—S. 1—Proceedings—Nature of.

Cases under the Workman's Breach of Contract Act, are judicial proceedings and the workman is in the position of an accused. He cannot, therefore, be compelled to make a thumb-impression in Court, for the purpose of identifying his thumb-impression on the agreement. Ramanath Pandaram v. Karupana Thevar. 19 Cr. L. J. 175 : 43 I. C. 591 : 11 Bur. L. T. 207 : A. I. R. 1918 L. Bur. 36.

—S. 1—"Workman," meaning of—Super-viser of coolies.

some kind, whether skilled or unskilled. A man who does work of an intellectual nature in connection with a contract involving manual labour cannot, simply for that reason, be viewed as a manual labourer. A supervisor of coolies, therefore, who has also contracted to get work performed by them is not a "workman". Naluthodi Kunhi Moidin v. Ohamu Nair.

A. I. R. 1918 Mad. 281.

—Ss. 1—Workman, who is.

A person who undertakes to supply coolies and to work along with them is a "workman" within the meaning of S. 1 and the fact that he is under similar contracts with other people during the same period, does not take him out of the definition of "workman". Ramanath Pandaram v. Karupana Thevar.

—Ss. 1, 2—Scope of.

A workman, who pays in full the penalty which his master or employer has agreed beforehand to accept as compensation for any breach of the contract of service on the part of the workman, has a lawful and reasonable excuse for refusing to continue to perform his work according to the terms of his contract. An employer of labour is not precluded from availing himself of the provisions of the Workman's Breach of Contract Act, merely because in the contract of service between himself and his workman, there is a stipulated penalty capable of enforcement by a civil suit in the event of breach of the contract on the part of the workman, which penalty has admittedly not been enforced, nor payment of the same tendered on the part of the workman. *Ram Lal v. WORKMAN'S BREACH OF CONTRACT ACT (XIII OF 1859)

—Ss. 1, 2—Scope—Jurisdiction after the expiration of term of contract or completion of work—Preamble.

In a case under the Workman's Breach of Contract Act, where either the work has been completed or the term of the contract has expired, a Magistrate has jurisdiction to entertain a complaint under S. 1 and to order repayment of advance under S. 2. Gurudeen Taily v. Muttu Servat.

—————Misconduct—Cancellation of sanad—Appeal to Privy Council—Considerations.

When an order striking off the name of a Pleader from the roll of Pleaders, on the ground of misconduct has been made, the practice of the Allahabad High Court has been to treat the order as falling under S. 109 (c), C. P. C., although the Calcutta and Patna High Courts have taken a different view. The certificate of leave to appeal is not to be given, as a matter of course, but can be granted where the case is otherwise a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council. Where in an appeal from an order striking off the name of a Pleader from the roll of Pleaders, the point in dispute was naturally not measurable by money and it was of great private importance to the applicant and there were some points of law raised in the case: Held, that the case could be certified under S. 109 (c) as a fit one for appeal to the Privy Council. *P. —————Misconduct—Cancellation of sanad—Reinstatement.

Before the Court can re-admit an Advocate who has been struck off the rolls for misappropriation, the Court must be fully satisfied that he has fully re-gained his character and is fitted for re-admission into the ranks of an honourable profession. Mere opinion is not sufficient. The Court requires solid facts and cogent reasons, not merely the opinions expressed by gentlemen who had given him certificates. Re-admission does not depend on the fact that he has been suspended or struck off the rolls for several years. He can only be re-admitted if he can show that he has become worthy to act as an Advocate. In deciding such matters, the Court has a duty to the public, and where an Advocate has been guilty of misappropriation, it must be shown that there is no likelihood of such an offence being committed again. In re: S., an Advocate. It was found that the money had already been drawn: Held, although it is expected that when the Court requires the assistance of the Pleader for the purpose of enabling it to satisfy itself that the money is due and had not been withdrawn, the Court certainly expects a greater degree of care on the part of the Pleader, it could not be held that the conduct on the part of the Pleader amounted to such misconduct as would justify the Court in proceeding to take action under the Legal Practitioners' Act against him, and that the proceedings taken against him should serve as a warning to him. *Emperor v. —S. 2—Work completed by employer prior to complaint—Right of employer to proceed under S. 2.

S. 2 only applies when the work is uncompleted when the complaint is made. An employer, by doing the work himself or employing a third party to do it for him, loses his right to proceed under the section. The offence created by the Act is not the neglect or refusal of the workman to perform his contract, but the failure of the workman to comply with an order made by the Magistrate that the workman shall repay the money advanced or perform the contract. In the matter of: Anusoori Sanyasi. 2 Cr. A Magistrate cannot order a workman to be imprisoned by the same order by which he directs him to make a payment. An order for imprisonment should be a separate order passed after the workman has failed to comply with the order about repayment. Nor where the sum is ordered to be paid by instalments, can a Magistrate by a single order award a separate term of imprisonment for default of each instalment. Rur Singh v. Emperor. 28 Cr. L. Under S. 2 (1), a Magistrate cannot order an accused person to work for more than one year. An order directing the accused to serve for a period of over 2 years is illegal and he cannot be prosecuted for disobedience of such an order. The remedy of the party aggrieved in such a case is to apply and get a fresh order passed in place of the illegal order. The High Court in revision against an order refusing to punish the accused for such alleged disobedience will not be justified in passing after a considerable lapse of time from the date of the breach of the contract, the order which the Magistrate should have originally passed. *Parayya v. WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT (VIII OF 1923) ———Accident arising out of employment—Tests for determining.

The question as to whether an accident arose out of the employment cannot be determined on any general view of facts. It is dependent on the facts of each particular case. One test which can be applied is whether it was part of the injured person's employment to hazard, to suffer, or to do that which caused his injury. If it was, the accident arose out of his employment, if not, it did not, because what it was not part of the employment to hazard, to suffer, or to do, cannot well be the cause of an accident arising out of the employment. Where there was no justification for a workman to interfere with a moving machine for the purpose of finding out a screw-driver which he required for the purpose of his work: Held, that in doing so, he was not within the sphere of his employment. *Sh. In a suit by the widow of the deceased for compensation: Held, that though the hotel-keeping was the defendant's main business, purchase, reconstruction and repair of buildings was also a business conducted by the defendant; and as the plaintiff sustained the accident while he was engaged in the business of the defendant, the defendant was liable to pay compensation to the plaintiff. *Jutha Lal Manekji Sharma v. into a sampan to go ashore with other coolies. When in the sampan owing to the falling on them of some hot cinders thrown overboard and leaning on one side to avoid them, the sampan capsized and all were thrown into the river and the deceased was drowned: Held, that the accident arose in the course of the deceased's employment, as he was on his way back to the wharf where his employment for the day would end and as going to and fro in the sampan was a recognized way for coolies to travel, it could not be said that travelling in a sampan was an act in itself of such an inherently dangerous nature that a man who adopted it was obviously taking a risk for which he must be held to be responsible. A. A. Thaver Brothers v. Muthu Mariammal. 146 I. C. 1027 : 6 R. Rang. 136 : A. I. R. 1933 Rang. 208.

—Ss. 2 (n), 12 (1)—Granting compensation to workman.

A person to be excluded from the definition of 'workman' in S. 2, Cl. (n), must not only be one "whose employment is of a casual nature" but also one 'who is employed otherwise than for the purposes of the employer's trade or business'. Both these qualifications must be present together. The mere fact that the injured man had been employed only for a few days at a time, will not of itself remove him from the category of "workman." A coolie working under a contractor employed by a Railway Company in the construction of a bridge, sustained a fatal injury while attending to work done to the bridge. The work was for maintenance of the upkeep of the line. It was found that the Company maintained a permanent staff of Engineers, whose most indispensable duty it is to preserve the line and the rolling-stock in serviceable condition and who carry out, where necessary, with the help of contractors, all operations necessary to that end: Held, that the workman sustained the injury in the course of work which was ordinarily part of the principal business of the Company within S. 12 (1), and the Company was liable to pay compensation. Pertiyakkal v. The Agent, South Indian Ry Co., Ltd., Trichinopoly. 159 I. C. 873 : 41 L. W. 805 : 1935 M. W. N. 674 : 69 M. L. J. 93 : 58 Mad. 804 : 8 R. M. 578 : A. I. R. 1935 Mad. 721.

When a workman claims compensation on the ground of permanent partial disablement due to fracture caused by the falling of roof, negligence either on the part of the employer or the employed is not the criterion to be employed. The question is, firstly, whether the workman at the time of the injury was working within the scope of his employment and, secondly, if so, whether the employer has proved that he is exempted from paying compensation because of the provisos to S. 3. The employer will only escape liability if he can satisfy the provisos in S. 3. Dhanpal Madras v. Superintendent of Collieries. 152 I. C. 1024 : 7 R. P. 294 : 1 B. R. 190 : 16 P. L. T. 32 : A. I. disciplinary jurisdiction of the High Court. This must depend on the nature of the acts for which the practitioner was convicted. In such proceedings, the Court should not go behind the conviction, i. e., to examine the legality of the conviction, but it is open to the Court, and indeed the Court is bound to ascertain from the criminal proceedings the facts on which the conviction is based in order to decide whether by virtue of his conduct complained against, the legal practitioner concerned is or is not a proper person to be retained as a member of the legal profession. *Emperor v. Where a legal practitioner has been convicted of a criminal offence and his case is sent for an enquiry by a Tribunal of the Bar Council into his conduct with a view to seeing whether he has done anything which seems to indicate the necessity of taking disciplinary action against him, the Tribunal should merely record the fact that he had been convicted of an offence and ask him to show cause why no disciplinary action should be taken against him. The Tribunal cannot go further and justify the action of the legal practitioner. No man can ever be justified in disseminating defamatory matter unless he can bring himself within one of the exceptions to S. 499, Penal Code, or unless his action is privileged in other respects. In the matter of : an Advocate.

———Misconduct—Exclusion from practice—Reinstating of.

The High Court has the power to reinstate a Pleader even though the Court, for professional misconduct, had struck him off the roll. What does or does not constitute money-lending business must depend on the facts and circumstances of each case and is not capable of an exact definition. The question is a mixed question of fact and law and the answer to the question must depend on the facts found in each particular case; an element of continuity and habit is essential to constitute the exercise of a profession or business. The fact that a legal practitioner, who is appointed as the managing trustee of an estate, in using the funds of the estate, was in fact lending Trust money to himself and thereby committed a serious breach of trust, in itself is not necessarily sufficient to constitute professional misconduct. But, held, that in the circumstances in the case, when the legal practitioner as managing trustee altered the terms of a mortgage, agreeing that the beneficiaries should be paid only 5½ per cent interest, when the mortgagor was liable under the mortgage which was transferred to pay 6½ per cent., and another alteration in the terms of the mortgage by which the mortgagor was given the right to pay off at any time without any prior notice to the mortgagee the whole of the principal sum or any part thereof not being less than £100 was effected in order to facilitate dubious transactions, led to the conclusion that he was considering the interests of himself in preference to and to the detriment of the interests of the beneficiaries of the estate for whom he was trustee. *George Frier Grahame v. The practice of filing of the memorandum of the appeal on the last day of limitation knowing full well that it was understamped and hoping that the Court would be persuaded to accept the deficiency later, is certainly not in accordance with the high traditions of the legal profession. The test that the Court has to apply in considering whether an Advocate should be struck off the roll of Advocates is whether the proved misconduct of the Advocate is such that he must be regarded as unworthy to remain a member of the honourable profession to which he has been admitted, and unfit to be entrusted with the responsible duties that an Advocate is called upon to perform. The public are entitled to receive disinterested, sincere and honest treatment and advice from the Advocates to whom they repair for counsel and succour in their time of need; and the Court has always insisted that members of the legal profession "should stand free from all suspicion." In the matter of : an Advocate.

-----Misconduct and suspension—Reinstatement.

The High Court has power to reinstate a legal practitioner dismissed for misconduct. But he will not be reinstated as a matter of course after a certain length of time if his conduct during that time is not called in question. The nature of the offence or misconduct for which he was debarred, the length of time which has elapsed since his dismissal, the extent to which he has been tried in other walks of life, the opportunities he had of acting honestly in the face of temptations and the opinions of respectable persons who have had personal experience of his honesty are the important determining factors. In the matter of: R., a Mukhtar, Budaun. (F. -----Privilege — Advocate — Disciplinary action.

There is always a limit beyond which Counsel should not go in attacking the opposite party or his witnesses. A Counsel has a very valuable privilege in that he is not liable in other than exceptional circumstances, to civil or criminal proceedings on account of anything which he may say in Court on behalf of his clients. But that privilege imposes a corresponding responsibility and a Counsel has to be very careful not to make any attack upon parties or witnesses engaged in the case, which goes beyond what is fairly necessary for the presentation of his own client's case. As a general rule, the only step which can be taken against an Advocate who abuses his privilege is for the Court to take disciplinary action. Ramkrishna Bhai Thakur v. J. D. Davar.

-----Reference to Tribunal—Procedure.

Under the Bar Councils Act, the Court, when a complaint is made, can only dismiss it summarily or refer it to a Tribunal of the Bar Council to inquire into, and the Court would not generally be justified in dismissing a petition summarily unless it is satisfied that, even if the allegations in the petition be proved, there would be no case for taking -----Rights and duties.

A counsel, like a Judge, should not be subject to fear for the consequences of anything which he might say in the course of his duty. Where no malice is imputed and a pleader speaks under instructions from his client, no Criminal or Civil Proceeding would lie against him for defamatory statement. A pleader is not only justified to state what the accused's defence really is but is bound to do so. He is not limited to the record in his attempt to furnish an explanation of the evidence which is consistent with his client's innocence. Instructed or not, it is the duty of a pleader to make a suggestion, if he thinks it might advance the interests of his client. In re : Achalsing. (F. B.) 10 Cr. L. J. 514 : 4 I. C. 176 : 3 S. L. -----Rights and duties.

A distinction must be drawn between the complainant and his Advocate for it may well be that the complainant had knowledge which his Advocate did not possess. Moreover, it is obvious, an Advocate cannot be expected to constitute himself a Judge either of the law or facts of his client's case. He is his client's adviser and must act according to his instructions, provided always those instructions do not require that he should be guilty of an offence or of misconduct or that he should institute in a Court criminal proceedings which, to his own certain knowledge, are false. Moreover, it is his bounden duty to put into the complaint the material facts upon which the complaint is based and not wilfully by acts of omission to deceive the Court. *Emperor v. The onus of proving such special arrangement lies on the Pleader concerned. In the absence of proof of any special agreement to that effect, the mere fact that no fee is tendered or paid is no justification for the Pleader's refusal to attend to the client's interests. LEGAL PRACTITIONER ———Rights of.

The Legal Practitioners' (Fees) Act, XXI of 1926, not only allows a legal practitioner to settle, by a private agreement with his client, the terms of his engagement and the fee to be paid to him for his professional services, but also authorises him to enforce that agreement by legal proceedings taken for the recovery of the fee due to him. There can, therefore, be no doubt that the Indian Law does not now require a legal practitioner to receive the whole of his fee before the hearing of the case, but permits him to make an agreement for the payment in future of the whole or part of his fee. The Statute while conferring upon a legal practitioner the right to recover the fee promised by his client, does not authorize the latter to realise it from his defeated adversary. The right of a successful party to recover the fee from the opposite party depends upon the rule framed by the High Court which contemplates that only the fee actually paid before the hearing can be allowed as costs on taxation. *Shiva Narain Jafa v. LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT (XVIII OF 1879)

-----Withdrawal from case.

An accused person is entitled to select the Advocate whom he desires to appear for him, and the prosecution cannot fetter that choice merely by serving a subpoena on the Advocate to appear as a witness. On the other hand, the Court is bound to see that the due administration of justice is not in any way embarrassed. If therefore a Court comes to the conclusion that a trial will be embarrassed by the appearance of an Advocate, who has been called as a witness by the other side, and if notwithstanding the Court's expression of its opinion, the Advocate refuses to withdraw, in such a case, the Court has inherent jurisdiction to require the Advocate to withdraw. *Emperor v. While the High Court will not interfere with or have regard to any man's political opinions or opinions on public questions, it is impossible to allow a person, who proclaims, or practices what is called the doctrine of "civil disobedience"; to be a part of the machinery of the Courts which exists for the very purpose of the thwarting of civil disobedience and the enforcement of civil obedience. He may be perfectly honourable man; may act from conscientious motives; he may, in conceivable circumstances, be a patriot. It may be imagined that he should not be punished or even prosecuted for

In the case of a Pleader's conviction for a criminal offence, the procedure prescribed in Ss. 13 and 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act need not be followed, and the case re-tried under the Act. -----S. 13—Appointment of Tribunal.

The Legal Practitioners Act in S. 13 contemplates the High Court directing an inquiry before action is taken. The Court has duties to perform under the Act and the first duty is to nominate a person or persons to hold the inquiry into the alleged misconduct. Unless the Tribunal is constituted beforehand, the inquiry cannot be lawful. -----S. 13—Interpretation.

'Any other reasonable cause' must be given a wide meaning and must not be construed in a limited way on the principle of cjusdem generis. Dishonourable or dishonest conduct not in the discharge of professional duty would fall within the purview of 'reasonable cause' in S. 13. (The application of the doctrine of cjusdem generis considered). When a Vakil does that which involves dishonesty, it is for the interest of suitors that the Court should interpose and prevent a man guilty of such misconduct from acting as a Vakil of the Court. In the matter of : Two Second Grade Pleaders.

11 Cr. L. J. 310 :
6 I. C. 313 : 1 M. W. N. 163.

-----S. 13—Interpretation.

That the words 'other reasonable cause' mentioned in Cl. (f) to S. 13, Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879), are not restricted to matters cjusdem generis with the matters mentioned in Cls. (a) to (e) of the section. In re : Ganapathy Sastry. (F. B.)

3 I. C. 344 : 19 M. L. J. 504 :

-----S. 13—Interpretation.

Though Cl. (f), S. 13, of the Act need not be read cjusdem generis with the other clauses of the section and cases of moral turpitude unconnected with the discharge by a legal practitioner of his professional duty may come within the expression 'any other reasonable cause,' yet in the absence of definite rules to that effect, engagement in trade or business or other occupation, however derogatory to the dignity of the profession or detrimental to the discharge of the duties of a legal practitioner, would hardly come within the expression. In re: Ramesh Chandra Sen Gupta, a Pleader, Patuakhali. (S. B.) 37 Cr. L. J. 590 : 162 I. C. 517 : 40 C. W. N. 377 : 63 C. L. J. 127 : 63 Cal. 855 : 8 R. C. 605 : A. I. R. 1936 Cal. 205.

—S. 13—Jurisdiction of Court.

There is ample jurisdiction in a Court to investigate cases of moral turpitude unconnected with the discharge by a practitioner of his professional duty. The Court has complete jurisdiction to remove and suspend pleaders and Mukhtears for causes rendering them unfit for the continued exercise of their profession. But the case of a suitor stands on a different footing, though the suitor be a Pleader or a Mukhtear. Narendra Nath Das v. Siva Kumar Jha. 21 Cr. L. J. 726 : 58 I. C. 150 : 1 P. L. T. 571 : 5 P. —S. 13—Misconduct.

A Pleader is amenable to the disciplinary jurisdiction of the High Court for failure to appear for his client at the trial of the case after receiving the fees thereof or, in the event of unavoidable circumstances precluding his appearance, for failure to make the necessary arrangement for his client. *Munireddi v. —S. 13—Misconduct.

A Pleader, who receives instructions, without making proper enquiry, from an unauthorized person, who is neither the recognized agent of the party for whom he is retained, nor the guardian, servant, relative or friend of such party authorized to give instructions on his behalf, is guilty of misconduct under S. 13, Legal Practitioners' Act. In the matter of: Jugal Chandra. 17 Cr. A Vakil is bound to appear in Court and conduct his client's case even if the fee or any portion thereof remains unpaid, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary or at least notice to that effect to the client in sufficient time to enable him to make other arrangements. *Munireddi v. Immediately after the death of a person, a mukhtear was pressed by persons interested in establishing a Will, to sign it as an attesting witness. He took time to consider the matter. Subsequently in a moment of weakness, he signed as an attesting witness; Will bore what purported to be the signature of the deceased and which was like his genuine signature with which the mukhtear was familiar as his officer and which signature was subsequently found to be genuine by the Court. The mukhtear was examined by the Probate Court, but he made no attempt to perjure himself and freely disclosed what he had done. He had been a member of the profession for over 25 years and had borne a good character and was sincerely repentant: Held, that although, his conduct was wholly unworthy of the profession, yet under the circumstances, he should be dealt with mercifully. In re: Rudra Prasad. 13 Cr. LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT (XVIII OF 1879)

—S. 13—Misconduct—Document signed by legal practitioner—False statements—Responsibility of legal practitioner—Misconduct.

Legal practitioners must realise that if they make, or associate themselves with statements which they know are dishonest and untruthful for the purpose of misleading the Court, they must, on proof of misconduct, bear their personal responsibility for such statements and it will be no defence for them to say that it was done in the interests of the client or at his instigation or at the instigation of a colleague at the Bar, or that they were so negligent in the matter that they did not read the matter or consider it at all. In the matter of: Ahmad Ashraf.

—S. 13—Misconduct—Duty of Counsel in drafting pleadings and in cross-examination.

Counsel has to depend upon the statement that the client makes, the penalty being that if the client is not telling the truth, he may probably lose the case. In such circumstances, the rule is that the client is entitled to have the particular document drafted according to the instructions given. Counsel must not, however, import personal ill-will into pleadings and must refrain from making charges against witnesses in examination or cross-examination for which there is no conceivable ground. It may become the positive duty of Counsel to tear a man's character into pieces if his character is in issue but only when the fullest material exists. No questions attacking a witness's honour should be put unless and until Counsel by inquiry has satisfied himself that the damaging fact is well-founded, and this he ought to do before he comes into Court. In the matter of: Raj Bahadur.

The words "any such misconduct as aforesaid" as used in S. 14, Legal Practitioners Act, 1879, relate to all the cases set out in S. 13 of the Act. The authority therefore to inquire into a matter falling within the purview of S. 13, Cl. (f), of the Act is not confined to the High Court, but may be exercised by a Subordinate Court before which the Pleader or mukhtear whose conduct is called in question may be practising. In re : Muhammad Abdul Hai.

(a) and (b) of S. 13. In all other cases the authority to frame a charge and hold an enquiry is vested exclusively in the High Court. —Ss. 13, 14—Misconduct—Inquiry into Jurisdiction.

Proceedings can be taken by a subordinate Court against a legal practitioner practising in the Court in respect of an act which is found to come under Cl. (f) of S. 13, Legal Practitioners Act. Where a charge against a Mukhtear is under S. 13, Cl. (b) of the Legal Practitioners Act but as the result of an enquiry held by a subordinate Court it is found that the act of the Mukhtear comes under S. 3, Cl. (f) of the Act, it is open to the High Court to avail itself of the enquiry already made by the subordinate Court and proceed to deal with the case itself, even if the subordinate Court had no jurisdiction to make the enquiry. In the matter of: Hari Prosunno Mookerjee. 18 Cr. —Ss. 13, 14—Misconduct—Jurisdiction to inquire into—Jurisdiction—Competency of District Judge to enquire into a charge of misconduct—Touism—Chief Court's power of revision.

S. 14 of Act XVIII of 1879 applied to all clauses of S. 13 as amended by Act XI of 1896. Where any of the charges mentioned in S. 13 of the said Act is brought to the notice of any Court within whose local limits a Pleader is ordinarily practising, the presiding officer has jurisdiction to proceed against the Pleader under S. 14 and can report, in the manner prescribed thereunder, to the High Court for suspending or dismissing such Pleader in case the charge is made out. In acting under S. 14, the Court is bound to hold preliminary inquiry in order to find out distinctly what is the charge, and after satisfying itself that it is prima facie a true one, but not before, the Court can proceed to issue notice required in paras. 1 and 2 of the same section. Such a notice, if issued on a vague report, is liable to be set aside on revision by the High Court. In order to sustain a charge under Cl. (c) of S. 13, the gratification paid to the tout must be "out of any fee paid or payable to a Pleader" but does not include a payment made out of the —Ss. 13, 14—Misconduct—Proof, standard of.

L. J. 846 : 17 I. C. 718 : 17 C. W. N. 328.

There is no reason why the standard of proof of guilt in a case under the Legal Practitioners Act should differ from that which is necessary in any other legal proceedings. The proof which is required in order to convict on a criminal charge, is that which leaves no reasonable doubt in the mind of the Court that the offence has been committed, and the same standard ought to be applied to cases arising under the Legal Practitioners Act. Emperor v. Surjya Narayan Singh. 21 Cr. L. J. 636 : 57 I. C. 470 : 1 P. L. T. 372 : 2 U. P. L. R. Pat. 168 : A. I. R. 1920 Pat. 84.

—Ss. 13, 14—Suspension of Pleader—High Court, power of, to order action.

Under S. 13, Legal Practitioners Act, the High Court has absolute power, after such inquiry as it thinks fit, to suspend or dismiss a Pleader or Mukhtear from practice, even though the matter is referred to it under S. 14 by a Court having no jurisdiction to refer it under that section. In the matter of: Banamali Das. 24 Cr. —Ss. 13, 14—Misconduct—Unprofessional conduct—Entering deliberately into false defences in suits with intention to defraud.

Entering deliberately into false defences with the intention to defraud others of their just claims is a ground for action under Ss. 13 and 14, Legal Practitioners Act. Therefore, where a Mukhtear made defences which were deliberately false, and colluded with third parties with a view to injure and defraud his opponents who were other members of the same family; Held, that this was a reasonable cause for taking action against the Mukhtear. In re: Akhoy Narain. 12 Cr. L. J. 67 : 9 I. C. 362.

—Ss. 13, 14—Misconduct—What is—Contempt of Court—Disciplinary powers of Court.

The expression "such misconduct as aforesaid" in S. 14, Legal Practitioners Act, as amended by Act XI of 1896 is not restricted to "fraudulent or grossly improper conduct in the discharge of his professional duty," but is comprehensive enough to cover all cases of misconduct, whether they be included in Cl. (b) or in one or more of the other clauses of S. 13. Consequently a subordinate Court is competent to inquire into a matter falling within the purview of any of the clauses of S. 13, when the Pleader or mukhtar whose conduct is called in question practises in such Court. Ss. 13 and 14 are intended to cover the same ground in so far as the character of the misconduct is concerned, these two sections supplement each other, but whether action is taken against a legal practitioner under the one or the other of the sections, the final order can be passed only by the High Court. Under S. 13, Legal Practitioners Act, it is not essential that the enquiry should be conducted directly by the High Court but the enquiry may well be made by a Subordinate Court under the direction of the High Court. The only essential is that notice must be given to the legal practitioner concerned to show cause against suspension or dismissal and the notice must formulate the charges with great particularity and precision, so as to enable the practitioner to know the charges he is called upon to meet. In the matter of : Rasik Lal Nag.

—S. 13, Cls. (b) and (f)—Misconduct—Evidence Act (I of 1872), S. 126—Pleader refusing to disclose professional communication on being questioned by Court—Professional misconduct.

A Pleader, during the course of the examination of a witness, asked the Court to make a note of what he represented the witness had stated and also his demeanour, but the Court observed that it did not hear what the witness had said. Thereupon the Pleader left the Court-room saying that he would withdraw from the case. Afterwards he returned with an application stating that the Court had not noted the statement and demeanour of the witness, and got it presented by his client. The Pleader, on being asked by the Court whether he was instructed by his client to write the application, declined to answer, relying on S. 126 of the Evidence Act: Held, (1) that an action against the Pleader under clauses (b) and (f) of S. 13 of the Legal Practitioners Act could not be sustained, as it was not necessary for him to consult his client before drafting the petition, if the facts took place within his own cognizance and were such as to endanger his client's interest; (2) that in relying upon S. 126 of the Evidence Act, the Pleader showed no disregard to the Court's authority. *Satgur Prasad v. LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT (XVIII OF 1879)

—S. 13 (f)—Interpretation.

The expression "any other reasonable cause" in S. 13 (f), Legal Practitioners Act, should not be understood in an ejusdem generis sense, it covers cases other than those of professional misconduct in the ordinary sense but which render a Pleader unfit for the practice of his profession. *Subramania Iyer v. —S. 13 (f)—Interpretation.

The words "any other reasonable cause" in Sub-s. (f) to S. 13, are not confined to acts done in a professional capacity by a legal practitioner, and are not restricted to reasonable cause of the same class or description referred to in the preceding sub-sections. In the matter of: Shyamapada Bhattacharji. 33 Cr. Although misconduct other than professional may fall under Cl. (f) of S. 13, Legal Practitioners Act, its impropriety has to be considered with reference to the Pleader's professional capacity and it is only if the misconduct can be reasonably held to affect it that it would fall within Cl. (f) as the Act deals with a Pleader only in his professional capacity and not in his private capacity. Subramania Iyer v. District Magistrate, Salem. 21 Cr. L. J. 246 :

Where an allegation against a legal practitioner amounts to a charge of aiding and abetting or conspiring to commit a criminal offence, the correct procedure to be followed is that proceedings under the Legal Practitioners Act should not be taken, but that, if it is thought necessary to take action, it should be by way of a criminal prosecution. In the course of a Land Registration Appeal, the Commissioner found that the conduct of a Mukhtear, who had no licence to practise in a Revenue Office, had been grossly improper and fraudulent, because he had fraudulently transferred certain properties and made certain discrepant statements, one or other of which must have been false, he accordingly submitted a reference to the High Court recommending the Mukhtear's dismissal: Held, that as the misconduct according to the Commissioner's report was committed not in the capacity of a Mukhtear but as a private individual, and came to light only at the hearing of an appeal in a case to which he was not a party but only a witness, the matter did not fall within the purview of S. 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act and the Commissioner had no authority to report the Mukhtear to the High Court. In re : Dinesh Chandra Bhattacharjee.

S. 14—Proceedings under, nature of.

The enquiry contemplated under S. 14, Legal Practitioners Act, is of an administrative nature and is not a civil proceeding, the intention of the Act being to provide a procedure or remedy of a disciplinary character for practitioners practising in Subordinate Courts without giving the Courts the power to inflict a penalty for abuse of discipline but only to recommend to the High Court the course to be taken. It is neither civil nor criminal, but purely designed for the purpose of discipline. Proceedings under S. 14 cannot be transferred under S. 24, C. P. C. read with S. 141 of the Code or by virtue of the powers of superintendence vested in High Courts under S. 107 of the Government of India Act. Neither S. 24 nor S. 141, C. P. C., applies to the Legal Practitioners Act, because the proceedings under the latter Act are not civil proceedings in a Court of civil jurisdiction to which alone the C. P. C. is applicable. In the matter of ; Janak Kishore.

or chief Court can be invoked for the purpose of revising orders passed under that section. The High Courts have, however, held that in the exercise of the general powers of superintendence and control vested in them under the provisions of S. 15 of the High Courts Act, they have jurisdiction to interfere with such orders, and in Man Singh v. Emperor, 3 I. C. 977 ; 11 P. R. 1909 Cr. ; 115 P. L. R. 1909 ; 10 Cr. L. J. 443 ; 28 P. W. But S. 18 of the Punjab Courts Act gives the Chief Court a power of superintendence and control only over Civil Courts and the provisions of that section are not relevant to a case where the Chief Court is asked to revise the order of a District Magistrate. *Sardar-ud-Din v. The District Magistrate, on receiving the report, declared F to be a tout: Held, that the procedure adopted by the District Magistrate was entirely wrong; (i) because the petition against F did not contain any allegation that he was a tout and the District Magistrate had no power to ask for inquiry under S. 36 (a); (ii) because the District Magistrate acted illegally in relying upon the resolution of the Executive Committee of the Bar Association as it was not a resolution of the Bar Association itself at a specially convened meeting and further the resolution itself was only to the effect that the antecedents of F were bad. Fakir Chand v. Emperor, 31 Cr. L. J. 1219: 127 I. C. 362: 31 P. L. R. 212: A. I. R. 1930 Lah. 405.

—S. 36—Declaration of touts—Procedure in declaring person a tout—District Magistrate whether can delegate his powers to Subordinate Magistrate.

Before directing the inclusion of a person's name in the list of touts, it is necessary that proceedings should be taken in accordance with S. 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act, and the person be given an opportunity of showing cause against the inclusion. The duties to be undertaken under S. 36, Legal Practitioners Act, cannot be delegated by any of the officers mentioned therein to their subordinates. Mohan Das Pujhari v. Emperor. (S. B.) 22 Cr. L. J. 66: 59 I. C. 322: 1919 Pat. 273: A. I. R. 1919 Pat. 45.

—S. 36—Declaration of tout—Revision.

An order declaring a person to be a tout is one which very seriously affects the character and prospects of the person against whom it is passed. It is, therefore, competent to the Chief Court, in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction, to scrutinize such orders with the object of satisfying itself that there has been a compliance with the provisions of law and that the person affected has been given full opportunity of meeting the charge brought against him. The District Judge is bound to examine witnesses named by him and to summon them for the purpose, after the evidence against the person has been produced. Where the District Judge declined to do so, the Chief Court on revision set aside the order and directed him to summon witnesses named by the person declared as a tout and record the evidence and pass orders on the whole evidence on the record. Bule Khan v. Emperor. 10 Cr. L. J. 447: 3 I. C. 982: 120 P. L. R. 1909.

—S. 36—Declaration of touts—Revision—Jurisdiction.

The District and Sessions Judge of Meerut held an inquiry under S. 36, Legal Practitioners Act, 1879, as the result of which he ordered certain persons to be proclaimed to be touts and excluded from the precincts of the Courts in the judicial division. The parties affected applied to the High Court against the Judge's order under S. 15 of

LEGAL PRACTITIONERS ACT (XVIII OF 1879)

Statute 24 and 25 Vict. Chap. CIV. On this application being laid before a Division Bench for disposal, it was held, that the disciplinary powers of the High Court under S. 15 of the Statute being exercisable only by the Full Court, a Bench of two Judges had no jurisdiction to adjudicate upon the application, neither had a single Judge jurisdiction to admit it. In re : Kedar Nath. 9 Cr. —S. 36—Declaration of tout—Revision.

Though by virtue of powers vested in the Chief Court, under S. 13, Punjab Courts Act, it is competent to the Court to revise an order passed by a Subordinate Court, under S. 36, Legal Practitioners Act, declaring a person to be a tout, yet as very considerable discretion in the matter of preparing and publishing its list of touts is afforded to the Subordinate Courts, the Chief Court will not interfere with any order passed under S. 36, unless it can be shown that the provisions of that section have not been duly complied with. Similarly, the Chief Court will, in a proper case, interfere if it finds that there is no evidence whatever to support the finding of the Subordinate Court or that the evidence, such as it is, cannot legally be accepted as proving that the petitioner is a tout. Man Singh v. Emperor. 10 Cr. L. J. 443: 3 I. C. 977: 115 P. L. R. 1909.

—S. 36—Declaration of tout.

S. 36, Legal Practitioners Act, requires proof by evidence of general repute or otherwise before a man can be declared a tout. Such evidence should be taken in the ordinary manner and brought on the record, and where this is not done, the order of declaration cannot be maintained. Shankar Singh v. Emperor. 13 Cr. L. J. 467: 15 I. C. 407: 112 P. L. R. 1912: 12 P. W. R. 1912 Cr.

—S. 36—Declaration of tout—Tout—Inquiry to be made by Magistrate himself—Power not to be delegated—Evidence to be recorded—Opportunity of cross-examination of witness to be given to alleged tout.

An inquiry, under S. 36, Legal Practitioners Act, must be made by the District Magistrate himself, and he cannot delegate his powers to any subordinate officer. The decision of a Court determining that a person is a tout must be based on substantial legal evidence. The person against whom the evidence is directed must have an opportunity of cross-

———S. 36—Declaration of touts—Tout, person proclaimed as—Evidence of general repute, admissibility of—“General repute or otherwise”, meaning of—S. 36 (3), interpretation of.

The evidence which may legitimately be tendered in a case under S. 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act, is of general repute. The phrase ‘general repute’ in the section clearly includes hearsay evidence, which may be tested when admissible by cross-examination, just as any other evidence may be tested and challenged. The words ‘or otherwise’ are clearly intended to include all the ordinary modes of proof known to the law which might otherwise be said to have been impliedly excluded, such as personal observation, evidence of conduct, admissions in conversation and the like, proved by first hand testimony. The recognised principles applicable in cases under S. 110, Cr. P. C., apply to cases under S. 36, Legal Practitioners Act, Sub-s. (3), S. 30, Legal Practitioners Act, means that the exhibition of the copy list there referred to is necessary to constitute a man a proclaimed tout. A mere removal or failure, however, to keep the list exhibited in the Court of a District Judge has not the effect of cancelling the list altogether, inasmuch as it is to be exhibited in all Courts subordinate to the District Court and its mere removal in one Court out of many does not per se cancel the original order. Kalka Prasad v. Emperor.

The failure of an alleged tout to whom a notice under S. 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act is issued, to appear in Court to receive orders does not, therefore, amount to an offence under S. 174 of the Penal Code. *P. ————S. 36—Tout—Procedure.

An inquiry under S. 36, Legal Practitioners Act, to include a person in the list of touts is not governed by the procedure prescribed by Order VII, r. 11 of the C. P. C., or by the procedure regulating the conduct of enquiries under Ss. 107-112, Cr. P. C., or even that for an inquiry under S. 14, legal practitioners Act, against a Legal Practitioner. A Court acting under S. 36, Legal Practitioners Act, would sufficiently comply with its provisions if it called upon the alleged tout to show cause why his name should not be included in the list, provided an opportunity was given to him to rebut the evidence tendered and otherwise to place his case before the Court. Where a Court is moved to take proceedings against a person under S. 36 on allegations neither clear nor definite but the petition contains a prayer to declare the respondent a tout, and proceedings are initiated, the alleged tout being asked to defend himself under the section, and there is legal evidence on the record on which a person could be declared a tout, the procedure adopted is neither irregular nor without jurisdiction and the High Court will not, before the termination of the inquiry in the lower Court, interfere in revision under S. 115,

An enquiry under S. 36, Legal Practitioners Act, need not be confined to the case of one person, and one person alone. The section creates a special jurisdiction, but does not define the details of the mode in which that jurisdiction is to be exercised. The course to be adopted should be such as would do substantial justice. It would be unreasonable to include in such an enquiry the cases of persons who frequent different Courts as touts; but the cases of persons who are alleged to work as touts in the same Court may be included in one enquiry. Where certain proceedings are open to objection on the ground of multifariousness, the objection will not be entertained for the first time by a Court of Appeal or of revision. *Hari Charan v. LETTERS PATENT (CALCUTTA)

When the alleged misconduct of an attorney is the subject of consideration, it is expedient to initiate proceedings by rule, or motion or notice calling on the attorney to answer the matter in the affidavits of the applicant. Service should be personal, a copy of the affidavits should be served with the rule or notice of motion, and the returnable date should allow sufficient time for an answer to be put in. Ordinarily ten days should suffice. A verification is a matter of great importance as possessing the security of being made under the sanction of a solemn declaration for which the person making it would be liable to the penalties attaching to the crime of giving false evidence if the declaration were false to his knowledge. In re : An Attorney. As His Majesty the King is supreme over all persons and Courts within his Dominions, a right of appeal in all cases, civil and criminal, to the King in Council, exists, from the highest Court of each separate Colony, Province, State or Possession, whether it be a Court of error or not, except so far as the prerogative in this behalf has been expressly surrendered. The Judicial Committee do not, as a rule, advise His Majesty to grant appeals in criminal cases, except where questions of great and general importance, likely to occur often, are raised. Such appeals lie either by the right of grant, in pursuance of leave obtained by the appellant from the Court appealed from, or by reason of special leave granted by the Judicial Committee. The latter appeals arise, either where the Court below does not possess power to grant leave to appeal, or where leave to appeal has been refused by the Court below, or where the leave to appeal was granted on some special point and the appellant wishes to raise points not included in the leave to appeal. But whether leave is granted by the Court appealed from or by the Judicial Committee, the answer to the question whether the case is a fit one for appeal, must depend on the same considerations; the grant of the leave to appeal is a step ancillary to the determination of the appeal and the principles which regulate the ultimate decision of the appeal cannot be ignored when an application for leave is examined. *Barendra Kumar Ghose v. ———Cl. 8—Misconduct by Pleader—Inquiry into—Procedure—Legal practitioners—Disciplinary jurisdiction, nature of—Procedure.

Disciplinary proceedings taken against a legal practitioner under Cl. 8, Letters Patent, cannot be regarded as criminal in their character, they are sometimes described as quasi-criminal, but only for the reason that they may result in penalties. Strictly speaking, these proceedings are neither civil suits nor criminal prosecutions. The High Court exercises a special jurisdiction over legal practitioners in pursuance of the authority conferred upon it by the Letters Patent or an Act of the Legislature, and has inherent power to apply such rules of procedure as may ensure a fair trial of the matter requiring adjudication. What is essential is, that the parties concerned should have a proper notice and a reasonable opportunity to be heard. An Advocate or a Vakil may be struck off the rolls for an offence which has no relation whatsoever to his character as a legal practitioner, but the mere circumstance that he has been convicted of an offence does not make it imperative for the Court to remove or suspend him from practice. On the other hand, it is not necessary that the act of a legal practitioner, which is relied upon for striking his name off the rolls, should have subjected him to anything like, general infamy or imputation of bad character. If an Advocate or a Vakil deliberately joins, or continues to be a member of an Association which has been declared to be unlawful under the provisions of a Statute, he renders himself liable

———S. 5—Sufficient cause—Absence of—Procedure.

A criminal appeal filed after the expiry of the prescribed period of limitation may be admitted if the Court is satisfied that the appellant had sufficient reason for not preferring the appeal within the period of limitation. Where the Appellate Court is not satisfied that there was sufficient reason to excuse the delay, it has no power to extend the period and admit the appeal. The proper procedure in such a case would be to move the High Court to exercise its powers of revision. Where, however, a criminal appeal was wrongly admitted out of time, an order of acquittal will not be interfered with in revision by the High Court, unless there has been any gross miscarriage of justice which ought to be remedied. V. Janikaramayya v. Nimmagadda Brahmayya.

Petitioner was plaintiff in a civil suit which was decreed. He subsequently made an application under S. 476, Cr. P. C., for an order to prosecute the defendants, the Trial Court rejected the application. Petitioner filed an appeal under S. 476-B, and attached a copy of the order of the Trial Court rejecting his application to the appeal. His appeal was dismissed on the ground that it was barred by time and that he was not entitled to deduct from the period of limitation prescribed, the time spent by him in obtaining a copy of the order appealed against: Held, that under the rules of the Court, the petitioner was bound to file along with his appeal a copy of the order appealed against and that, therefore, under S. 12, Limitation Act, he was entitled to deduct the period spent by him in obtaining a copy of that order from the period of limitation prescribed for the appeal and that consequently his appeal was within time and must be decided on the merits: *Daulat Ram v. A proceeding under S. 145, Cr. P. After the plaintiff had examined three witnesses on his behalf, he filed a petition before the Magistrate praying that he might be allowed to withdraw the case, saying that he would not enter upon the land until the matter in dispute had been settled by a Civil Court. Thereupon the Magistrate recorded an order declaring the defendants to be in possession of the lands in dispute and directing the plaintiff "not to enter upon the lands and not to disturb the second party's possession thereof till the latter be evicted therefrom by due process of law." In a suit brought by the plaintiff more than three years after the Magistrate's order to recover possession of the land: Held, (1) that the suit was barred by Limitation under Article 47, Limitation Act, inasmuch as the Magistrate's order must be taken as deciding the question of possession in favour of the defendant. *Yar Mohammad Saha v. LOCAL INQUIRY

See also Jurisdiction.

LOCAL INSPECTION

See also Cr. P. C., 1898, Ss. 145, 550.

—Kinds of.

There are three kinds of local inspections: (1) those authorized or directed by the Cr. P. C. and which are governed by the rules and limitations imposed by that Code, (2) those which are in the nature of a view by the Jury laid down in S. 203 of the Code, and the Magistrate, having the functions of both Judge and Jury in cases decided by them, may view the place in any case, to follow or understand the evidence, and (3) those held by the Magistrates to satisfy themselves on certain disputed points. Alia Rai v. Jhingur Tewari. 13 Cr. L. J. 156 : 13 I. C. 844 : 16 C. W. N. 426 : 15 C. L. J. 403 : 39 Cal. 476.

—Magistrate, power of, to view the locus in quo for understanding evidence taken.

It is legitimate for a Magistrate trying a case to make a local inspection at the request of the parties and in the presence of their Pleaders for the purpose of enabling him to understand the evidence which had been taken in the case. Aziz Mandal v. Girish Chandra Choudhury. 23 Cr. L. J. 502 : 68 I. C. 38 : A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 320.

—Record of inspection—Failure to make—Effect of.

It cannot be said that in all cases, an omission to place on record the results of a local inspection is a fatal error of jurisdiction apart from any prejudice which it may cause to the accused. Alia Rai v. Jhingur Tewari. 13 Cr. L. J. 156 : 13 I. C. 844 : 16 C. W. N. 426 : 15 C. L. J. 403 : 39 Cal. 476.

—Record of inspection—Failure to make—Effect of.

Merely local observation cannot be allowed to override the necessity for evidence and a case cannot be decided merely on an observation made by the Court locally. It is not a positive rule of law that a note must be placed on the record on the spot at the time of the local inspection, and if the omission has not prejudiced any party, the irregularity cannot exclude the relevant and important matter—the Magistrate's local inspection. A Magistrate cannot import into his judgment matters of opinion and inference based on circumstances not on the record. Alia Rai v. Jhingur Tewari. 13 Cr. L. J. 156 : 13 I. C. 844 : 16 C. W. N. 426 : 15 C. L. J. 403 : 39 Cal. 476.

LOCAL INVESTIGATION

—Record of inspection—Failure to make—Effect of.

Where a Magistrate made no note at the time of his local inspection, as he should have done, but embodied the result of his inspection in his judgment delivered four days later and when what he saw must have been fresh in his memory: Held, that his omission to make a note at the time, though irregular, could not be said to have caused any failure of justice. Alia Rai v. Jhingur Tewari. 13 Cr. L. J. 156 : 13 I. C. 844 : 16 C. W. N. 426 : 15 C. L. J. 403 : 39 Cal. 476.

LOCAL INSPECTION BY MAGISTRATE

See also Cr. P. C., 1898, S. 154.

—Magistrate's duty to put inspection note on record.

There is nothing in law to prevent a Magistrate from making local inspection, but in order to give an opportunity to the accused to remove any wrong impression created on the mind of the Magistrate, it is fair that a note of the inspection should be placed on the record, and the Magistrate commits a grave irregularity particularly when without placing a note of the inspection on the record, he uses the information gathered locally as substantive evidence in the case. Parmeshwar Lal Miller v. Emperor. 23 Cr. L. J. 440 : 67 I. C. 616 : 3 P. L. T. 347 : A. I. R. 1922 Pat. 296.

—By Magistrate, when to be made.

A local inspection by a Magistrate must be held sparingly and only for the purpose of elucidating and understanding the evidence in the case and it should never be substituted for evidence in the case. The party against whom the result of the local inspection is used, is greatly prejudiced and is put to an irreparable disadvantage in not being able to remove the wrong impression from the mind of the Magistrate, by cross-examining him. The danger is intensified by the Magistrate holding the local enquiry ex parte. Ram Sahai Singh v. Dwarka Singh. 22 Cr. L. J. 424 : 61 I. C. 712 : 1 P. L. T. 569.

LOCAL INVESTIGATION

LOCAL INVESTIGATION BY MAGISTRATE

—————How to be held—Magistrate, duty of—Appeal—Appellate Court, whether influenced by trial Court's finding of fact.

If in trying a case it is necessary to have a local investigation, great care ought to be taken by the Magistrate, who holds the local investigation to see that he is not approached by an outsider or allows his mind to be affected by outside matters. The proper thing for him to do is to be attended by a representative of either side for the purpose of identifying the points which are material in the case on the one side and the other, and he ought not to allow himself to enter into general conversation with the people of the neighbourhood about the case. *Chandra Kumar Ghose v. LOWER BURMA VILLAGE ACT, 1889

In a prosecution for failure to comply with a notice of ejectment from land said to form part of the demarcated grazing ground, an admission by the accused of the receipt of notice and of his failure to comply with it does not amount to an admission that he has committed an offence, as it does not imply that the accused admits his liability to ejectment. The prosecution must prove not only that the accused was served with a notice and disobeyed it but that he was actually occupying the land in contravention of rules under the Land and Revenue Act. Rules 51 and 52 only refer to land available for temporary occupation under S. 19 of the Act, and do not apply to demarcated grazing grounds. Madar Sahib v. Emperor.

A breach of rules made by the Commissioner under S. 6 (1) of the Lower Burma Village Act, 1889, does not justify a conviction under S. 9 (2) of the Act. LUNACY ACT (IV OF 1912)

—Scope.

The Lunacy Act deals specifically and under separate headings with the two branches of proceedings, executive and judicial. In the matter of : Douglas Donald. 24 Cr. L. J. 664; 73 I. C. 696; 4 Lah. 1; A. I. R. 1924 Lah. 55.

—S. 14—Order by District Magistrate under—Revision—Remedy.

An order passed by a District Magistrate under Part II, Lunacy Act, is a purely executive order and cannot form the subject-matter of a revision application to the High Court, nor has the High Court the power to interfere with such an order under Cl. 12, Letters Patent, or in the exercise of its powers of superintendence. A person considering himself aggrieved by an executive order passed by the District Magistrate under S. 14, Part II, Lunacy Act, may apply under Part III of the Act for a regular inquisition conducted by a judicial officer. The result of such inquisition is conclusive and overrides and overrules any order which may have been passed summarily by the executive authority. In the matter of : Douglas Donald. 24 Cr. R. J. 664; 73 I. C. 696; 4 Lah. 1; A. I. R. 1924 Lah. 55.

—S. 15—Interpretation.

The words, 'such relative or other person' relate to the words, 'or is cruelly treated or neglected by any relative or other person having charge of him'. Where the case alleged is not that the alleged lunatic is "cruelly treated or neglected" but that he is not "under proper care or control", there is no necessity of formally summoning his relatives with whom the lunatic is living. Interference by the High Court is not necessary on the ground that no summons was formally issued. Hoshang P. Talati v. Emperor. 37 Cr. L. J. 1082; 165 I. C. 119; 29 S. L. R. 431; 9 R. S. 80; A. I. R. 1936 Sind 156.

—S. 15 (1)—Scope.

The words in S. 15 (1), Lunacy Act, are wide in their scope and personal presentation of a written complaint is not necessary to direct detention of a person as lunatic. Hoshang P. Talati v. Emperor. 37 Cr. L. J. 1082;

LUNACY ACT (IV OF 1912)

165 I. C. 119; 29 S. L. R. 431; 9 R. S. 80; A. I. R. 1936 Sind 156.

—S. 16—Applicability.

S. 16 relates only to the temporary detention of the alleged lunatic for a specific time for the purpose of observation by a Medical Officer and it will apply also to a case where the Magistrate acting under S. 14 thinks detention necessary for the purpose of observation. Again, where S. 14 applies to a case by reason of S. 15 (3), the two provisos of S. 14 will also apply if the facts are such as to attract their application. Hoshang P. Talati v. Emperor. 37 Cr. L. J. 1082;

165 I. C. 119; 29 S. L. R. 431; 9 R. S. 80; A. I. R. 1936 Sind 156.

—S. 16—Purpose.

The purpose of S. 16 is to limit the period of detention for the purpose of observation. The first period of detention is limited to ten days and the maximum period permitted under the section is 30 days. If, therefore, before the expiry of 10 days the Magistrate is satisfied with the Medical Officer's report and the Medical Officer himself does not require the full 10 days, there is nothing to prevent the Magistrate varying his order and shortening the period of detention as first ordered. Hoshang P. Talati v. Emperor. 37 Cr. L. J. 1082;

165 I. C. 119; 29 S. L. R. 431; 9 R. S. 80; A. I. R. 1936 Sind 156.

—S. 33—Application for habeas corpus to see at liberty a lunatic—Maintainability—Proper procedure.

An application for habeas corpus that the Court should order a person wrongly confined as a lunatic to be produced before the Court and set at liberty is misconceived. The proper procedure is by an application under S. 33, Lunacy Act. Hoshang P. Talati v. Emperor. 37 Cr. L. J. 1082;

165 I. C. 119; 29 S. L. R. 431; 9 R. S. 80; A. I. R. 1936 Sind 156.

—S. 62—Application for inquisition.

Lunatic received in Mental Hospital under order of one District Court, such hospital not being within jurisdiction of that Court—No evidence of jurisdiction being retained subsequently—Application for inquisition can be entertained by Court within whose jurisdiction alleged lunatic ordinarily resided and has his property. *Kamala Bala Debi v. —S. 24—Act X of 1914—Court's power to direct reception of criminal lunatic into asylum.—Warrant of arrest—Order, if prejudicial.

Under Lunacy Act IV of 1912 and Act X of

MADRAS ABKARI ACT (I OF 1886)

1914 the Magistrates or Courts are no longer required to report cases under S. 471 (1), Cr. P. C., for the orders of the Local Government but are themselves competent to direct the reception of a criminal lunatic into asylum which is prescribed for the reception of criminal lunatics. A warrant of arrest is not an order to the prejudice of the accused within the meaning of S. 439 (2), Cr. P. C., and can, therefore, be issued without previous notice to him. An order under S. 471 (1), Cr. P. C., is clearly an order which the acquitting Court, whether Original or Appellate, not only has power to make but is bound to make under S. 423 (d). *Emperor v. Under the Madras Abkari Act, the proceedings must be initiated and conducted under the elaborate rules contained in the said Act. For an offence against the Opium Act, the procedure which is indicated in that Act is to be strictly followed, the officers of the department mentioned, together with the Collector of the District, Deputy Commissioner or other officer authorised by Government, have alone the power to initiate proceedings. -----Ss. 55, 31—Procedure.

The Madras Abkari Act is not self-contained in the matter of the procedure for the investigation of offences under S. 55 of the Act. In such a case, the procedure to be followed is laid down in S. 5 (2) of the Cr. P. C. to be under that Code. There is nothing in the Act to indicate what is the procedure to be followed when an offender is sent under S. 31 of the Act direct to a Magistrate, nor is there a provision at all for a case where the offender is not placed under arrest. Where a case investigated by a Police Officer includes in addition to an offence under S. 55, Abkari Act, a non-cognizable offence under the Penal Code, the Police Officer would be correct in taking up the more serious offence as the principal offence, that is, the one in which he could arrest without a warrant, namely, under S. 55, Abkari Act, and following the provisions of that Act, so far as it can be done, rather than of the Cr. P. C., and, if he can follow the provisions of both for ensuring that the accused should appear before a Magistrate, it is obviously his duty to do so. The same procedure will be the proper procedure for a Police Officer to adopt when he is confronted with an offender whose offences are both under S. 55, Abkari Act and a cognizable offence under the Penal Code. In re : Yerlagadda Venkanna.

MADRAS BORSTAL SCHOOLS ACT (V OF 1926)

—S. 2—Applicability.

The provisions of the Madras Borstal Schools Act, 1926, can be applied to the case of an offender only if the Court is satisfied that the offender is addicted to criminal habits or tendencies or associates with persons of bad character and that he is likely to benefit by detention in a Borstal Institution. The mere fact that the offender is an adolescent is not a sufficient ground for applying the Act. In re : Sellappa Goundan. 32 Cr. L. J. 1044 : 133 I. C. 776 : 34 L. W. 45 : 1931 M. W. —S. 8—Sentence of detention—Sentence must take effect at once—Such sentence for lesser period than two years cannot be passed.

The Madras Borstal Act does not contain a provision corresponding to S. 397, Cr. P. C., and so a sentence of detention in a Borstal School must take effect at once and cannot be postponed to have effect from the date of subsequent release of the accused after the expiry of a term of sentence awarded previously. Similarly, no sentence for detention for a lesser period than two years can be passed. In re : Nondi. 39 Cr. L. J. 906 : 177 I. C. 554 : 47 L. W. 636 : 1938 M. L. J. 761 : 1938 M. W. N. 535 : 11 R. M. 343 : A. I. R. 1938 Mad. 663.

—Ss. 20, 8—Sentence of detention, nature and object of—Sentences of detention in Borstal School, if can be ordered to run consecutively.

The sentence of detention in Borstal School cannot be regarded as equivalent for all purposes to sentences of imprisonment, though for purposes of appeal and revision, they are to be deemed as sentences of imprisonment according to S. 20, Borstal Schools Act. The object of detention in a Borstal School being to reform the offender, and as the Magistrate has got sufficient discretion to detain an offender for such period as the law permits, there is no reason why one sentence of detention imposed upon an offender should be ordered to run after the expiry of another sentence imposed upon the same offender. The direction that the sentence of detention in one case should take effect after the expiry of the sentence of detention in the other case is not in consonance with law. In re : Allah Baksh. 39 Cr. —S. 177—Applicability of—Whether restricts action to present owner—Person to whom notice under S. 177 is sent, parting with ownership—Conviction of, when proper.

Far from S. 177, Madras District Municipalities Act, restricting the action to the present owner, it clearly intends to have application only against the person who entered into the contract under S. 176. If by reason of parting with the ownership an accused person to whom a notice has been sent under S. 177 is unable to comply with the order, then on general principles, a Criminal Court would doubtless refuse to convict, if it is shown that the person has been prevented in any way from complying with the terms laid down by the Municipality. *Vaiyapuri Chelliar v. MADRAS DISTRICT MUNICIPALITIES ACT —S. 178—Conviction under—For conviction under S. 178, persons must be owners of lands abutting streets.

S. 178, Madras District Municipalities Act, is primarily intended for the proper maintenance of the private streets; and the Municipality is given power, in case the streets are not in a satisfactory condition, to issue notices requiring the owners or occupiers of buildings or lands fronting or abutting the streets to carry out the necessary repairs. The persons who are liable under this section are the owners or occupiers of the houses or lands abutting the streets and not the owners of the streets themselves. It would, therefore, seem necessary in order to sustain a conviction under this section that the accused are the owners or occupiers of the lands abutting the roads. In re : Mustafa Sahib.

—S. 180—Encroachment.

An encroachment upon land by the side of a street, even though such land is uncovered by any pavement or other structure, amounts to an encroachment on the street within the meaning of S. 180, Madras District Municipalities Act. Jagannadh Naidu v. Rama Rao.

—S. 182—Scope of—Acquisition of private property—Encroachment in public street—Acquisition of prescriptive title—Removal of encroachment—Compensation.

The object of S. 182, Madras District Municipalities Act, is not to empower the Municipality to compulsorily acquire private property but its scope is limited to authorising the Municipal body in public interest to cause obstructions and encroachments to be removed. Even in the case where a person succeeds in proving that an encroachment made by him in a public street has existed for a period sufficient under the Law of Limitation to give him a prescriptive title thereto, he is all the same bound to comply with an order of the Municipality to remove the encroachment, but in such an event, he will be entitled to a reasonable compensation from the Municipal Council. *Public Prosecutor v. Under S. 182, Madras District Municipalities Act, a notice for removal of encroachment or obstruction may be served both on the owner as well as the occupier. There is nothing in the said section to warrant the view that it

Under the Madras District Municipalities Act, when a person wants to put up a roof, verandah or pandal or wall of a building, of grass, leaves or mats, or other inflammable materials within a Municipality, he has to obtain the permission of the Chairman under S. 195 of the Act and if he does not obtain it, he is liable to penalty under S. 318. But when he has once obtained permission to put up a structure of the kind mentioned in S. 195, he is not bound to obtain a licence from year to year for its continuance. —S. 249—Licence, necessity of—More than ten head of cattle kept within three miles of Municipal limits but not for industrial purpose.

The terms of S. 249, Madras District Municipalities Act, are general and the heading: "Industries and Factories" can in no way control the plain terms of the section. A person keeping more than ten head of cattle in a place within three miles of the Municipal limit, must take out a licence although the cattle are not kept for an industrial purpose. *Public Prosecutor v. The expression "which is likely to be dangerous to human life or health or property" occurring in Sch. V, Cl. (g), Madras District Municipalities Act, must be read as qualifying not only the last clause "any industrial purpose" but has to be read with each one of the preceding clauses. Ordinarily, any large machinery is dangerous to human life, but this cannot be presumed with reference to any particular machinery, such as a rice mill for converting paddy into raw rice. In re: Ramachandra Rao.

The liability on the part of persons who carry on certain trades within the limits of a Municipality to take out licence therefor arises only where there is a valid Notification under S. 249 (1), Madras District Municipalities Act. Under S. 249 of the said Act for the purpose of carrying on certain specified kinds of businesses, with regard to opening new places, the section requires that application should be made 30 days before they are opened. But when it is a question of renewal of licence, there is no bar to the issue of a licence by reason of the applications not having been made not less than 30 days before the end of the year. The provisions of the Municipal Act should be understood and

A licensee which has been granted by the Chairman of a Municipal Council under S. 249, Madras District Municipalities Act, cannot be cancelled under S. 321 (5) of the Act for any reason other than for a violation of any of the conditions or the terms of the licence. Accordingly, a licence to run a coffee-hotel cannot be cancelled for non-payment of water tax due to the Municipality. The fact that permission to construct or establish a factory or install in any premises any machinery, etc., has been obtained under S. 250, Madras District Municipalities Act, does not obviate the necessity to take out the annual licence required by S. 249. The permission given under S. 250 is given solely for the construction, establishment or installation. S. 250 of the Act does not deal with the user of such places but only with their inception. When the owner wishes to use them, and they are such as come within Sch. V, Cl. The sale by a person of bags of grain from one to six at a time without opening them, constitutes a 'wholesale' trade within the meaning of Schedule V to the Madras District Municipalities Act (V of 1920). A Notification by a Municipal Council constituted under the old District Municipalities Act (Mad. IV of 1884) directing dealers in wholesale grain to take out a licence under S. 249 of the new Act (V of 1920) before that Act actually comes into force is ultra vires and void, as the notification being neither a rule, nor a Bye-law nor a Regulation cannot be validated under the proviso to S. 365 of that Act. *Sesha Prabhu v. The "machinery" contemplated by Sch. V, Cl. Machinery worked by hand, such as handlooms or sewing machines, is excluded from the scope of S. 249 of the Act. A collection of muggoms is not "machinery" within the meaning of Sch. V, Cl. (g) of the Act and no licence is, therefore, required to be taken under S. 249 of the Act for using the same. Alampath Krishnan v. Municipal Prosecutor.

The offence defined in S. 317 (c), Madras District Municipalities Act, is of quite a different character from that defined in Cl. (a) of the section, inasmuch as the essence of an offence under Cl. (c) is that after reconstruction has been commenced, an order is passed to prohibit its carrying on or completion except upon certain terms and that that order is disobeyed. Therefore, where a person is charged with an offence under S. 317 (a) of the Act and is convicted of it, he cannot, in appeal, be convicted of an offence under Cl. For a conviction under S. 47, Madras District Police Act, it is enough if the alleged charge against a Police Officer is found to be false. It is not necessary that the intention of the accused in making the false complaint against the Police Officer should be that criminal proceedings against the officer should have been instituted. In re : Kotha Achayya Setti. 39 Cr. —S. 47—Scope of—Whether same as S. 211, Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860).

Except that the word 'charge' appears both in S. 47, Madras District Police Act, and in S. 211, Penal Code, there is no similarity between the two sections at all. S. 211 provides for two offences, both of which are equally punishable. One is the actual institution of criminal proceedings with a certain intent and the other is the false charge against a person of having committed an offence knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such a charge. And further the reference to the specific allegation that the person charged had committed an offence is an indication that the charge must be with the intention of bringing him to trial in a criminal proceeding. In re : Kotha Achayya Setti. 39 Cr. L. J. 135 : 172 I. C. 396 : 46 L. W. 319 : 1937 M. W. N. 865 : 1937, 2 M. L. J. 435 : 10 R. M. 454 : A. I. R. 1937 Mad. 808.

—S. 53—Object and scope of.

The object of S. 53, Madras District Police Act, XXIV of 1859, is to impose a bar of limitation against actions and prosecutions against officers for acts done or purporting to be done in pursuance of their official powers, and to impose further restrictions on such proceedings in respect of notice, tender and costs. The prosecution of a Police constable for receiving an unauthorised fee or recompense is not barred by limitation owing to the fact that the offence complained of was committed more than three months before the prosecution was launched. The words "under the provisions of this Act or under the general Police powers," occurring in S. 53 apply to the phrase "anything done or intended to be done" occurring in the same section and do not qualify "actions or prosecutions against any person." In re : Murugesu Naidu. 16 Cr. The word "produce" in S. 212 (b), Madras Estates Land Act means "produce of the land or trees in the defaulter's holding" dealt with in S. 77 (ii) of the Act. A person, therefore, who forcibly rescues distrained cattle does not commit an offence under S. 212 (b) of the Act. The remedy of the distrainer in such a case is to apply before the Collector to get back the distrained property or its value. Pandalapalli Narayana Reddi v. Dyvadrenachari.

The essence of a distrain for arrears of rent under the Madras Estates Land Act, is the act of taking out of the possession of the real owner, and such act will not be completed until the taking out of the possession of the real owner is complete. A ryot who prevents his landlord's agent from driving out of his pen cattle belonging to him but seized by the agent in distrain for arrears of rent, is guilty of the offence of 'resisting a distrain' under S. 212, (b), Madras Estates Land Act. *Satyanarayana-murthi v. —S. 21 (d)—'Permitting cattle to trespass,' what is—Overt act, whether necessary for conviction.

The essence of the offence under S. 21 (d) consists either in a misfeasance as in the case of one wilfully pasturing cattle or in a malfeasance as in his neglecting to take proper measures to prevent the cattle trespassing in circumstances from which it may be reasonably inferred that such trespass might have been foreseen or known as the probable consequence of his negligence. The mere finding of the accused's cattle within the forest reserve is not enough. Omission to take reasonable precaution against trespass knowing or having reason to believe that cattle would trespass into the forest reserve, would amount to permitting cattle to trespass within the meaning of S. 21(d). Where the prosecution makes out a prima facie case of negligence or want of reasonable care on the part of the accused, the onus of proof will then shift on to the accused to show that he took all reasonable care to prevent cattle from trespassing, or that the trespass was in spite of his care or against his orders. In re : Kamboyina Ramadas.

—S. 26—Rules under r. 13 (3)—Quarrying of sand and stone on unreserved land, if offence.

Quarrying of sand and stone of the ordinary kind from a public cart track on an unreserved land does not amount to an offence under r. 13 (3), more so when the quarrying is for an agricultural purpose. The fact that the removal was from a public cart track has really nothing to do with the question whether such removal is an offence or not. Digging pits in a public cart track may be punishable in other ways, but it cannot amount to an infringement of r. 13. In re : Perumal Reddiar. 40 Cr. L. J. 805 : 183 I. C. 571 : 1939 M. W. —S. 26—Right of free grazing.

The language of S. 20, Madras Forest Act, and the rules framed thereunder make it clear that a right of free grazing vested in the tenants of a village prior to the extension to that village of S. 26 is not affected by the Government Notifications under the Act. The second clause of S. 20 and the rules framed thereunder are perfectly legal and valid. In re : Rangadu. 18 Cr. L. J. 996 : 42 I. C. 724 : 22 M. L. T. 211 : 6 L. W. 428 : 1917 M. W. N. 682 : A. —S. 26—Scope of—Existing rights, saving of—Conviction without enquiry into rights claimed, legality of.

S. 26, Madras Forest Act, does not empower the Government to regulate the use of the land which is dealt with in Chap. III to the detriment of any rights existing in individuals and communities. Where the residents of a village claim the right of pasturage and the right to cut fuel, a conviction under S. 26 without an enquiry into these allegations is illegal. *Thatha Pillai v. of cutting constitutes an offence under the Forest Act.

S. 35 of the Forest Act in empowering Government to make rules as regards transit, and Form No. 2, speaking of a transport do not contemplate the moving which is involved in the cutting of a tree as comprised within the meaning of the word 'transit' or 'transport'. Under r. 2 of the Rules framed by the Government under the Forest Act, the word 'moving' has not the sense attached to it in the definition of 'theft' in the Penal Code. *In re : V. S. In order to justify the act of a Police Officer or a Forest Officer in arresting without warrant a person suspected of a forest offence, he must either have refused to give his name or must have given a false name and residence or there must have been reason to believe that he would abscond. In the absence of any of the conditions, no Police Officer or Forest Officer can lawfully arrest a person without a warrant. In order to justify a Court in entrusting a warrant of arrest to a person other than a Police Officer, there must be the necessity to arrest and that too immediately, and there must be the third condition, that no Police Officer is immediately available. In the absence of these three conditions, a Court is not justified in entrusting a warrant to a Forest Officer for execution. Pasunathi Pillai v. Emperor. 29 Cr. L. J. 541 : 109 I. C. 365 : 1928 M. It does not even require him to record the fact that he has reason to believe that any place is used as a

MADRAS LOCAL BOARDS ACT (XIV OF 1920)

—Ss. 159, 207, 223—Fresh notice—Failure to remove alleged encroachment after notice—Offence, acquittal—Second prosecution, legality of.

In a prosecution against an accused for an offence under S. 207 (c) read with S. 159, Madras Local Boards Act, XIV of 1920, for failure to remove an alleged encroachment after due notice by the local authority, the real offence is the wrongful encroachment that is committed by the person. The notice referred to in S. 159 is in a sense merely in the nature of a condition precedent to the prosecution. An offence within the meaning of the sections comes to be committed, at any rate, on the expiry of the notice by which the person is called upon to remove the encroachment and fails to do so within the time limited in the notice. The local authority has no power by giving fresh notice to constitute the disobedience to each of such fresh notices as amounting to a fresh offence under S. 207 of the Act. Where an accused person who was charged under S. 207 of the Local Boards Act, for failure to remove an alleged encroachment after due notice under S. 159 is acquitted, a second prosecution for the same offence after a fresh notice is illegal, especially where it is instituted more than three months after the issue of the first notice. Ramanujachariar v. Kailasam Iyer. 26 Cr. L. J. 1049 : 87 I. C. 969 : 1925 M. W. N. 472 : 49 M. L. J. 386 : 22 L. W. 736 : 48 Mad. 870 : A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1067.

The fact that the accused could have been proceeded against under S. 207 (2) of the Act is no bar to a prosecution under S. 159. President, Panchayat Board, Velgode v. Venkata Reddi. 33 Cr. L. —S. 159 (1)—Subsequent prosecution.

A previous acquittal or conviction of a person for non-compliance with a notice under S. 159 (1) for the removal of an encroachment does not bar a subsequent prosecution for disobedience of a fresh notice under the said section. President, Panchayat Board, Velgode v. Mandla Chinna Venkata Reddi.

The fact that a person had been acquitted in respect of non-compliance with a notice under S. 159 (1), is no bar to a subsequent prosecution of the same person in respect of the same encroachment on a second notice. Moidi Beary v. President, Taluk Board of Mangalore.

MADRAS LOCAL BOARDS ACT (XIV OF 1920)

—Ss. 159 (1), 207 (1) — Subsequent Prosecution — Notice to remove encroachment — Failure to comply with—Fresh notice regarding same encroachment—Previous conviction or acquittal, if bars fresh prosecution.

Even if a person is acquitted or convicted in a prosecution for disobedience of notice under S. 159 (1), Madras Local Boards Act, he can be subsequently prosecuted for disobedience of a fresh notice under that section, even where the encroachment remains the same. The same offence is failure to comply with any direction lawfully given or any requisition lawfully made ; it is not, strictly speaking, correct to say that the offence consists in failure to remove an encroachment. He only commits an offence under S. 207 (1) when he fails to comply with a direction lawfully given. It makes no difference whether there has or has not been any previous prosecution. The Public Prosecutor v. B. V. Sabhapathy Chetty.

—Ss. 159 (1), 207 (1), 223 — Issue of fresh notice, legality of—Notice to remove alleged encroachment—Negotiations—Failure to obey notice—Prosecution—Limitation.

A Union Board issued a notice under S. 159 (1), Madras Local Boards Act, to the accused to remove an alleged encroachment in front of his house, but on the representations of the accused, a fresh inquiry was commenced, and as a result of it, a fresh notice was issued to the accused for removal of the encroachment. In a prosecution under S. 207 (1) : Held, that it was competent to the President of the Union Board to issue a fresh notice after the close of the inquiry which was initiated at the suggestion of the accused, and that a complaint filed before the expiry of three months from the date of the second notice was not time-barred by virtue of S. 223 of the Act. *Raghavachariar v. In such a case, there cannot be any dispute as to the amount, and all that the Magistrate has to do is to collect the penalty demanded. In re : Syed Mustapha Sahib.

In Cl. 1 of S. 166, Madras Local Boards Act, the words “use any such vehicle for carrying passengers at separate fares” on a District Board road do not mean plying for hire. That section is intended to make persons who use the road of a District Board for making money by using motor vehicles upon it, pay for that privilege. The first part is intended to make persons who ply a motor vehicle for hire within the limits of the District Board pay for it by taking out a licence, and the latter part of it is intended to make persons who pick up passengers at separate fares outside the area of the District Board and who carry those passengers over a road of the District Board, also take out a licence. What is meant by ‘separate fares’ is individual fares as distinguished from a fixed amount for the whole vehicle. Shroff Veerappa v. Emperor. 31 Cr. L. J. 625 :

—Ss. 166, 207—Liability of masters for servant’s act—Conductor plying on forbidden road—Licensee, whether guilty of offence.

Persons who obtain licences to ply motor vehicles under the Local Boards Act, are in law responsible for breaches of the conditions of the licence committed by their servants. The principle is that the act of the servant of a licensee is the act of his master and that it is the licensee who does everything that is done under cover of the licence. It is he who undertakes to conform to the terms of it and to be responsible that no breach of it takes place. Where a person obtained a licence to ply motor buses in particular roads under S. 166, Madras Local Boards Act, but a conductor employed by him plied his car for hire on a forbidden road : Held, that the licensee was guilty of an offence under S. 166 (1) and S. 207 of the Act. Sivarama Mudaliar v. —Ss. 166, 207 (a), Sch. VIII—“Plying for hire,” meaning of—Mere use of hired vehicle, whether amounts to plying for hire—Soliciting for custom, necessity of.*

A vehicle cannot be said ‘to ply for hire’ on a public road simply because it is made use of as a hired vehicle on that road; plying for hire means the act of waiting for soliciting custom and the act of plying for hire can only be done at the place and time that the hiring is effected. A person who lets out his car for hire in a Municipality is not bound to take a licence from the District Board for taking the car beyond the Municipal limits and traversing any of the District Board roads, inasmuch as there is no hiring and therefore, no “plying for hire” in any of the District Board roads. *Local Fund Overseer v. In a prosecution under S. 166 (1), Madras Local Boards Act, for plying a motor car for hire without a licence, the accused must show that he had a licence from the President of the District Board, or that he comes under Cl. (11) of S. 212 of the Act by which he will be deemed to have been allowed a licence for one year where no order has been passed and communicated to him within 30 days on his application for licence. The fact that the person authorised to grant or refuse the licence did not exercise his discretion reasonably in refusing to grant the licence, would not afford an answer to such a prosecution and does not bring the case within S. 212, Cl. (11) of the Act. In re : Krishnaswami Pillai. 26 Cr. L. J. 681 :

In a prosecution under S. 207 (1) (e), Madras Local Boards Act, for failure to obey a notice to remove an encroachment, the gist of the offence is not the making of the encroachment but the failure to comply with the order to remove it, and the date of the latter is the determining factor for computing the period of the three months' limitation within which a prosecution for non-compliance of order can be instituted. There is nothing to prohibit the prosecution of a person against whom two notices for removal of an encroachment have been served and who has disobeyed the second notice. On such a prosecution it is not the province of the Criminal Courts to go into the question whether the encroachment exists. Narayan Iyer v. Subramanian Chetty.

MADRAS LOCAL BOARDS ACT (XIV OF 1920)

A Magistrate taking action under S. 221, Madras Local Boards Act of 1920, is an "inferior Criminal Court" within the meaning of S. 435, Cr. P. C., and an order made by him under S. 221 is subject to the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court under S. 439, Cr. P. C., or S. 107 of the Government of India Act. Under S. 221, Madras Local Boards Act of 1920, the imposition of a fine in addition to directing the payment of the fees due is illegal. In re : Puniya Syamalo.

MADRAS LOCAL BOARDS ACT (XIV OF 1920)

—Ss. 221, 219—Pandal erected without licence—Subsequent levy of fee—"Licence fee," whether due—Penalty, whether leviable by Magistrate.

A Union Board cannot move a Magistrate under S. 221, Madras Local Boards Act, to recover the penalty imposed by it upon a person who erected a pandal without obtaining a licence from the Board under S. 168 of the Act. Acting under Ss. 212 and 219, a Magistrate after convicting a person for failure to obtain a licence can, in addition to the fine which may be imposed, recover and pay to the Local Board the amount of fee chargeable for the licence but there is no provision in the Act empowering the Local Board to fix a penalty for erecting a pandal without a licence. *Maridu Gopayya v. —S. 221 (3)—Penalty—Encroachment—Magistrate moved to recover penalty—Defence of no encroachment, whether competent.

When a Local Board moves a Magistrate under S. 221, Madras Local Boards Act of 1920, to recover a penalty imposed for encroachment, the defaulting party cannot ventilate before the Magistrate his claim that there was no encroachment at all. The question for decision under S. 221 (3), Madras Local Boards Act, is as to the amount due or its apportionment and not whether the penalty is at all leviable. S. 221 of Madras Local Boards Act only applies to the manner of recovery of the penalty and does not re-open the question whether the defaulter is "bound" to pay the penalty imposed. *Ramachandran Servai v. —S. 222, Sch. IV, r. 25—Alteration of assessment.

Sch. IV, r. 25, Madras Local Boards Act, contemplates the preparation of the list every half-year showing the persons who have to pay taxes and the amount due by each of them. It is not, however, necessary for the President to prepare an entirely fresh list every half-year. He can adopt the old one with such amendments as may be necessary subject only —S. 223—Withdrawal of complaint—President sanctioning prosecution—Complaint filed by section officer.

Upon a sanction by the President of a District Board under the Madras Local Boards Act, the section officer filed a complaint. The officer subsequently applied for the withdrawal of the prosecution but the application was rejected by the Magistrate on the ground that the President alone could withdraw the prosecution, he having originally sanctioned it : Held, that the view of the Magistrate was not correct because S. 223, Local Boards Act, did not refer to withdrawal of legal proceedings but only to the initiation of legal proceedings. So far as the withdrawal of the prosecution was concerned, that is to say, in cases instituted under the Local Boards Act, the authority for withdrawal was conferred not by the Local Boards Act but by the Cr. —S. 227-A—Sanction, necessity of—Member of Panchayat Board, snatching away Minutes Book from another member—Prosecution for offence.

The alleged offence was the snatching away of the Minutes Book by a member of a Panchayat Board from the member who was present at the meeting apparently with a view to prevent him from making an entry therein, which was objected to. Both the accused in the case were members and one was charged with having instigated the other to snatch away the Minutes Book. In the complaint reference was made to the official character of the various acts, and occurrences that took place leading up to the snatching away of the Minutes Book : Held, that the act must be deemed to be done by the accused when purporting to act in his official capacity as a member. Taking a reasonable view of the facts alleged, this was a case in which the Magistrate was not entitled to take cognisance of the offence in the absence of any sanction of the prosecution by the Government. Karuppalah Thevan v. N. Krishna Pillai.

Where the registration certificate for running a motor bus expired on 20th March, 1926, but an application for renewal was not made till some days thereafter: Held, that the owner was not guilty of an offence under r. 30 and that if a certificate was obtained before the end of December, 1926, r. 30 would be sufficiently complied with. *Public Prosecutor v. There is no rule in Madras Motor Vehicles Rules of 1938 corresponding to r. 39 (a) (1) of the Rules of 1923 making the driver liable for the offence of over-loading and r. 262 is only a saving clause which validates the 'G', permit issued under the old rules till its expiry. MUNICIPAL ACT (III OF 1904)

—S. 176, and Sch. V—Miscellaneous—The word “capital” does not mean nominal capital but only paid-up capital—Construction of statutes—Reference under S. 176 of Act must state all necessary facts.

On a reference by the Magistrate under S. 176, Madras Municipal Act III of 1904, as to the meaning of the word “capital” in Sch. V of the Act: Held, that in the absence of any statutory definition of the word applicable in construing the Act, the word must be taken to be used in its ordinary and popular meaning, and so construed, it means the amount of money actually used in the business, i. e., the paid-up capital. The fact that the word, in the Indian Companies Act, is used in the sense of nominal capital is no argument for so construing it in the Municipal Act, as the two Acts are not in pari materia. The underlying principle of Sch. V of the Act is that taxation should be roughly proportionate to the professional incomes of individuals. The word “capital” is used in the same sense in Sch. V of Act III of 1904 and in Sch. A of Act I of 1884. In construing fiscal Acts, the construction most beneficial to the subject ought to be adopted. In making references under S. 176, the Magistrate ought to state all the facts necessary for the decision of the particular case. *Mylapore Hindu Permanent Fund (Limited) v. MADRAS PLANTERS LABOUR ACT (I OF 1903) —Ss. 4, 30—Conviction for breach of contract, validity of—Rules framed under Act, r. 2 (4)—Contract without descriptive marks of labourer, validity of.

When the Legislature requires certain formalities to be gone through, or observed, in order to make a contract valid, or when it requires certain descriptions or particulars to be given in a contract to make it valid, the Court cannot consider any one of the terms or requisites as of no importance. A contract between a planter and a labourer under the Madras Planters Labour Act, which does not give the descriptive marks of the labourer as required by r. 2 (4) of the rules framed under S. 4 of the Act is invalid and unenforceable and a conviction of the labourer under S. 30 of the Act for breach of the terms of such a contract is unsustainable. Public Prosecutor v. Ayitha. 27 Cr. L. J. 1352 : 98 I. C. 472 : 23 L. W. 559 : 49 Mad. 426 : 50 M. L. J. 659 : A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 670.

—Ss. 24, 35—Conviction for disobedience, effect of—Power of Magistrate to issue repeated directions—“Failure to account for money advanced,” meaning of.

There is no limit to the number of repeated directions which may be issued under S. 35, Madras Planters Labour Act, or to the number of prosecutions and convictions which may follow in default. Action taken under S. 35, Madras Planters Labour Act, does not put an end to the contract and is, therefore, no bar to a second trial and conviction for disobedience to a direction to fulfil it. The words “fails to account for the money advanced to him” mean simply this; failure to either supply labour equivalent to the advance received or to refund any balance of the advance for which he is unable to supply labour or to prove that it has been legitimately expended. *N. The accused had been convicted of an offence punishable under S. 5, Cl. (1) (d), Madras Prevention of Adulteration Act. The charge was that he sold milk below the standard of purity prescribed by Government. The certificate of analysis by the Government Analyst was to the effect that the sample contained 60.5 parts of genuine milk, 35.0 parts of added water and 4.5 parts of cane sugar in a total of 100 parts. This opinion was based on the assumption that the milk that was sent as sample, that is the milk that was sold by the petitioner, was sold as buffalo's milk. The sample was found to contain 3·4 per cent. of milk fat. There was nothing to show that the quantity of solid found was below the prescribed minimum: Held, that the sample must be dealt with as if it were cow's milk. The minimum percentage of milk fat was only 3 per cent. under R. 10. The sample contained 3·4 per cent. milk fat. It could not therefore be said that the sample was below the minimum prescribed so far as milk fat was concerned. R. 18 did not apply and the offence had not been established. In re : Krishna Iyer.

Under the Madras Local Boards Act, 1920, the limits of a Union can be altered only by the District Board acting under S. 5 of that Act with the approval of the Government. Under the Madras Local Boards Act, 1884, a Union was constituted in respect of a certain Revenue village. In 1910 the Revenue village was enlarged by the Board of Revenue so as to include another hamlet : Held, that the whole of the village so enlarged was not automatically thereby brought within the limits of the Union. Where a person owning house in the newly hamlet was summoned in respect of assessment of tax in that house : Held, that he was not bound to attend and committed no offence by disregarding the summons of the Union Board President, as the Union had no power to levy tax on a house which was not situated within the Union limits. The boundaries which become final under S. 13, Madras Survey and Boundaries Act are so far as Government land is concerned the boundaries of the holdings of "registered holders" and not the boundaries of Revenue

Under S. 13, Madras Survey and Boundaries Act, a decision of a Survey Officer that certain property in the possession of a party is an encroachment by him and that the property belongs to a Local Board is final and unless the Survey so notified be modified by a decree of a Civil Court under the provisions of S. 14, the record of the Survey is conclusive proof that the boundaries determined and recorded therein have been correctly determined and recorded. But inasmuch as the party aggrieved has a period of three years under S. 14 of the Act within which to file a suit to set aside the order, the order cannot be treated as conclusive in a prosecution launched within the said period of three years under S. 207 of the Local Boards Act for non-compliance with an order of removal of the alleged encroachment, and in such a prosecution, the Criminal Court is entitled and is bound to go into the evidence as to the title to the property taking the decision of the Survey Officer as prima facie evidence in favour of it. *Palimuthu Ambalagar v. It is ordinarily objectionable, when the accused is convicted only of some petty offences under the Town Nuisances Act, that he should also be bound over for a considerable time under S. 106, Cr. P. C., for this binding over would involve a far more serious punishment than the main sentence. Those guilty of disorderly and riotous conduct are usually poor men who may not be able to find security, in which case they would be liable to be imprisoned for a substantial period, although the maximum punishment awarded under S. 3 (12), Town Nuisances Act, is only one month's rigorous imprisonment. On the other hand, binding over an accused for only two or three months would not serve the purpose for which an order under S. 3 (12) is passed. S. 106, Cr. P. C., should, therefore, be very sparingly invoked where the offence committed is a petty one. In re : Ballan.

The provisions of the Cr. P. C. are not made applicable to Panchayat Courts under the Madras Village Courts (Amendment) Act. The High Court cannot, therefore, interfere with an order of a Panchayat Court under Ss. 435 and 439 of the Code. But under S. 107 of the Government of India Act, the High Court has powers of supervision over all Criminal and Civil Courts in the Presidency, and when a grave error of a Panchayat Court, which is not governed by the provisions of the Cr. P. C., appears on the face of the record, the powers given by S. 107 of the Government of India Act could be invoked to correct such error. Munigadu v. Emperor.

Where the judgment of a Panchayat Court convicting a person of an offence under S. 426, Penal Code, does not mention the value of the amount of loss or damage by mischief alleged to have been caused by the accused, the judgment is liable to be set aside by the High Court in the exercise of its powers of superintendence under S. 107 of the Government of India Act. *Munigadu v. —Magistrate and Collector of the District, duties of.

The Magistrate and Collector of the District, being, for most purposes, the principal representative and administrator of the law in the eyes of the people of the District, a position of great power and great responsibility, it is of supreme importance that his acts should be examples of equal justice, rigid impartiality and obedience to the law. *Gopinath Paryah v. The right of Magistrates to make disparaging remarks on persons who appear, or are named, in the course of a trial is one that should be exercised with great reserve and moderation, especially where the person disparaged has had little or no opportunity of explaining or defending himself. It would involve a great danger to the administration of justice if witnesses were restrained from stating their real opinions for fear of displeasing the Magistrate before whom they are giving evidence and great caution should be taken to avoid producing any such unfor-

Cr. P. C. (Act V of 1898), Ss. 257, 503—Refusal to issue process to witness in a warrant case—Powers of Special Judge to issue commission—Illegality.

Under S. 257, Cr. P. C., in trials of warrant cases, if the accused, after he has entered upon his defence, applies to the Magistrate to issue process for examination of witnesses, the Magistrate is bound to comply with the request unless he is satisfied that the application should be refused, on the ground that it is made for purpose of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice in which case he is bound to record his reasons. In a trial under the provisions of the Malabar (Restoration of Order) Ordinance I of 1922, the Special Judge refused to issue process for the attendance of certain material defence witnesses but examined them by commission without assigning any reason. In reply to a reference by the High Court, the Judge reported that he did so on the ground that to obtain the witnesses from distant places would entail unreasonable delay, expense and inconvenience: Held, (1) that the Special Judge was wrong in refusing to issue process for the attendance of the witnesses as by virtue of S. 10 of that Ordinance, he was bound to follow the procedure laid down in S. 257, Cr. P. C.; (2) that inasmuch as the powers of a Special Judge under S. 10 of the Ordinance were confined to those of a "Magistrate" and did not include those of a District Magistrate or a Presidency Magistrate, the issue of a commission by him under S. 503, Cr. ——— Ss. 6, 7—'Merchandise,' meaning of.

In connection with trade marks, merchandise conveys the idea of goods offered for sale by some person or persons concerned in or connected with the history of the goods of whose guarantee and reliability the trade marks are a symbol. The word "merchandise" in Ss. 478 and 480, Penal Code, implies goods not only offered for sale, but also selected, and, so to say, guaranteed by the proprietor of the trade mark, and a selector-importer who affixes his name or other trade marks to goods is a person "whose merchandise they are", within the meaning of S. 480, Penal Code. Dunbar v. Holland Bombay Trading Company.

50 I. C. 165 : 12 S. L. R. 129 :
A. I. R. 1919 Sind 93.

——— Ss. 6, 7—Offence under — "Person whose goods they are", meaning of—Affixing of name to goods—Offering goods of another as one's own.

Where an accused person passes off his own inferior goods as the superior goods of the complainant and counterfeits the complainant's trade mark, the complainant must prove the reputation of his trade mark, for otherwise the counterfeit mark does not involve a false representation that the goods are the goods of the complainant. But even in such a case if the accused were to mark his own inferior goods with the name of the complainant, it would be unnecessary for the complainant to prove the reputation of his mark, for the complainant's name forged on the goods would be in itself a direct representation that the goods are of the complainant. Where, however, the accused puts his own name on goods purchased from the complainant and passes them off as his own goods in order to advertise himself, no question of the reputation of the complainant's trade mark arises. In such a case the appropriation is not of the complainant's mark but of the complainant's goods and the inscription of the accused's name on the goods is a representation that the goods are of the accused. *Dunbar v. It is enough if the resemblance is such as not only to show an intention to deceive, but also such as to be likely to make unwary purchasers suppose that they are purchasing the article sold by the party to whom the right to use the trade mark belongs, and, therefore, the standard of comparison is not that of the expert, but it is that of the lay public, of "the unwary purchasers". MISAPPROPRIATION

See also Penal Code, 1860, S. 400.

-----Duty of Crown.

The Crown which has considerable facilities at its disposal, ought ordinarily, unless for very good reasons, be able to put alleged offenders on their trial within a reasonable time. It is not merely a question of enabling witnesses to have distinct recollection, though that is a very important one, because the greater the lapse of time, the fainter will be the recollection, at least of truthful witnesses, who do not imagine or invent, but it becomes more difficult for the accused person to defend himself and all the more difficult if he happens to be an innocent man. Rex v. V. Krishnan. 41 Cr. L. J. 824 : 190 I. C. 123 : 1939 M. W. N. 1213 : 13 R. M. 386 : A. I. R. 1940 Mad. 329.

-----Duty of prosecution.

The cardinal or basic rule of the administration of criminal justice, according to British notions, is that the prosecution must prove the guilt of the accused, and that the accused need not prove anything. He is entitled to stand on the innocence which the law imputes to him till it is displaced. The mere fact that a person failed to account for the money which he was entrusted with is not in law sufficient to establish that he has committed the offence of criminal breach of trust in the absence of other evidence, unless some kind of conversion, is proved, i. e., a wrongful diversion to his own purposes or a purpose not consistent with law or with contract. Rex v. V. Krishnan. 41 Cr. L. J. 824 : 190 I. C. 123 : 1939 M. W. N. 1213 : 13 R. M. 386 : A. I. R. 1940 Mad. 329.

MOTOR-CAR AND CYCLE ACT (III B. C. OF 1903)

—By-law No. 4, Rr. 4, 20 — Liability of owner for acts of driver—Driving recklessly or negligently—Absence of owner—Master and servant.

The owner of a motor-car is responsible for the act of his servant whom he permits to use his motor-car. If the servant drives the car recklessly or negligently, the master is liable. But it is not in every case of improper use by the servant that the master should be punished. There must be permission express or implied to use the car; and once the permission is given, any misuse of the car, while that permission lasts, is punishable and the owner is responsible. A general injunction to the chauffeur never to drive the car beyond the regulation speed is not sufficient to get rid of the owner's responsibility. Edward Thornton v. Emperor.

Summons issued to an accused for an offence under the Motor Vehicles Act, must specify the rule or rules made under the Act, which the accused is said to have broken and unless this is done, the trial is bad. ———S. 5—Difference between—Penal Code, S. 279.

S. 5, Motor Vehicles Act, deals with reckless driving, dangerous to the public having regard to all the circumstances of the case. S. 279, Penal Code, refers to driving in a manner so rash or negligent as to endanger human life or to be likely to cause hurt or injury to any other person. The difference between these two sections is this: A man may drive a motor vehicle in a manner "dangerous to the public" even if there is no person actually on the spot to be endangered the public being regarded as some kind of an all-pervading presence which may reasonably be expected to be at the place at the time. Still his offence cannot come under S. 279 because there is not "any other person" who is likely to be hurt. For an offence under S. 279, there must definitely be some other person to be endangered. So, if in driving across the main road in this manner some passer-by only saves his life by a wild leap to safety, then the driver of the vehicle is driving in a manner so rash and negligent as at least to be likely to cause hurt to that person who only saved his life by his agility and an offence under S. 279 has been committed. *The King v. In a prosecution for driving a motor vehicle on a public road with defective lights, time is practically the most important point. In such a case, there should be independent and direct evidence indicating exactly the time at which the car has been observed being driven on the public road with defective lights. It is of little practical use for a Police Officer to come into Court and say "sometime after dusk" or "about 7 p. m." or words to that effect, if it is hoped that such a prosecution is to be successfully conducted. *Aklu v. The practice in United Provinces to issue summonses under the Motor Vehicles Act, without defining the exact offence with which the accused is being charged is a most reprehensible practice. It is the duty of the clerk who issues the summonses under the Motor Vehicles Act, to define therein the exact nature of the charge which is being preferred against the person against whom the summonses is being issued. The time, the place and the exact nature of the offence charged must be clearly set forth. If this is not done, then clearly the clerk issuing the summonses is guilty of gross breach of duty. A conviction which follows upon a summons in which the accused is not given notice of the charge which is brought against him is an illegal conviction.

Where a lorry without "G" permit is engaged for a journey from Calicut to Pollachi for hire, it is quite justifiable to say that the vehicle has been let for hire along the public roads in the Presidency of Madras in the Districts of Malabar and Coimbatore and therefore the offence is committed in the District of Malabar as well as in the District of Coimbatore if the lorry gets beyond the limits of the District of Malabar on its journey to Pollachi. Under r. 40, Punjab Motor Vehicles Rules, only the Superintendent of Police is authorised to fix dates for inspection of lorries. Where he fixes a certain week for the purpose and the Inspector subsequently fixes a particular date in that week, and there is no proof of delegation of powers to him, the driver cannot be convicted on the ground that he failed to produce his lorry on that particular date, though he produced it during that week. -----S. 16—Journey within British territory, what is—Rules under, rr. 31, 33—Person carrying passengers in bus from outside British territory into British territory for hire without registration—Rr. 31 and 33, if contravened.

If a person carries passengers in his bus from outside British territory and comes to Karachi into British territory without registration and passengers pay their fare to him to carry them there and back, he does ply his bus for hire within British territory. The fact that the end of the journey at one side terminates outside British territory, does not exclude the bus from the operation of r. 31 and r. 33 made under S. 16, Motor Vehicles Act, so far as the journey within British territory is concerned. *Elias v. It may be true that r. 30 (a), Madras Motor Vehicles Rules, was primarily intended to apply to motor vehicles which are used for the express purpose of letting for hire ; but even if a motor vehicle is used only once for such a purpose, then on that one occasion it is nonetheless let for hire because the owner does not ordinarily use his lorry for purposes of reward. If, therefore, a person undertakes to convey goods for reward in his private vehicle even on a single occasion without 'G' permit, he has let that vehicle for hire and so commits an offence under r. 30 (1), Madras Motor Vehicles Rules. *Public Prosecutor v. In a case under the Motor Vehicles Act, where there are a variety of offences included either in one section, or in a Code of rules, it is essential both for the purpose of the proper conduct of the Court's business itself, as well as for the protection of a respectable class of people summoned for sometimes trivial and sometimes serious offences, that it should be known from the first what it is which the Court has in fact to deal with. *Emperor v. The owner of a car is not liable for a breach of r. 26 (3), Burma Motor Rules, 1915, committed while the car was being driven by his chauffeur. In the case of trivial breaches of the Motor Vehicles Rules, it is only just and reasonable that, in the first instance, a Police Officer should point out to a driver that the requirements of the law are not being strictly complied with. Magistrates, should so far as it lies in their power, discourage prosecutions for every trivial offence under the Motor Vehicles Act and Rules, except where a previous warning has been ignored or where public safety has in fact been endangered. *Mahomed Sarly v. The suspension of a licence of a motor driver under S. 18 (2), Motor Vehicles Act, if ordered in addition to the imposition of a fine for an offence under S. 16, Motor Vehicles Act, is a part of the sentence, as an order under S. 505, Cr. MOTOR VEHICLES RULES (BOMBAY) 1915

———R. 3 (1)—'Plying for hire'—Principles as regards "plying for hire" apply to "letting for hire"—R. 3 (1), applicability of.

The plying of a motor vehicle for hire means the act of waiting for soliciting custom, and, therefore, as soon as any person has hired it, the act of plying for hire is complete. This principle as regards plying for hire must also apply to letting for the purposes of r. 3, Motor Vehicles Rules (Bombay), 1915. The rule applies to letting in public places and this implies that the actual transaction of letting must be done in a public place where it is open for any member of the public to take the car on hire. It cannot, therefore, apply to a case where the letting was to a selected customer, and was not done in a public place. Emperor v. Nandkishorsingh Gayaprasad.

———Benefit of doubt—Evidence—Complaint to the Police—Evidence of prosecution witnesses contradictory.

The evidence in support of a charge of murder consisted of a complaint to the Police immediately after the occurrence, and a number of witnesses for the prosecution. There was a considerable difference between the story narrated in the said complaint, and the evidence of such witnesses. It appeared that these discrepancies were not merely minor ones but on material points: Held, that as it was not possible to believe either story, there was considerable doubt as to whether the prosecution had established the case against the accused, and that they were entitled to the benefit of that doubt. *Teli Khaja Hussain v. ———Benefit of doubt—Evidence—Village Munsif's report silent as to murderer—Jewels worn by deceased missing and not accounted for—Motive for murder very slight—Conviction bad.

Where the evidence against a person convicted of murder consists only of statement made by a brother of the deceased that he saw him run away after the commission of the offence, and where against that evidence, there is a strong array of circumstantial evidence in favour of the accused, e.g., omission of his name in the first report, the missing jewels not being traced out, the accused not absconding after the alleged offence, a reasonable doubt arises, the benefit of which must be given to the accused. *Sundara Gounden v. ———Charge of—Inference.

A charge of murder like any other charge of an offence can be established by inferences, but when there is very little in the way of direct evidence, it is due to the accused that there should be no exaggeration of minor incidents in the case and that each inference against him should be verified with scrupulous accuracy and expressed in language of studied moderation. *Bhagwan Kaur v. ———Charge to Jury—Omission to explain distinction between murder and culpable homicide, —Misdirection.

In a trial on a charge of murder at a Criminal Sessions of the Chief Court, the Judge presiding omitted to explain to the Jury the distinction between murder and culpable homicide, or upon what views of the facts the accused had committed the one offence or the other. The charge to the Jury also suggested that a strong inference should be drawn against the accused from the fact that he had failed to take steps to bring to justice a person who, it had been suggested, was the real offender: Held, per curiam, that in both respects the charge to the Jury contained material misdirection. Hla Gyi v. Emperor.

A conviction on circumstantial evidence cannot be had unless and until all the inferences to be drawn from the whole history of the case point so strongly to the commission of the crime by the accused that the defence theory appears, on the face of it, impossible or highly improbable. The general rule is that in order to justify an inference of guilt, the inculpatory facts must be incompatible with the innocence of the accused and incapable of explanation upon any other reasonable hypothesis than that of his guilt. *Bhagwan Kaur v. —Circumstantial evidence.

In order to justify an inference of guilt, the inculpatory facts must be incompatible with the innocence of the accused, and incapable of explanation upon any other reasonable hypothesis than that of his guilt. In a charge of murder against three accused, it was sought to use as evidence against them, (a) a confession made by one accused against the others, (b) the evidence of a witness taken as an approver. In regard to (a), the confession did not implicate, but it exculpated, the accused himself and in respect of (b) the fact used as corroboration was that the deceased was seen alive with the accused just before the murder: Held, (1) that as the accused exculpated himself, his statement was not a confession and could not, therefore, be used against the others, (2) that as the fact sought to be used as corroboration took place before the commission of the offence, there was no corroboration. *Mure Venkata Reddi v. —Duty of Jury.

Juries are expected to give the best of their brains to consideration of the matters brought before them and to give a sound and honest decision. If that is not done, it must bring the Jury system into disrepute. As regards belief of witnesses, Juries should not expect the witnesses to come to the reputed standard of Washington, but must take people as they are and try and discover the truth by close consideration of each one's evidence in order that truth may prevail and that justice may be done in the acquittal of an innocent man or in the conviction of a guilty man. Before the Jury convict an accused of the offence with which he is charged, they must come to a certain conclusion on the matters brought before them. Those matters must appear to them to leave no reasonable doubt and prove with certainty that the accused and the accused alone could have been the man who committed the offence. By 'certainty' it is not meant that Juries are not to act upon evidence unless it puts them in the position of having actually seen the thing done; but that they have to be satisfied upon the whole evidence beyond reasonable doubt as they would be on any important question on which they have to take action one way or the other. *Emperor v. In order to gain the benefit of insanity under S. 84, Penal Code, the defence is bound to prove that at the time of committing the crime, the offender was incapable of knowing the nature of his act. But the Indian Law, like the Law of England, limits non-liability only to those cases in which insanity affects the cognitive faculties, and the cases in which insanity affects only the emotions and the will, subjecting the offender to impulses whilst it leaves the cognitive faculties unimpaired, have been left outside the exception, because it has been thought that the object of the Criminal Law is to make people control their insane as well as their sane impulses, to guard against mischievous propensities and homicidal impulses. *Chajju Mal v. ———Intention—Circumstantial evidence—Conviction based on circumstantial evidence.

Intention is the result of working of the brain, and as one human being cannot see into another human being's brain, the only way of gathering intention is to judge from the act itself and from the circumstances under which it was done. Circumstantial evidence is evidence of circumstances as opposed to what is called direct evidence. Circumstances, however, sometimes afford just as strong, if not stronger grounds, for coming to a conclusion as to something having happened than the evidence of any witness even of the highest stamp, who may say he saw it happen. *Emperor v. In charging a Jury in a trial for murder and in directing them, as to what constitutes murder, the Judge should refer to the sections of the Penal Code which relate to culpable homicide. To direct the Jury that "murder is the intentional killing of another human being with malice afore-thought," although a comprehensive way of describing what the meaning of murder is, amounts to a misdirection. Where, in dealing with one of the charges against the accused, the Judge in charging the Jury uses words which the Jury might misinterpret, and might thereby be induced to come to the conclusion that there was nothing more to be said about the matter, that would amount to a misdirection. *Emperor v. The fact that shortly after a murder a person is found to be in possession of ornaments belonging to the murdered person, creates very grave suspicion that he was concerned in the murder. ———What amounts to.

The finding on which the appellant was convicted of murder was that he intended to cause bodily injury sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, and the question was whether that finding was justified. The act of the appellant, which caused the deceased's death, was a slash with a dashe at her back. The da cut into and fractured the deceased's left shoulder blade and penetrated into the pleural cavity. The deceased died on the third day after the infliction of the injury. The hospital assistant considered that the wound was necessarily a fatal one, owing to the opening of the pleural cavity. The Junior Civil Surgeon, Rangoon, stated that there might have been a chance of the deceased's recovery, if she had been kept quiet and had not been moved about : Held, that a man, who strikes at the back of another a violent blow with a weapon such as a dashe must be taken to know that he is doing an act imminently dangerous to the life of the person : Held, also, that his knowledge or want of knowledge of the details of the injury he will probably cause, or of their results is immaterial, that he takes all the ordinary risks of his act and intends to do an act attended with risk to another human being's life and therefore the offence was prima facie that of murder : Held, further, that, as there was provocation, the accused's crime did not call for confirmation of the death sentence. *Nga Maung v. NEWSPAPER (INCITEMENT TO OFFENCES) ACT (VII OF 1908)

———S. 2 (1) (b)—'Newspaper', meaning of.

The term "Newspaper" as defined in S. 2, (1) (b), Act VII of 1908, involves the idea of periodicity, as also the fact that what is contained in the paper is public news or comments thereon. The definition ought to be read as a whole, and in order to determine whether a particular publication is a "Newspaper" within the meaning of the Act or not, it is not enough to take a single number and to pick out an isolated sentence or paragraph therein which may, by stretch of language, be interpreted to contain public news or comment thereon. When it is disputed that a particular publication is not a newspaper, the prosecution ought to establish its alleged character by proof of the contents of more than one issue of the paper. The mere fact that in one particular issue an isolated sentence or paragraph may be found which may be interpreted to contain public news or comments thereon, does not make the publication a newspaper. *Sarat Chandra v. S. 3, Newspaper Incitement to Offences Act, provides for the making of a conditional order declaring the printing press used for the purpose of printing or publishing the offending newspaper to be forfeited. NEWSPAPER INCITEMENT TO VIOLENCE ACT (VII OF 1908) ———Incitement—Question of intention—Personal criminality.

Under the Newspapers Incitement to Violence Act, no question of the intention of the writer, printer or publisher arises, and no personal criminality is imputed to any individual, and it is not necessary to prove any criminal intention against any person under the Act. There can be no hard and fast canon to decide what words or whether a given set of words constitute an incitement to murder or to any act of violence. It is a question of fact in each case. The article must be read in the sense in which it was read by that section of the public to whom it was addressed, and the occasion and place of its publication and the class of persons who are likely to be affected by it must also be considered. Girija Sunder Chakravarti v. Emperor.

NORTHERN INDIA CANALS AND DRAINAGE ACT (VIII OF 1873)

———Ss. 3, 20, 21, 70—Presumption—Interfering with watercourse—Watercourse about 30 years old—Presumption that it was started by agreement or under Act.

In a prosecution for an offence under S. 70 (2), Northern India Canal and Drainage Act of 1873, where the watercourse is an old one, the Court is entitled to draw a presumption that it was started by agreement or under the provisions of S. 20 or S. 21 of the Act. Ganga Sahai v. Emperor.

NORTHERN INDIA CANALS AND DRAINAGE ACT (VIII OF 1873)

—Ss. 3 (2), 70—Offence under—Watercourse, permissive, stoppage of.

A right to obtain the passage of water over another man's property can be secured legally by the Canal Department acting on its own authority, or it can be obtained on the application of a private person to the Divisional Canal Officer under S. 21, Northern India Canals and Drainage Act. Such a right can also be obtained by a private agreement. Where, however, one person merely permits another to take water through a watercourse existing on the former's land and after some years discontinues the permission and stops the watercourse, he cannot be held guilty of an offence under S. 70. *Hukman v. —Ss. 31, 70 (12)—Canal water used for building pucca house—Rules framed under S. 31, 10, 33—Offence.

S. 70 (12), Northern India Canal and Drainage Act, punishes a person who violates any rule made under the Act for a breach of which a penalty may be incurred. Therefore, although the use of water from a tank which has been filled with canal water for the purpose of building a pucca house is unauthorised by r. 10 of the rules framed under S. 31 of the Northern India Canals and Drainage Act, there is no penalty attached to such use, and a person guilty of such use cannot be punished under S. 70 (12) of the Act. *Harnam Singh v. A notification of Government published under the Northern India Ferries Act, 1878, laid down limits of the various public ferries in one column, and in another column the distances within which a private ferry was not allowed to ply for hire. In the case of some ferries, very wide limits were assigned, and the prohibited distance was defined as the limits given in the column laying down the limits of the ferry. In other cases, where the limits of the ferry were not so wide, the prohibited distance was described with reference to S. 13 of the Act as two miles: Held, that in the former case, the very wide limits given were deemed sufficient by the Local Government to guard the interests of the lessee of the ferry, and consequently the prohibited area was reduced to the space contained within these limits. *Emperor v. —Ss. 55 (c), 168—Public drain—Acts done on private drain—No offence.

The Municipalities Act is a Local Act of a highly technical nature, and one which touches the private rights of individuals. It has, therefore, to be most carefully construed, and if the intention of the framers of the Act was to include an act done upon private property which might result in obstruction of public property at some distance from the place, where the physical obstruction took place, it should have been provided for in a more particular language than has been done in S. 168 of the Act. The word "public", although it does not immediately precede the word 'drain' in S. 55 (c) does extend to the words which immediately follow and that the sewers, drain, culverts, etc., mentioned in the section are public sewers, public drains, public culverts and public watercourses and that the word drain mentioned in S. 168 is a public drain. The action of private proprietors with drains on their private property is not illegal. Dassu v. Emperor. 10 Cr. L. J. 1 : 2 I. C. 408 : 6 A. L. J. 544.

—S. 87—Scope of—Re-erection of building abutting on a public street.

The blocking up of the archways of a verandah abutting on a public street so as to convert the verandah into rooms amounted to the re-erection of a building within the meaning of S. 87 of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh Municipalities Act, 1900. *Emperor v. —Ss. 132, 147—Interpretation.

The words "first conviction" in Ss. 132 and 147, N.-W. —S. 147—Second prosecution—Building erected without sanction.

'One B. D. built a wall without the permission of the Municipality where the house was situate. B. D. was, therefore, prosecuted under S. 87 of Act I of 1900 (the Municipalities Act) and convicted. He was sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 20, but the Magistrate trying the case did not impose a recurring fine. During the pendency of these proceedings, the house was transferred by B. D. to a minor of whom S. D., the applicant, was the guardian. After a termination of the above proceedings, the Municipal Board again lodged a fresh notice and ordered the applicant to pull down the wall. On a disobedience of the notice, the guardian was prosecuted and convicted: Held, that in face of the previous conviction, no subsequent conviction of the applicant was permissible. The maxim of nemo debet bis vexari was applied. Sridhar v. Emperor.

OATHS ACT (X OF 1873)

Under Ss. 5 and 6, Oaths Act, 1873, every person who is examined as a witness shall make an oath or affirmation and there is no exception in the case of a child of tender years. Therefore if the child is adjudged to be a competent witness, an oath or affirmation must be administered to the child before he is examined. The word "omission" as used in S. 13, Oaths Act, includes any kind of omission and is not restricted to accidental or negligent omissions. Ah Phut v. The King.

———Ss. 6, 13—Child's evidence—Evidence of child taken without oath, admissibility of.

The mere fact that a Court advisedly refrained from administering oath to a witness, who was a child of tender years, does not make his statement inadmissible in evidence. A Court should only examine a child of tender years as a witness after it has satisfied itself that the child is intellectually sufficiently developed to enable it to understand sufficiently what he has seen and to afterwards inform the Court thereof. If the Court is of opinion that by reason of tender years, the child is unable to do this, it ought not only to refrain from administering oath but from examining the child at all. If, on the other hand, the Court thinks that the child, though of tender years, is capable of informing the Court of what it has seen or heard, it is best that the Court should comply with the provision of S. 6, Oaths Act. A child is frequently a most satisfactory witness when the matters deposed to, are not beyond the intelligence of the child. Dhani Ram v. Emperor.

Proceedings before a Police Patil under Ss. 14 and 15, Bombay Village Police Act, are essentially criminal proceedings. The scheme of Ss. 9 to 11 of the Oaths Act, shows that these sections are not intended to apply to criminal proceedings. In criminal matters, the truth has to be ascertained by the Court, and the matter stated on special oath cannot be and ought not to be accepted as conclusively proved by such an oath in a criminal proceeding. *Chiman Damodar Bhate v. The evidence of a witness of tender years, though taken without any solemn affirmation in the prescribed form, is admissible by virtue of the provisions of S. 13, Oaths Act. Such evidence, however, must be received with due care and caution. It is necessary that before proceeding to examine such witnesses, the Court should satisfy itself that the witness is competent to testify, that is, is capable of understanding the questions put to him and of giving rational answers to those questions. Thereafter the Court should proceed to administer an oath or affirmation as required by the Oaths Act. Hari Ramji Pavar v. Emperor.

Where, contrary to the conditions of a licence, the salesman of an opium licensee sells opium to a person under the age of 14 years in the licensee's absence, the licensee is guilty of an offence under S. 9, Opium Act, the mere sale of opium in contravention of the conditions of the licence constituting the offence. The Local Government cannot, however, delegate this power of making the rules to the Commissioner in Sind, and therefore the last words of rule 39 "or in such form as the Commissioner from time to time prescribes" are ultra vires. —S. 9 (d)—Offence under — Dangerous Drugs Act (II of 1930), Ss. 19 (a), 21 (1)—Joint trial, whether legal—Cr. P. C., Ss. 233, 239.

The offence of the sale of opium without a licence is quite dissociable from the offence of importing foreign opium into British India. Opium sold without a licence need not necessarily be imported opium, and opium need not necessarily be imported for sale. The offence of the abetment of the importation of opium into British India, by one accused can form no part of the transaction in respect of which a charge under S. 9 (d), Opium Act, is framed against another for selling half a tola of opium to a bogus purchaser. Consequently, these offences are different offences committed in the course of the same transaction, falling within the exception to S. 233, Cr. P. C., laid down in S. 239 (d) of the same Code. Both the accused may be tried jointly in respect of the offence under the Dangerous Drugs Act, but the latter must be tried separately in respect of the offence under S. 9 (d) of the Opium Act. *Ghasiram v. The effect of Ss. 9 and 10, Opium Act, is this, that when once it is proved that an accused person has dealt with opium in any of the ways described in S. 9, the onus of proving that he had a right so to deal with it, is thrown on the accused by S. 10. But the commission of an act which may be an offence must be proved before the presumption comes into play at all, and it cannot, therefore, be used to establish that fact. *Ishwar Chandra Singh v. OPIUM ACT (I OF 1878)

———S. 11—Confiscation—Conveyance used for carrying opium—Notice to owner, necessity of.

Under S. 11, Opium Act, a conveyance used for the purpose of carrying opium is liable to confiscation, which means that the section leaves it to the discretion of the Tribunal which is trying the case to decide whether having regard to the facts of a particular case, the conveyance used in the carrying of the opium may be confiscated. In a case where there is no improper conduct imputed to the owner of the conveyance, and, where during the course of the case nothing is proved to show improper conduct on the part of the owner, it would be advisable for the Magistrate who is trying the case to give the owner an opportunity of being heard before he comes to the conclusion whether the conveyance should be confiscated. Mohammad Keshab v. Emperor. 27 Cr. L. J. 127 : 91 I. C. 703 : 30 C. W. N. 240 : A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1021.

———S. 11—Confiscation of boat.

S. 11, Opium Act, does not contemplate that every receptacle, such as of a ship or a house or a carriage, in which a small quantity of opium may happen to be found, is liable to confiscation; the liability arises from the owner of such conveyance using the conveyance for the purpose of transporting opium. A person cannot be made liable because his servant makes use of his private carriage as a depositary for his private stock of opium. Abdul Rahman v. Emperor.

The special jurisdiction conferred on a Magistrate under the Opium Act is not in any way, limited by the Code of Criminal Procedure. Under S. 12, Opium Act, a Magistrate who has power to order confiscation, has also power to give the owner of the thing liable to be confiscated, an option to pay, in lieu of confiscation, such fine as he thinks fit to impose, and the amount of the fine may exceed the limit imposed by S. 32, Cr. In order to justify entry and search of a boat between sunset and sunrise against the will of the person in charge or without his permission, an officer must obtain a warrant from another officer who must be authorized under S. 19 of the Act. If an officer who has entered on a boat lawfully sees opium in it, he may seize it if he has reason to believe that it is liable to confiscation. Emperor v. Nawzu.

The relevant rules relating to the disposal of jail appeals in Chap. XXIII, that is, rr. 26 and 27, do not at all imply the necessity for sealing the judgment after it has been passed by the Judge or Judges concerned. The duty of affixing the seal of the Court to a judgment imposed on the Bench Reader by Chap. XX, r. 7, Oudh Chief Court Rules is not a duty of a quasi-judicial nature but a duty of a purely ministerial nature. ———Ss. 21 (9), 161—'Public servant'—Quartermaster's clerk—Taking illegal gratification in respect of official act—Offence.

The mere fact that a person is in the pay or service of Government is not enough to constitute him a public servant within the meaning of S. 21 (ninthly), Penal Code. He must also be an "officer", i. e., holder of some office. The office may be of dignity and importance or it may be humble; but whatever its nature, it is essential that the person holding the office should have in some degree delegated to him certain functions of Government. A Quartermaster's clerk merely as such is not necessarily a public servant within the meaning of S. 21, Penal Code, but a person who is otherwise an officer in the pay or service of Government, does not lose his status as a public servant if, while still such an officer, he is employed as a Quartermaster's clerk. For the purposes of S. 161, Penal Code, it is not necessary that at the time of the bribe-taking the accused person should be actually discharging the functions which constitute him a public servant; it is sufficient that he is a public servant and his act falls under one of the three clauses specified in the section. *Ahad Shah v. —S. 23—Wrongful loss—What is—Acting fraudulently or dishonestly.

D who was a horse-dealer was entrusted by C with a mare to be disposed of at the best possible price. He received an offer from L which he did not accept. Subsequently D showed L a telegram which purported to have been sent by C, and thereby induced L to give a higher price for the mare. L stated that the price which he paid was the price which he would have paid even if the mare belonged to D : Held, that no wrongful loss was caused to L within the meaning of S. 23, Penal Code, by reason of the fact that he was induced to give a higher price of the horse and D could not, under the circumstances, be held to have acted fraudulently. *Dick v. —S. 34—Applicability—Common intention—Inference from conduct—Use of lathi—Presumption.

It is not necessary for the application of S. 34 to find that there was a pre-arranged plan of doing something which amounts to an offence. Common intention may be conceived of immediately before or at the time of the assault. In general, the precise intention of several persons acting in concert is a matter of inference from their conduct. Where, therefore, the evidence shows that the accused attacked a person belonging to the opposite faction with lathis as soon as they sighted him, and all of them used their lathis, it should be inferred that all of them became of one mind when they suddenly saw him and entertained the common intention of beating him with lathis. Where each of the assailants was determined to use his lathi as effectively as he was capable of and none of them gave the slightest indication to his companions of placing limitations on the use of a weapon which is frequently deadly in its effect, every one of them must have understood that the attack was likely to result in grievous hurt to their victim. Every one is supposed to intend the probable consequences of his act. Jaimangal v. Emperor.

S. 34 was framed to meet a case in which it may be difficult to distinguish between the acts of individual members of a party or to prove exactly what part was taken by each of them but the section is not restricted to such cases only and it can well be applied and has been applied to cases, in which the offence was committed by only one of two or three persons who all had a common intention. The real test is the common intention. The "common intention" referred to in S. 34 is an intention to commit the crime actually committed. Therefore only those persons can be held liable under S. 34 who had a common intention to commit the crime which was actually committed. Raja Ram v. Emperor.

The existence of a common intention is the sole test of joint responsibility, and what the common intention is, must be proved. S. 34—Object.

There is no doubt about the law, and the difficulty lies in determining the extent to which the common intention and the common contemplation of the gravest consequences may have gone. The question, therefore, always resolves itself into one of fact. To overcome these difficulties and obviate a failure of justice in such cases, the law has spread its net wide. A number of provisions have been enacted, and though some of them may, to a certain extent, overlap, they have been designed to prevent loopholes of escape to guilty persons. One of these provisions is S. 34, Penal Code. It applies when there is a common intention to commit a certain act, and when that is clear, there is no difficulty. Mangta v. Emperor.

38 Cr. L. J. 628 :
168 I. C. 748 : 9 R. N. 269.

PENAL CODE ACT (XLV OF 1860)

S. 34—Principle.

S. 34, Penal Code, deals with the doing of separate acts similar or diverse by several persons; if all are done in furtherance of a common intention, each person is liable for the result of them all as if he had done them himself. The expressions "that act" and "the act" in the latter part of the section must include the whole action covered by "a criminal act" in the first part. Mian Khan v. Emperor.

29 Cr. L. J. 474 :
109 I. C. 122 : 10 L. L. J. 366.

S. 34—Scope—Act done by several persons in furtherance of common intention—Principle of liability.

S. 34, Penal Code, merely lays down a principle of liability, and does not create a distinct offence. When two or more persons join actively in an assault on a third person, they are directly responsible for the injuries caused to the extent to which they had a common intention to cause those injuries, and what their common intention was must be gathered from the circumstances. In the matter of : Paczulla.

S. 34—Scope—"Act", what is.

The word "act" includes a "series of acts" and S. 34, contemplates, amongst other things, a series of acts done by several persons, some perhaps by one of those persons and some by another, but all in pursuance of a common intention. Motilal Mallik v. Emperor.

36 Cr. L. J. 1220 :
157 I. C. 829 : 39 C. W. N. 199 :
A. I. R. 1935 Cal. 526.

S. 34—Scope—Application to offence, under S. 304.

S. 34, Penal Code, refers to cases in which several persons both do an act and intend to do that act; it does not refer to cases where several persons intend to do an act and some one or more of them do an entirely different act. In the latter class of cases S. 149 of the Code, may be applicable but S. 34 is not. S. 34, Penal Code, which is based on common intention, cannot possibly be used with the second part of S. 304 of the Code, which expressly excludes intention. Aniruddha Mana v. Emperor.

26 Cr. L. J. 827 :

S. 34—Scope and construction.

Where another person actually killed the deceased, the accused who was stated to have accompanied him and attempted to kill him could not be charged with the murder under S. 34, Penal Code. S. 34, Penal Code, is to be read according to the meaning of its terms without reference to any doctrines derived from the English Common Law. Emperor v. Nirmal Kanta Roy.

S. 34 does not create a new or distinct offence. It merely lays down a principle of liability that where several persons go with a common intention to execute a common object, each and every one of them becomes responsible for the acts of each and every other done in execution and furtherance of their common intention. Emperor v. Barendra Kumar Ghose. (F. B.) 25 Cr. L. J. 817 : 81 I. C. 353 : 38 C. L. J. 411 : 28 C. W. N. 170 : A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 257.

In some cases where the omission of the offence is abetted by aid and conspiracy, the abettor may be treated as a principal under S. 34, Penal Code. Broadly speaking, however, it would be illogical to hold that a man is guilty of both the principal offence and of its abetment. Samarendra Kumar Chakravarty v. Emperor. 38 Cr. L. J. 673 : 169 I. Although to constitute an offence under S. 304, Part II of the Penal Code, there must be no intention of causing death or such injury as the offender knew was likely to cause death, there must still be a common intention to do an act with the knowledge that it is likely to cause death though without the intention of causing death. S. 34 of the Penal Code can be applied to a case under the second part of S. 304 of the Code. Adam Ali Taluqdar v. Emperor. 28 Cr. L. J. 334 : 100 I. C. 718 : 31 C. W. N. 314 : 45 C. L. J. 131 : A. PENAL CODE ACT (XLV OF 1860)

———Ss. 34, 37—Distinction.

The distinction between Ss. 34 and 37, Penal Code, is that while the former requires a common intention for a criminal act done by several persons in which case each actor becomes liable as if that act were done by him alone, S. 37 deals with intentional co-operation in an offence committed by means of several acts, and punishes such co-operation. Emperor v. Itwa Munda. (S. B.)

Where a person instigates another to strike a particular person, and an altogether different person who happens to be close by at the time is struck, the instigator cannot be held responsible, and S. 34, Penal Code, would not apply to the case because the act abetted was different from the act done. *Po Ya v. ———Ss. 34, 111, 394—Applicability of—Robbery committed by four persons—Abetment—Death caused by one alone, whether probable consequence—Liability of others.

A robbery was committed by four men : two, one of whom was the accused, went from house to house bullying and ill-treating the inmates and making them give up their valuables, while the other two kept guard on the house tops. Of the latter pair, one was armed with a gun which he fired off several times, and towards the close of the affair when the villagers began to make it unpleasant for the robbers by stone throwing, he aimed at one of the villagers who took a prominent part in stone throwing, and shot and killed him. The accused having been convicted of murder, appealed to the Chief Court : Held, (1) that inasmuch as the fatal shot was fired by one man alone, the accused could not be convicted of murder by reason of S. 34, Penal Code; (2) that in order to apply S. 111, Penal Code, it must be found (1) that the appellant was an abettor of the robbery and (2) that the murder was a probable consequence of the abetment and was committed in pursuance of the conspiracy to commit the robbery; (3) that the accused was guilty of an offence under S. 394, Penal Code. *Harnam Singh v. PENAL CODE ACT (XLV OF 1860)

—Ss. 34, 120-A—Difference between.

There is not much substantial difference between conspiracy as defined in S. 120-A, Penal Code, and acting on a common intention as contemplated in S. 34, Penal Code. While in the former, the gist of the offence is the bare engagement and association to break the law even though the illegal act does not follow, the gist of the offence under S. 34, Penal Code, is the commission of a criminal act in furtherance of a common intention of all the offenders, which means that there should be a unity of criminal behaviour resulting in something for which an individual would be punishable if it were all done by himself alone. *Provincial Government, Central Provinces and Berar v. —Ss. 34, 141—Unlawful assembly—Essence of offence.

The essence of the offence defined in S. 141, Penal Code, is the common unlawful purpose and an accused person cannot be convicted if the common object proved is different from the common object in the charge or for which he was tried. Persons to be tried jointly for an offence under S. 142, Penal Code, must have been associated from the first in the series of acts which form the same transaction. In re : Lognath Aiyar. 11 Cr. L. —Ss. 34, 141, 142—Common intention—Inference.

In the absence of evidence or reasons to the contrary, it is permissible to presume that the common object of a riotous mob is that indicated by their conduct, and that they entertained from the beginning the common object indicated by their conduct throughout their proceedings. In re : Lognath Aiyar.

—Ss. 34, 147, 149, 325, 326—Unlawful assembly—Common object, proof of.

Where the alleged common object of an unlawful assembly fails, the accused cannot be convicted under S. 147 or under S. 325 or 326, Penal Code, with reference to Ss. 34 and 149. They can only be convicted if individual acts of illegality can be proved against each of them individually. In order to sustain a conviction in a case of unlawful assembly the rule is that the common object stated in the charge must agree in essential particulars with the common object established in the evidence. Ritbaran Singh v. Emperor.

A Court cannot presume that any and every person who is found to have been present in a riotous mob at any time or to have joined it at any stage during its activities, is in law guilty of every act committed by it from the beginning to the end. In such cases, the Court should consider, firstly, what was the original intention of the mob and which of its offences naturally were inherent or likely to have occurred in the prosecution of that intention and which were not; secondly, at what stage of the riot were the accused present and what was the temper, the intention, and the common object of the mob while they were present; thirdly, whether if they had left the mob at any stage, they could nevertheless be constructively held guilty of any of the acts committed by the mob after they have left. *Ganapathi Sarma v. ———Ss. 34, 149—Distinction between.

The language of S. 34, Penal Code, is far more restrictive than that of 149 and the Legislature clearly intended to narrow down the scope of S. 34. To establish guilt under that section, it is necessary to prove a common intention as distinguished from a common object, and it must be shown that the criminal act was committed in furtherance of that intention. Ritbaran Singh v. Emperor.

Two of them were killed as the result of blows inflicted upon the head and the third received simple injuries. The accused were charged with offences under Ss. 304 and 323 read with S. 149 and were convicted of offences under Ss. 304 and 323 read with S. 34: Held, (1) that the conviction was perfectly justified and it could not be said that the accused persons were prejudiced for the reason that in the charges S. 149 was mentioned instead of S. 34, inasmuch as the former section was wide enough to cover the principle of the latter; (2) that the accused having committed three distinct offences, they were liable to separate sentence for each offence though all three were committed in the course of the same transaction. *Pira v. Where in a case in which the accused are charged under S. 325, read with S. 149, Penal Code, it is not found possible to bring home the offence to the accused with the aid of the provisions of the latter section, a fortiori it would be more difficult to bring home the offence to them with the aid of S. 34, Penal Code. In order to bring the accused

Where a Court draws up a charge under S. 325 read with S. 149, Penal Code, it clearly intimates to the accused that they did not cause grievous hurt to anybody themselves but that they are guilty by implication of such offence, inasmuch as somebody else, in prosecution of the common object of the riot in which they were engaged, did cause such grievous hurt. Where these persons are acquitted of rioting, all the offences which they are said to have committed by implication disappear, and they cannot be convicted of the substantive offence under S. 325. S. 34 can only come into operation when there is a substantive charge of causing grievous hurt. The considerations which govern S. 34 are entirely different, and in many respects, the opposite of those which govern S. 149. Reazuddi v. Emperor.

—Ss. 34, 299, 300, 325—Number of persons inflicting lathi blows on deceased, some of which being fatal—S. 34 when comes into play.

Under S. 34, Penal Code, when a criminal act is done by several persons in furtherance of the common intention of all, each of such persons is liable for that act in the same manner as if it were done by him alone. A common intention is an intention shared by the person who has caused death and by the other assailants who did not themselves cause death. If the act which caused death is neither murder nor culpable homicide because the person who dealt blow did not have such intention as is specified under Ss. 299 or 300 of the Penal Code, but only the knowledge which is specified in either of these two sections, there is no intention which can be shared by all the assailants who did not strike the fatal blow and, therefore, S. 34 cannot apply. The knowledge referred to in S. 299 and 300 is personal knowledge of the person who struck the blow and it cannot be shared by his co-assailants, but in any case, S. 34 is restricted to common intention and does not embrace any knowledge: Held, on facts that it was impossible to say whether there was common intention to cause the death of the deceased or whether the person who inflicted the fatal blow committed murder because of his intention or of his knowledge. As it was not known who inflicted the fatal blow and it was not shown that there was a common intent, it was impossible to hold that the convictions under S. 325 were incorrect. Though undoubtedly there was at least a common intent of causing grievous hurt and the convictions under S. 325 were justified. Sunder Singh v. Emperor. 40 Cr. L. J. 722 :

—Ss. 34, 300, Excep. (4), 307—Grave and sudden provocation, plea of, when available—Assault—Accused acting in concert, what amounts to.

The plea of grave and sudden provocation is not open to a person who, merely because his relatives are abused, arms himself with a knife and attacks a defenceless man inflicting severe injuries. The conviction of such a person under S. 307, Penal Code, is not invalid. PENAL CODE ACT (XLV OF 1860)

———Ss. 34, 302—Murder in furtherance of common intention—No evidence as to actual culprit—Liability of all.

A woman who had been declared unchaste or kari and who had left for her father's house came into the possession of her husband and three of his relations. The next day she was found dead in a pit in a canal. The tracks of these four men ran to and from the spot where the dead body was found : Held, (1) that the onus was heavily on the accused to rebut the presumption of their guilt for abduction and murder of the woman, and if they did not discharge this burden, it was open to the Court to convict them ; (2) that though there was no evidence as to who actually committed the murder, the four persons having taken the woman out with the knowledge and with the purpose that one of them should murder her, the murder was done in furtherance of the common intention of all and all the four were guilty of murder as principals under S. 34, Penal Code. Bukshan v. Emperor.

———Ss. 34, 302—Murder—Several accused—Doubt as to actual murderer—Procedure—Jury trial—Verdict of Jury partly accepted by Magistrate—Applicability of S. 34.

A person was waylaid by two men, one of whom stabbed him in the neck with a dagger. They were pursued and one P was seized while the other escaped. P was identified by the deceased as one of the assailants. In consequence of a statement made by P, M was also arrested. The two men were tried under Ss. 302 and 302/34, Penal Code. The Jury unanimously found M not guilty and further said that there was a doubt as to whether P struck the fatal blow. The Sessions Judge accepting the verdict as to M, acquitted him but as to P, while accepting that there was a doubt as to whether he struck the fatal blow, the Judge did not agree that there was any doubt as to the two acting in furtherance of a common object, and holding that P was guilty under S. 302/34, I. P. C., referred the case to the High Court : Held, that under the circumstances, it was doubtful whether S. 34, Penal Code, was applicable, and that, instead, P should be tried again under S. 302 read with S. 114 of the Code. *Emperor v. Two persons armed with guns went to the house of G to commit robbery. It was their intention to use the guns in case obstruction was offered to them. A servant of G happened to come at the time from outside and was fired at and killed. It was not established which of the two accused had shot : Held, that both of the accused were guilty of murder but

The party of the accused, who were three in number, attacked the party of the complainants with the object of giving the latter a thrashing. During the course of the attack, one of the accused used a spear with the result that one member of the complainants' party was killed as a result of a spear thrust. The other members of the complainants' party only received simple hurts. It was found that the other two accused did not anticipate that the third accused would make use of the point of his weapon in the attack: Held, (1) that the accused who used the spear was guilty of an offence under S. 302; (2) that the two other accused were guilty of an offence under S. 323. *Ramzan Ali v. can be inferred.

Where from the circumstances it appears that the common intention of a party of accused was merely to abuse the other party for their insulting behaviour and possibly to use fists and accordingly there was an exchange of abuse between the parties and a sudden fight subsequently ensued resulting in death of one of the opposite party, a common intention to commit murder cannot be inferred. The whole affair is one of a sudden fight in which each participant is responsible only for the individual acts, which can be proved against him and the accused in such a case cannot be convicted for any offence other than one under S. 323, Penal Code. *Mian Singh Nand Lal v. The one who struck the blow is guilty of murder and the other, who must have known that grievous hurt would, in all probability be caused, is guilty of having abetted an offence under S. 325, read with S. 109, Penal Code. *Bahal Singh v. The charge as well as conviction should be under S. 392 or 395, as the case may be, read with S. 397. The higher punishment provided by S. 397 can be inflicted only on the offender who actually uses a deadly weapon, or causes or attempts to cause death or grievous hurt, and S. 34 cannot be applied to the other offenders to make them liable to enhanced punishment under S. 397. Three persons acting in concert and armed with lathis attacked a fourth and injured him so severely, that as a result of the injuries inflicted, he died; the Sessions Judge convicted two of the assailants under S. 304, Penal Code, and acquitted the third though he found that he was present and took part in the assault. On appeal by Government against the acquittal: Held, that each of the assailants was guilty of murder. All of them must be taken to have intended to cause death or to have had every reason to know that the probable result of their joint action would be death. Emperor v. Ram Nawaaz. 14 Cr. L. -----S. 75—Applicability.

A conviction under the Punjab Frontier Crimes Regulation is not a conviction under the Penal Code, and the provisions of S. 75, Penal Code, cannot be applied with reference to such a conviction. Emperor v. Khan Mahommed. 1 Cr. L. J. 1061 : 5 P. L. R. 441 : 17 P. R. Cr. of 1904.

-----S. 75—Applicability.

A mere attempt to commit an offence falling under Chap. XII or Chap. XVII, Penal Code, is not sufficient to bring into operation the penal provisions of S. 75. S. 75 being a penal section must be construed strictly. Emperor v. Ramzan Ghulam Hyder. 40 Cr. L. J. 816 (b) : 183 I. C. 602 (2) : 12 R. S. 61 : 1939 Kar. 676 : A. I. R. 1939 Sind 207.

-----S. 75—Applicability.

A person convicted by a District Magistrate of an offence punishable under Chap. XII or XVII, Penal Code, on a trial held under the provisions of the Sind Frontier Regulation, 1892, is liable to enhanced punishment under S. 75, Penal Code, on conviction of a second offence under either of the above Chapters by any Court in British India. Mazar v. Emperor. 18 Cr. L. J. 909 : 42 I. C. 141 : 11 S. L. R. 46 : A. I. R. 1917 Sind 17.

-----S. 75—Applicability.

A previous convict entered an open thorned enclosure in which goats and sheep were kept, but on the owner being disturbed, he fled and was arrested near by. He was convicted under Ss. 457/75 of the Penal Code, and sentenced to transportation for life: Held, on appeal that the only offence of which he could be convicted was one of attempted theft under Ss. 379/511, Penal Code, and that as S. 75 did not apply to attempted offences, an enhanced sentence could not be inflicted upon him. *Ghasita v. PENAL CODE ACT (XLV OF 1860)

-----S. 75—Applicability.

An accused renders himself liable to enhanced punishment under S. 75, Penal Code, only if there was a previous conviction against him before he committed the offence with which he stands charged. But where the previous conviction was subsequent to the commission of the offence charged, S. 75, Penal Code, has no application. Po So v. Emperor.

-----S. 75—Applicability—Previous conviction, very old.

An enhanced sentence under S. 75, Penal Code, should not be passed where the previous conviction took place as much as 12 years before the subsequent one and there is only one previous offence. Allah Din v. Emperor.

29 Cr. L. J. 32 :
 106 I. C. 448 : 29 P. L. R. 59.

-----S. 75—Applicability.

S. 75, Penal Code, applies to cases where it is intended to pass sentences more severe than those provided in the Penal Code for the particular offences charged. But that does not involve a complete exclusion from consideration of previous convictions in cases where it is not

PENAL CODE ACT (XLV OF 1860)

—S. 75—Enhanced punishment—Discretion of Court.

The powers given to a Court by S. 75, Penal Code, must be exercised with a certain amount of discretion. The Court should take care to make the penalty fit the crime and the practice of committing petty offenders to the Sessions Court after three or four convictions should cease. Even if such persons are committed, there is no necessity for the Sessions Judge to inflict a vindictive sentence. Gala Mana v. Emperor.

———S. 75—Previous conviction—Mode of proof—Subsequent conviction trivial—Sentence of transportation for life, propriety of.

The Court should, as a rule, prove a previous conviction when it is relied upon for the purposes of applying S. 75, Penal Code, by one of the methods laid down in S. 511, Cr. P. C. When an accused person has had a certain number of convictions against him, it is not in accordance with enlightened ideas of the administration of criminal justice to sentence him to transportation for life for the commission of a subsequent offence which is trivial in itself. *Daya Ram v. ———S. 75—Previous conviction—Mode of proving.

When an accused is charged under the provisions of S. 75, Penal Code, it is absolutely essential that the previous conviction in question should be clearly and legally proved. The proper way to prove such a conviction is either (1) by an extract certified under the hand of the officer in whose custody are the records of the Court which convicted, or (2) by a certificate under the hand of the officer in charge of the Jail in which the punishment or any part thereof was undergone, or else by production of the actual warrant of commitment under which the punishment was suffered. In every case there must be evidence as to the identity of the accused person so convicted. Feroze Khan v. Emperor.

suffered in that State under one of those provisions may be taken into account by a Magistrate in British India when awarding punishment under I. P. C. But the sentence passed must not differ in kind from what is permitted by the section applicable to the offence or exceed the limits imposed by that section and by S. 32 or S. 34, Cr. P. C. In such a case it would be illegal to apply S. 75, I. P. C., or S. 3 or 4 of the Whipping Act, or S. 565, Cr. P. C., upon the strength of the foreign conviction. Ghastia Teli v. Emperor. 2 Cr. L. Where the previous conviction of an accused is relevant with reference to the question whether the provisions of S. 562, Cr. P. Under S. 75, Penal Code, the Court, if it awards a sentence of transportation, must sentence the convict to transportation for life. In lieu, however of such sentence, it may sentence the convict to imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and under the provisions of S. 59 of the Code, it may, in every case in which the offender is punishable with imprisonment for a term of seven years or upwards, instead of awarding the sentence of imprisonment, sentence the offender to transportation for a term not less than seven years, and not exceeding the term for which under the Code such offender is liable to imprisonment. *Muhammad Sharif v. ———Ss. 75, 379—Sentence.

In the case of men with previous convictions, regard should be had to their career and to the time that has elapsed between the convictions passed upon them. Ss. 75, Penal Code, and S. 221, Cr. P. C., were not intended for the purpose of automatically enhancing by a kind of geometrical progression the sentence to be passed after a previous conviction. The reason for passing a more severe sentence in the case of a criminal with a previous conviction is primarily to protect society from the predations and offences committed by an habitual rogue, who has shown no signs of repentance. A Magistrate or Judge should make some enquiry into the repute and antecedent behaviour of a man whom he proposes to sentence severely. Nyein v. Emperor.

A process-server was charged by H, a judgment-debtor, under S. 342 and S. 342 read with S. 114, I. P. C., with causing wrongful confinement to H. A warrant for H's arrest was issued and the bailiff endorsed it for service to the process-server. H was arrested but was released by the Judge under S. 185, C. P. C. The process-server had returned the warrant the same day to the bailiff without any endorsement on it, and the bailiff believing that it was executed, merely returned the warrant to the process-server for want of his report, as he had made no report of execution. On this the process-server, instead of endorsing execution on the warrant, re-arrested H next day: Held, that the second arrest was illegal. When the judgment-debtor was arrested and brought before the Court, the process had been executed: Held, further that the offence was not a serious one, for, it did not appear that the process-server was actuated by malice. It was possible that he made a genuine mistake of fact and thought that the process was being returned to him for re-execution and was thus protected under S. 79, I. P. C. Maung Htwe v. Ba Thant.

—S. 84—Applicability.

To attract the application of S. 84 it is not enough to establish a doubt as to the soundness of the mind of the accused at the time of the commission of the crime. This is not a kind of doubt of which the accused may be given the benefit. To entitle the accused to the benefit of the section, the accused must satisfy the Court that his condition of mind was such that he was incapable of knowing the nature of his act or that what he was doing was either wrong or contrary to law. Emperor v. Bahadur.

S. 84, Penal Code, applies only to cases of intoxication and does not cover a case where what is alleged is an inherent defect or infirmity of mind, which is of greater significance because such infirmity or disease of mind is more likely to prevent the formation of that intention which is required by the law to be established as a part of the offence charged. Similarly, there is no justification for attributing to the person the same intent which he would have had if he had not been intoxicated, though the same knowledge can be imported to him under the section. *In re : G. —S. 84—Applicability of, conditions for absence of evidence as to state of mind—Proof as to accused suffering from grave mental depression, etc.—Absence of motive.

S. 84, Penal Code, requires it to be proved that at the time when the offence was committed, the offender by reason of unsoundness of mind was incapable of knowing the nature of the act or that he was doing what was either wrong or contrary to law. It would be obviously very difficult ordinarily to prove the precise state of an offender's mind at the time of the commission of an offence, but some indication thereof is often furnished by the words or the conduct of the offender while committing it, or immediately before or after the commission of the offence. Where no such evidence is available and the evidence establishes beyond doubt that the accused's mind had been unhinged by the death of his son, that he was suffering from grave mental depression and insomnia, was subject to delusions and occasionally became violent, and the accused had no motive whatever for committing the offence of murdering his wife and daughter and of attempting to murder another daughter, the conclusion is irresistible that he must have committed the offences without realizing the nature of his act. Dewa Ram v. Emperor.

————S. 84—Burden of proof—Evidence of insanity.

Where an accused person relies upon S. 84, Penal Code, to escape the legal consequences of his act, the onus is upon him to prove that he was at the time when the act was committed, by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing its nature or that what he was doing was either wrong or contrary to law. That onus may be discharged by producing evidence as to the conduct of the accused shortly prior to the offence and his conduct at the time or immediately afterwards, also by evidence of his mental conditions, his family history and so forth. If contemporaneous acts of his are proved to have been of such a nature as to indicate that he was quite incapable of forming rational views, that would be a strong element to show that at the time of the crime in question he was not capable of knowing that it was a wrongful act. *Emperor v. —S. 84—Insanity—Condition subsequent and antecedent to commission of act, relevancy of.

To entitle an accused to exemption from criminal liability on the ground of insanity, it must be proved that at the time of committing the act he was labouring under such a defect of reason from disease of the mind as not to know the nature and quality of the act he was doing or as not to know that what he was doing was wrong. The condition of the accused's mind antecedent and subsequent to the commission of the crime is relevant only in so far as it might assist the Court in coming to a conclusion as to his mental capacity at the time he struck the fatal blow. The mere fact that on former occasions the accused had been occasionally subject to insane delusions or had suffered from derangement of the mind or that subsequently he had at times behaved like a mentally deficient person is per se insufficient to bring the case within the exemption. The fact that the physical and mental ailments from which a man suffered had rendered his intellect weak and had affected his emotions and will is insufficient to bring his case within S. 84. The question is whether his cognitive faculties had been impaired to the degree described in the last part of the section. It is not every kind of frantic humour or something unaccountable in man's actions that points him out to be such a mad man as is to be exempted from punishment; it must be a man that is totally deprived of his understanding and memory and does not know what he is doing, no more than an infant, than a brute or a wild beast. *Tola Ram v. —S. 84—Insanity—Delusion—Proof.

On the morning of Sunday, the 9th October 1910, the wife of the accused was found lying murdered in her house. Going out of the house, the accused met a Police constable and told him what had happened. The latter took him to the Police Station where he made a report in which he said:—"To-day in the morning I asked my wife to give me water.....She did not give it to me. I abused her and she also abused me. I got enraged and struck her with a gandasa and a knife. She died. The gandasa and the knife are at the house." The same day, a Magistrate recorded the statement of the accused in which he added that his wife had an amour with his father, that on Friday or Thursday at night, he saw his father lying with his wife and that he kept peace at the time, but his angry passions continued all along. Five days after the occurrence, the accused was examined by the Civil Surgeon who kept him under medical observation from 14th October to 8th November 1910, and came to the conclusion that he was insane and incapable of making his defence. Since then, the accused, on the recommendation of the Civil Surgeon, was confined in a lunatic asylum for about a year and 8 months prior to his trial. The accused's statement about his wife's amour with his father was obviously untrue as the father was 70 or 75 years old and the wife was 8 months advanced in pregnancy. It was also established that for 3 or 3½ years prior to the occurrence, the accused had suffered at intervals from fits of mental unsoundness in the course of which he was subject to delusions: Held, (1) on the evidence, that the accused had failed to establish that he had acted under a bona fide delusion existing at the time of the commission of the offence or that his mental unsoundness was such that he did not know at the time that he was doing what was contrary to law; (2) that the fact that the accused was of unsound mind on the date of occurrence was not sufficient to entitle him to a verdict of acquittal. *Muhammad Husain v. On the other hand, provided the Jury should be of opinion that when he committed the offence, he was capable of distinguishing right from wrong and not under the influence of such a delusion as disabled him from discerning that he was doing a wrong act or one contrary to law, he would be amenable and held guilty in the eye of the law. *Bazlar Rahman v. Although the fact that a murder has been committed in a particularly brutal and purposeless way for no motive whatsoever, is a circumstance which may be taken into consideration together with other material to enable a Court to decide whether or not the crime in question was committed at a time when the accused person was in such a state of mind that he was incapable of knowing the nature of his act, yet in the absence of other evidence mere want of motive for the crime is not sufficient to base an inference of unsoundness of mind for the

No apparent sane motive could be alleged for the attack which was really unaccountable. The accused was in normal condition at the time of trial: Held, (1) that at the time when the accused attacked the two persons, he was really suffering from an impulse of homicidal mania and the case fell under S. 84; (2) that as the accused was no longer suffering from insanity, he should be detained in the jail where he already was, not as a convict, but in safe custody under S. 471, Cr. PENAL CODE ACT (XLV OF 1860)

—S. 84—Insanity, signs and indicia of—Melancholic homicidal mania—Incapability of knowing illegal nature of act.

The prisoner who was charged with committing murder, was a young man of weak intellect, and the motive actuating the offence was trivial and inadequate. As soon as he had killed his uncle by hacking him on the head and neck with a sword, the prisoner, rushed about, brandishing his weapon and shouting "Victory to Kali." He attempted to strike other persons, including his own father. When the paroxysm had passed off, during the Police enquiry, the prisoner appeared to be rational, but immediately afterwards he developed aphasia, attempted to commit suicide and was undoubtedly insane from that time for a period of five years: Held, that the above are the signs and indicia of insanity as expressed in works on the subject of Medical Jurisprudence, and that the prisoner was suffering from a fit of melancholic homicidal mania at the time he hacked the deceased with the sword and was, by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing that he was doing an act which was wrong or contrary to law, and therefore he was not guilty of murder. *Shibo Koeri v. If a person is capable of knowing the nature of the act or of realizing that the act is wrong or contrary to law, he must be held to be guilty. —S. 84—Insanity, what is—Evidence.

In considering a plea of insanity, the Court is concerned solely with the state of mind of the accused at the time of the act. The antecedent and subsequent conduct of the man are relevant only to show what was the state of his mind at the time the act was committed. An accused cannot be held to be of unsound mind within the purview of S. 84, where the evidence does not go to the length of showing that he could not have been conscious of the nature of the act he was doing at the time of the occurrence but merely shows that he was in a bewildered state of mind a day or two before the date of the occurrence. *John Dowlat Moon v. Under S. 84 it is not every mental derangement that exempts an accused person from criminal responsibility for his acts, but that derangement must be shown to be one which impairs the cognitive faculties of the accused, i. e., the faculty of understanding the nature of his act in its bearing on the victim or in relation to himself, i. e., his own responsibility for it. *Dhani Bux v. Where it is proved that an accused person has committed the offence of murder, the onus lies upon him to show that he is exempted from criminal responsibility by reason of such unsoundness of mind as made him incapable of knowing the nature of the act or that he was doing what was either wrong or contrary to law. It is not every form of unsoundness of mind that would exempt a person from criminal responsibility; it is only unsoundness of mind which materially impairs the cognitive faculties of the mind that can form a ground of such exemption. *Mantajali v. ————S. 84—Plea of insanity—Burden of proof—Ganja smoker setting fire to building—Exemption.

The onus of proving the defence of insanity afforded by S. 84, Penal Code, rests upon the accused. An inveterate ganja smoker set fire to the thatched building of a school, by taking a torch from a kitchen and putting it to the thatch, and after throwing the torch on the roof of the kitchen ran away. It was found that as a result of the vicious habit of ganja smoking he was in the habit of beating his wife and children and refusing to take food, but the Medical Officer pronounced that the case was not one of insanity. It also appeared that the accused who was a teacher in the school had some ground for annoyance in connection with his service : Held, (1) that the facts of the case were not strong enough to give him exemption from the criminality of his conduct under S. 84, Penal Code. *Public Prosecutor v. ————S. 84—Plea of insanity—Evidence requisite.

It is a mistake to suppose that in order to satisfy a Jury that the plea of insanity is well-founded, scientific evidence must be adduced. If the existence of facts is such as to indicate an unsound state of mind, that is quite sufficient. The want of motive for the commission of a crime and its being committed under circumstances which render detection inevitable are, no doubt, important points to be taken into consideration coupled with the other evidence on record on the question of insanity. But the fact that a horrible murder has been committed with no apparent motive, does not lead to the inference that the per-—S. 84—Unsoundness of mind, meaning of—Want of motive and signs of hallucination, effect of.

PENAL CODE ACT (XLV OF 1860)

A man may be suffering from some form of insanity in the sense in which the words would be used by an alienist but may not be suffering from unsoundness of mind as defined in S. 84, Penal Code. The law recognises nothing but incapacity to realise the nature of the act and presumes that where a man's mind or his faculties of ratiocination are sufficiently clear to apprehend what he is doing he must always be presumed to intend the consequences of the action he takes. Mere want of motive and the fact that accused showed some signs that he suffered from a certain hallucination are not sufficient to attract the application of S. 84, Penal Code. Jalal v. Emperor. 30 Cr. L. J. 1024 : 119 I. C. 270 : I. R. 1929 Lah. 862.

—S. 84—Unsoundness of mind—Medical and legal points of view—Test.

The medical and legal standards of sanity are not identical. From the medical point of view every man at the time when he commits a murder is insane, that is, he is not in a sound, healthy normal condition, but from the legal point of view, a man must be held to be sane so long as he is able to distinguish between right and wrong, so long as he knows that the offence he is committing is a wrong thing to do, so long as he has a guilty mind. A person who is in a highly excited and unbalanced condition, but is nevertheless conscious that what he is doing is wrong and a crime cannot be said to be of unsound mind. Sher Singh v. Emperor.

25 Cr. L. J. 395 : 77 I. C. 443 : A. I. R. 1923 Lah. 508.

—S. 84—Unsoundness of mind—Mental derangement falling short of unsoundness—Murder—Lesser penalty—Youth as extenuating circumstance.

The law requires that a man shall be held responsible for his acts although he may be suffering from mental derangement in cases where that mental derangement falls short of the unsoundness of mind described in S. 84, Penal Code. On proof of such mental derangement in a murderer, the lesser sentence may be passed. Ordinarily youth is itself an extenuating circumstance, but it does not mean that in every case of murder, where the accused is under a certain age, the lesser penalty must be awarded. Nga Kan Hla v. Emperor.

16 Cr. L. J. 95 : 26 I. C. 1007 : U. B. R. 1914 II, 28 : A. I. R. 1914 U. Bur. 31.

—S. 84—Unsoundness of mind—Prior and subsequent conduct of accused.

In order to bring a case within the purview of S. 84, the accused must satisfy the Court that his unsoundness of mind is of such a nature and degree that by reason thereof he is incapable of knowing the nature of the act or of knowing that he is doing what is either wrong or contrary to law. In a case where an accused sets up the plea of insanity, the

PENAL CODE ACT (XLV OF 1860)

Court can judge only by inference to be derived from the prior and subsequent conduct of the prisoner as to the state of his mind at the time of the commission of the offence. Bhagwati Prasad v. Emperor.

24 Cr. L. J. 741 : 74 I. C. 69 : A. I. R. 1924 Oudh 190.

—S. 84—Unsoundness of mind—Proof—Criminal liability—Burden of proof.

Where unsoundness of mind is set up as a defence to a criminal charge, the burden of proving unsoundness of mind rests on the accused. The accused killed his wife and his infant daughter by striking them with a dah. There was no apparent motive to explain the double murder and the accused admitted without reservation what he had done and made no attempt at concealment or escape. There was some evidence that the accused had not been quite himself, that he had been disturbed and distressed by the shortage of cloth, rice and fodder; but there was no reliable evidence that his intellect was deranged. There was some vague evidence that his natural father had been mad: Held, that the evidence was not sufficient to prove that the cognitive faculties of the accused were so impaired that he did not know the nature of his act or that he was doing what was wrong or contrary to law, so that he was not exempt from criminal liability for the act. Ram Sunder Das v. Emperor.

20 Cr. L. J. 383 : 50 I. C. 991 : 29 C. L. J. 209 : 23 C. W. N. 621 : A. I. R. 1919 Cal. 248.

—S. 84—Unsoundness of mind—Proof—Evidence.

The accused was convicted for an offence under S. 307, Penal Code. It was found from the evidence for the prosecution that he was known as "Mad Nga Pyan"; that immediately before he committed the offence, he was noticed by persons to be in one of his mad fits, that he was under a delusion that the Phongyi whom he attacked was keeping his sisters and daughters in the monastery, that he confessed to the investigating officer and the headman, that he discontinued the attack when he was asked to do so and that the act was utterly unprovoked and motiveless: Held, that under these circumstances, the accused was at the time of committing the offence incapable, by reason of unsoundness of mind, of knowing the nature of the act or that it was wrong or contrary to law. Nga Pyan v. Emperor.

—S. 84—Unsoundness of mind—Proof—Exemption, extent of.

The policy of the law is to control not only the sane, but, so far as is possible, also the insane. Therefore it is not every person mentally diseased who ipso facto is exempted from criminal responsibility. Such exemption is allowed only to the limited extent stated in S. 84, Penal Code, which concisely reproduces the English Law as to non-punishable insanity. A claim for relief under S. 84 aforesaid, must necessarily be a plea in defence against an admitted or assumed act, which, in the absence of legal insanity, would amount to an offence. The onus of establishing the plea rests on the accused. No accused person can therefore be discharged merely upon the ground that when or if he committed the act, he was insane. The proper procedure is laid down in Ss. 469, 470 and 471, Cr. P. C. Emperor v. Katya Kishen. 1 Cr. L. J. 854 : 17 C. P. L. R. 113.

PENAL CODE ACT (XLV OF 1860)

———S. 84—Unsoundness of mind.

The plea of insanity being of the nature of a general exception, an accused person relying on it must establish it. Chandu Lal v. Emperor. 25 Cr. L. J. 348 : 77 I. C. 236 : 21 A. L. J. 776 : A. I. R. 1924 All. 186.

———S. 84—Unsoundness of mind—What is.

The mere co-existence of the five circumstances namely, (1) the absence of any motive, (2) absence of secrecy, (3) multiple murders, (4) want of pre-arrangement, and (5) want of accomplices, is not sufficient by itself to prove unsoundness of mind. The law requires proof of incapacity to realise the nature of the act, and presumes that where a man's mind or his faculties of ratiocination are sufficiently clear to apprehend what he is doing, he must always be presumed to intend the consequences of the action he takes. A man may be suffering from insanity in the sense in which the words would be used by an alienist but may not be suffering from unsoundness of mind within the meaning of S. 84, Penal Code. Mani Ram v. Emperor. 28 Cr. L. J. 120 : 99 I. C. 328 : 8 L. L. J. 566 : 27 P. L. R. 823 : 8 Lah. 114 : A. I. R. 1927 Lah. 52.

———S. 84—Unsoundness of mind—What is.

The term 'unsoundness of mind', as used in S. 84 cannot be construed so widely as to cover the loss of self-control following a hostile blow on the head, which is already inflamed with alcohol and has been exposed to the sun afterwards. Maung Gyi v. Emperor. 14 Cr. L. J. 427 : 20 I. C. 411 : 7 L. B. R. 13.

———S. 84—Unsoundness of mind, what is—Offence committed under impulse.

Under S. 84 a person is exempt from criminal liability only if by reason of unsoundness of mind he is incapable of knowing the nature of the act done by him or that he is doing what is either wrong or contrary to law. It must, in other words, be shown that the cognitive faculties of the accused had been impaired by the unsoundness of his mind. Ramzan v. Emperor. 20 Cr. L. J. 1 : 48 I. C. 492 : 30 P. PENAL CODE ACT (XLV OF 1860) ———Ss. 84, 85, 86—Applicability of.

Where there was absolutely no motive for murder and the accused was a habitual ganja smoker and did not plead unsoundness of mind and the death of the child was caused by being dashed on the ground several times: Held, the case was covered by S. 86 and transportation for life was a proper sentence. Recommendation was made to Local Government under S. 401, Cr. P. C. Emperor v. Tincomi Dhopi. 39 C. L. J. 34 : 27 C. W. N. 290 : A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 460.

———Ss. 84, 85, 86—Intoxication resulting from ganja, if good plea—Absence of motive, effect of.

If a person is of unsound mind, he is to be judged by the ordinary rules in regard to insanity, no matter whether the insanity arose from disease of the brain or from persistent indulgence in intoxicating drugs or liquor. But intoxication resembling a temporary form of insanity, resulting from one bout or repeated bouts of drinking or ganja smoking, which is of such a temporary nature as to pass off a few hours after the consumption of the liquor or drug, must be distinguished from unsoundness of mind. Such intoxication should be dealt with according to the provisions of law contained in Ss. 85, 88. Therefore, the fact that a person commits a crime while under the influence of such intoxication caused by a bout of ganja smoking, affords no excuse to the prisoner unless the intoxication be involuntary. Vithoo v. Emperor. 13 Cr. L. J. 164 : 13 I. C. 916 : 7 N. L. R. 185.

———Ss. 84, 302—Absence of motive—Insanity, presumption of.

There can be no presumption of insanity so as to give an accused person the benefit of S. 84 simply because there is evidence to show that the accused was ailing for some time before the commission of the offence and had not taken food for some days, and there is no motive for the crime of killing; but these circumstances may be taken into consideration in awarding punishment to him. Mahommed Sarwar v. Emperor. 31 Cr. L. J. 164 : 120 I. C. 733 : A. I. R. 1930 Nag. 63.

———Ss. 84, 302—Insanity due to drugs.

A person who, though of unsound mind, knows that in killing another he is committing a wrongful act, is not entitled to the benefit of S. 84, Penal Code. Persons who are in fact insane, whether they have become so from persistent indulgence in intoxicating drugs or from brain disease must be judged by the ordinary rules of law affecting insane persons. Emperor v. Harka. 4 Cr. L. J. 83 : 26 A. W. N. 198.

It was proved that sometime before the occurrence he was subject to insane fits, but there was no proof that when he committed the murder he did not know the nature or the consequences of his act. ———Ss. 84, 406—Unsoundness of mind, plea of—Criminal breach of trust—Case not falling under S. 84.

Where a Court trying a person for an offence of criminal breach of trust, finds that the case is not covered by S. 84, Penal Code, it should consider another aspect of the case, namely whether even if S. 84 did not cover the case, the state of mind in which the accused was, did not exclude the existence of a dishonest intention which is an essential ingredient of the offence of criminal breach of trust. Unsoundness of mind may be such that in respect of certain acts the person committing them is incapable of knowing the nature of what he is doing, while in the case of other acts, he might have knowledge of their character. Consequently where in the case of an accused tried for criminal breach of trust, the evidence relating to his state of mind at the time of the commission of the crime clearly shows that due to particular kind of unsoundness of mind he must have been unable to form the criminal intention of causing wrongful loss or gain, he cannot be held guilty of the offence with which he is charged. *In re : G. Evidence of drunkenness falling short of a proved incapacity in the accused to form the intent necessary to constitute the crime and merely establishing that his mind was affected by drink so that he more readily gave way to some violent passion does not rebut the presumption that a man intends the natural consequences of his act. *Bishan Singh v. A. I. R. 1937 Rang. 467.

———Ss. 85, 86—Drunkenness as ground of exemption—Knowledge—Intention.

Voluntary drunkenness is never an excuse for crime. The fact that a man was drunk makes no difference, per se, to the question of his criminal liability. Involuntary drunkenness, as a ground of exemption is treated in just the same way as insanity. In order that Involuntary drunkenness may be accepted as a ground of exemption, it must be shown that the accused was so drunk that he did not know (1) the nature of the act, or (2) that it was wrong, or (3) that it was contrary to law. A man is assumed to intend the natural or necessary consequences of his act, and, in the majority of cases, the question of intention is merely the question of knowledge. S. 86 of the Penal Code only provides that, where intent is to be inferred from an act, a man voluntarily drunk is treated in the same way as a man sober. Although neither voluntary drunkenness, nor involuntary drunkenness, which does not involve one or other of the three states of mind mentioned in S. 85, can excuse crimes committed under its influence, yet the fact of drunkenness may alter the nature of the legal offence committed in cases where an essential of the crime is the presence of some particular knowledge or intention. *Waris Ali v. A. I. R. 1923 Lah. 294.

———S. 86—Scope of—Intoxicated person—Knowledge—Intent.

Under S. 86 ordinary drunkenness makes no difference to the knowledge with which a man is credited and if an accused knew what the natural consequences of his act were, he must be presumed to have intended to cause them. S. 86 does not lay down that an intoxicated person shall be dealt with as if he had the same intent as he would have had if he had not been intoxicated. In re : Mandru Gadaba.

Although S. 86 attributes to a drunken man the knowledge of a sober man when judging of his action, it does not give him the same intention, and, therefore, drunkenness or a state of intoxication affords a sufficient excuse

A man who strikes another man with a knife in the throat must know that the blow is so imminently dangerous that it must, in all probability, cause death, and is guilty of murder. Evidence of drunkenness falling short of a proved incapacity in the accused to form the intent necessary to constitute the crime, and merely establishing that his mind was affected by drink so that he more readily gave way to some violent passion, does not rebut the presumption that a man intends the natural consequences of his acts and is no excuse for the commission of an offence. Although drunkenness, by itself, does not excuse the commission of an offence, this along with other circumstances may well be taken into account in considering the nature of the penalty to be inflicted. *Judagi Mallah v. The accused, who were in peaceful possession of their land apprehended from their past experience that at some time or another the complainant's party would make an attempt to seize the land by force. Therefore, when they went to plough their land, they took the precaution to take with them their lathis to protect themselves as well as their property, as they were fewer in number than the complainant's party. One day, when they were engaged in ploughing their land, they were suddenly set upon by the complainant's party, who attacked them with lathis causing injuries to all of them. A large number of the complainant's party got hurt in the fight: Held, that the accused were protected by both clauses of S. 97, Penal Code, as they had a right to defend their persons as well as their property against the complainants, who committed or attempted to commit the offence of criminal trespass. *Hira v. Under S. 340, Penal Code, the arrest of any person who has not been guilty of any offence for which arrest without warrant is permitted, is prima facie wrongful confinement of the person but Ss. 96 and 97, give a right to every person to defend his own body and the body of every other person and the property of himself and every other person against certain offences, and this right of private defence commences under Ss. 102 and 105 of the Code, when a reasonable apprehension of danger to the person or property commences. A small river flowed by the side of villages K and S. The people of K raised a bandh in the bed of the river in K. The people of S applied to the Sub-Divisional Officer to take action against the people of K under S. 114, Cr. P. C. and to direct them to remove the bandh. The Sub-Divisional Officer passed an order which ran as follows : 'The report shows that the villagers of K have erected a new bandh. Issue Notice under S. 144, Cr. P. C., restraining the second party from obstructing the flow of water into the canal by erecting a bandh. Send a copy of the order to the Police who will see that there is no breach of the peace.' This order was interpreted by the Police, and the people of S to mean that the bandh was to be removed. The people of K refused to remove the bandh and in spite of the warnings of the Police, the people of S proceeded to cut the bandh. A free fight ensued and one of the villagers of S was killed and others injured. The accused who belonged to village K were convicted of offences under S. 302 and Ss. 147 to 149, Penal Code: Held, (i) that the villagers of S had no right to cut the bandh under the circumstances mentioned and when they actually proceeded to destroy it, the people of K had a right to prevent them from doing so and the accused could not, therefore, be convicted under Ss. 147, 148 and 149 ; (ii) that in view of the fact that injuries were caused to the deceased in a free fight and in the exercise of private defence of person as well as property and many persons other than the accused had caused severe injuries to the deceased, the conviction under S. 302, could not be sustained but the accused was guilty of an offence under S. 326, Penal Code, as he had exceeded the right of private defence. *Tilak Kohar v. The brother of the accused was a lessee of a certain island which produced a sort of thatching grass. A number of Ahirs of a neighbouring village had gone with boats to this island, had cut a quantity of the grass and were taking it back to their village. The accused party came in their own boat in pursuit and tried to seize the bundles of grass. The Ahirs resisted and there was a free fight between the parties. The accused party took to their boat. The Ahirs, however, advanced through water towards the boat armed with lathis and the assault on the party of the accused had not ceased but continued in form of pelting with brickbats and was likely to assume the form of physical seizure of the boat and further attack with lathis. The Ahirs were about 25 feet from the accused's boat. The accused fired three shots with a shot gun as a result of which one person received a simple hurt, other a grievous hurt and the third one died of injuries : Held, that in view of the fact that injuries on two of the accused party were grievous, there was a right of private defence of property which under S. 103, Penal Code, extended to the causing of death to the wrong-doers, the offence being not merely theft but robbery within the definition in S. 390 because the offenders in carrying away property obtained by theft for that end had voluntarily caused hurt. There was, likewise, a right of private defence of the person which under S. 100 extended to the voluntary causing of death, the assault being such as caused the grievous hurt. *Ajab Narain Singh v. At this time the complainant's party had either finished the cutting or ceased to do so, when they saw the accused approaching. The latter attacked the complainant's party and drove them to their village. One or more of the assailants also beat a man, who was present there, but was not connected with the cutting of the bund, both in the first attack and when they returned from the chase, and fractured his skull, in consequence of which he died shortly after: Held, that the accused were members of an unlawful assembly from the beginning and had no right of private defence, when the opposite party had ceased cutting the bund. *Emperor v. In order to set up the right of private defence, it is incumbent upon the accused to begin by showing that at the time of their interference an offence affecting the human body was being committed on the person on whose behalf they interfered. A public servant does not cease to be a private citizen, and the law will take cognizance of an assault committed upon him, independently altogether of his position as a public servant. If, however, it is desired to invoke on his behalf the provisions of S. 333, Penal Code, and other similar sections, it is for the prosecution to satisfy the Court that the facts of the case were such as to fulfil the requirements of those sections. *Sampal v. The accused, the landlord's people protested. Thereupon a fight took place and persons on both sides were injured. There was no intention of the accused to use more force than was necessary: Held, that the accused were not guilty of rioting as they were justified in protecting their master's property and in using such force as was necessary to prevent the tenants from carrying away the crops. *Ram Khelawan Singh v. Under S. 97, Penal Code, every person has a right to defend property against theft or criminal trespass or an attempt to commit either of these offences. The right of private defence extends to the voluntary causing of death, if the offence is theft under such circumstances as may reasonably cause apprehension that death or grievous hurt will be the consequence if the right of private defence is not exercised (S. 103). In other cases of theft, the right does not extend to the voluntary causing of death, but to the voluntary causing of any harm other than death (S. 104). In no case does the right extend to the infliction of more harm than is necessary to inflict for the purpose of defence (S. 99). Emperor v. Kyaw Zam Hla.

Every attempt or threat to commit an offence would not, however, entitle a man to take up arms. He must pause and reflect whether the threat is entitled to be put into execution immediately, because there are many threats, which people use as a form of abuse, but which are never intended to be taken seriously, and, still others, which the persons saying them have not the capacity to put into immediate execution; for it is only against a danger, present and imminent, that the right of private defence avails. The right of private defence, however, is a very limited right. It cannot be converted into a right of reprisal and would not exonerate an accused person from punishment if he inflicts more harm than is necessary, even though such harm is caused under provocation. *Sitarani v. Then B. W. slashed at K. D. with his dahi first and then turned on P. S. and slashed at him with it. He hit K. D. on the forearm and the injury caused did not turn out to be very serious and this must be because K. D. lifted his arm to ward off the blow. But the result of the blow which hit P. S. was that three of his fingers were cut off. Then it was that K. D. took a knife from somewhere about his person and stabbed B. W. with it in a vital part of the body causing B. W.'s death. K. ————S. 97—Right to defend property—Reasonable force to defend possession.

No person can take the law into his own hands and forcibly recover possession. But the law allows every person to use reasonable force to defend his possessions from a trespasser. Where A, as owner of cattle, is in possession of the cattle and B endeavours to dispossess him by trying to seize the cattle, the right of private defence exercised by A in such a case is in reality a right of private defence of the body, though exercised with the object of defending property. *Emperor v. He then heard the sounds of sugar-cane being cut; and he aimed with a cross-bow in the direction of the sound and shot. The bolt hit the thief in the side and caused his death: Held, that the question whether the accused acted in the lawful exercise of the right of private defence, and whether he exceeded the limits of his right, was one of much difficulty which the Magistrate should have left for the decision of a Superior Court. *Emperor v. The accused who were for a long time in possession of the land were ploughing it, which they had right to do. They were attacked by a number of men, one of whom was R, the deceased. At least three men of the side of the accused were assaulted and one of their assailants was armed with some such weapon as a sword stick. One of the accused, S, struck R with a bhala as a result of which he died subsequently : Held, that in the circumstances of the case when the accused retaliated, they were justified by the right of private defence. Accused picked a quarrel with another and tried to hit him but was set upon by his opponent and the deceased and tried to run away. After running some distance he found that he could not make his escape ; he then turned round and hit a blow on the deceased which resulted in his death : Held, that the accused had acted in the exercise of the right of private defence and was not guilty of any offence. An attack with lathis is likely to create a reasonable fear of grievous hurt being caused, and the person attacked is justified in striking with a lathi in self-defence to the extent of causing grievous hurt or even death under S 100, Penal Code. *Ram Sewak v. Several heads of cattle belonging to the party of the complainant trespassed into a maize field belonging to the party of the accused. The members of the latter party captured the cattle and began to drive them towards the cattle pound, whereupon the members of the opposite party, armed with lathis, etc., set upon them and rescued the cattle. Upon this there was a serious fight which resulted in the death of several men on both sides. The fight took place in a field belonging to the party of the accused : Held, (1) that as the rescue of the cattle amounted to theft under the Penal Code, apart from an offence under the Cattle Trespass Act, the right of private defence was available to the party of the accused ; (2) that if the men of the party of complainant entered upon the field, belonging to the party of the accused, with the object of committing an assault, they were guilty of the offence of criminal trespass and the members of the party of the accused had the right to eject them by such force as was necessary. *Lalji Singh v. When a riot has been committed, it is easy to add among the names of accused, persons against whom the informant or any particular witness has a grudge, and failure to name a particular accused in the first statements made before the Police or Magistrate without having the opportunity of consultation or preparation, seriously affects the truth of the prosecution story. *Ramphal Das v. B, the deceased, interfered and, after vainly remonstrating with A, hit him with a branch of a tree on the head. Getting incensed at this, A inflicted on B a fatal blow: Held, that as the deceased hit the appellant with the sole object of preventing him from stabbing C, in exercise of the right of private defence as laid down in S. 97, Penal Code, this provocation will not bring the appellant's act under the 1st exception to S. 300. But as the effect of the blow given by B, on a man already inflamed with drink, would be to deprive him of self-control, this circumstance may properly be taken into account in awarding punishment under S. 302. *Nyo Hla Aung v. ———Ss. 97, 302, 304-II—Excess of right—Private defence, right of, in cases of mischief and trespass—Aiming blow with weapon causing fracture of skull—Offence committed.

In the case of mischief or criminal trespass on the property of a person, the owner is justified in repelling the act of the intruder by the use of violence to the extent, if necessary, of causing grievous hurt. But if he aims a blow with a formidable weapon, e.g., a rafter or balla, with such violence as to fracture the skull thereby causing the death of the trespasser, he exceeds his right of private defence and is guilty of an offence under S. 304-II, Penal Code. *Natha Singh v. In doing so the complainant's party used violence and succeeded in rescuing some of the cattle. The accused resisted the action of the complainant's party and in attempting to defend themselves against the violence used by the complainant's party, caused injuries to several members of that party, some of which amounted to grievous hurt: Held, that the accused were legally entitled to take the cattle to the pound and that the action of the complainant's party in attempting to rescue cattle was unlawful and that the accused had, therefore, the right of private defence. *Udit Singh v. If a plea of right of private defence is put forward, it should be placed before the Court, not by a pleader's ingenuity of mere argument, but by a straightforward account of the accused himself, and the burden of proving it is on him. If police constables going under their superior's directions to escort a party and to prevent a breach of the peace under S. 42 (b), Kathiawar Police Law corresponding to Bombay Act [IV of 1890, S. 51 (b)] are in ordinary clothes and have no uniform on, their assailants could not safely be considered to have defied their authority as public servants. Where, therefore, the prosecution party comes with the war cries of 'Kobali' and 'Konu' and armed with sticks capable of causing grievous hurts, the right of private defence of person arises almost simultaneously with the right of private defence of property and the accused party is

The accused snatched the stick from the hands of the constable who had struck him and delivered two blows with it on the Sub-Inspector's head which caused a fracture of his skull and resulted in his death: Held, that the accused had a right to defend a female member of his household from assault and when he was subsequently assaulted himself both by the Sub-Inspector and by the constable, he had a right to defend himself; that the accused having acted in the exercise of the right of private defence and not having exceeded it, was not guilty of any offence. *Emperor v. ———Ss. 99, 141, 149—Right to defend, immovable property—Person in possession, whether can use force—Test of criminality—Resistance to aggressor, right of.

Every person has a right, subject to the restrictions contained in S. 99, Penal Code, to defend his immovable property. Once a man is in possession of his own property, he is entitled to use force to defend it. In cases where a free fight has taken place for the possession of certain property between two parties, the test of criminality is, was accused in possession or not in possession at the time when the alleged offence was committed. It is no offence under S. 149, Penal Code, to resist an aggressor unless the aggression be in execution of the law or of some legal process. Where the accused and his party were entitled to enter upon certain land and to reap the crop and the complainant with his party came upon the scene to remonstrate and to prevent them from reaping the crop and a fight took place in which persons on both sides were injured: Held, that the accused were not guilty of committing any criminal offence by the mere entry on the land or by defending the accused's property against aggression. Lashkari Khan v. Emperor.

In appropriate cases, the right of private defence is an answer to a charge of rioting. The right of private defence can be exercised only in special circumstances and with the restrictions imposed by S. 99, Penal Code. The important considerations are, firstly what is the nature of the apprehended danger, and secondly, whether there was time to have recourse to the Police authorities. It is certainly open to the Courts to go into the question of title incidentally in order to decide whether they could believe the evidence of possession and in order to see which of the parties was really acting in exercise of his right or whether he was making out a pretence to engage in a pitched battle. Satnarain Das v. Emperor.

But when the official status of the peon was disclosed to him, he subsided into a peaceful attitude and offered resistance no more: Held, (1) that whatever mistake there might be in the procedure of the Civil Court, if there was any at all, by giving the direction to the peon to catch fish for the decree-holder, the accused had no right of private defence against the peon who was acting under the colour of his office and in good faith, though the act might not be strictly justifiable by law and that the conviction was right, and (2) that a sentence of fine of fifty rupees was sufficient to vindicate the law for the technical offence of an assault on a public servant. *Preo Lal Mukherjee v. A party of men who arm themselves in order to be ready to defend themselves against an attack, if necessary, are not, in the event of an attack, deprived of the right of private defence merely because they had come armed to the place of occurrence. A man who is assaulted is not bound to modulate his defence step by step, according to the attack, before there is reason to believe the attack is over. He is entitled to secure his victory as long as the contest is continued. Where the assault has once assumed a dangerous form, every allowance should be made for one, who with the instinct of self-preservation strong upon him, pursues his defence a little further than to a perfectly cool by-stander would seem absolutely necessary. The question in such cases will be, not whether there was an actually continuing danger but whether there was a reasonable apprehension of such danger. Dalip Singh v. Emperor.

Persons who are using canal water in good faith, cannot be said to constitute an unlawful assembly if they resist and repel an aggression in order to maintain the right of which they are in possession. The extent to which the exercise of the right of self-defence is justified, depends not on the actual danger but on whether there is a reasonable apprehension of such danger. *Bagh Singh v. A Sub-Inspector was instructed to examine the person of the accused and while doing so the accused did not allow his hand to be moved as asked by the Sub-Inspector. Thereupon the latter abused him calling him sala. The Inspector ordered his constables to beat him and he was beaten on the head with a lathi by B, a constable, accordingly. At this stage he took out his knife and first stabbed G, another constable and when the former tried to strike him again with a lathi he stabbed him on the arm. G succumbed to his injuries: Held, that although the accused's threatening the Inspector with his cane may amount to an offence under S. 253, Penal Code, the Police were entitled only to seize the accused and not to beat him, and in view of their superior numbers and the fact that the cane was not a dangerous weapon, there was no need for resort to beating: Held, also that the situation was one in which he reasonably apprehended the infliction of grievous hurt on himself and S. 100, Penal Code, applied. *Inzar Gul Khan v. All that the section lays down is that the person claiming the right of private defence must be under a bona fide apprehension or fear that death or grievous hurt would otherwise be the consequence of the assault on him, if he does not defend himself: Held, that the accused had the right of private defence of person against the deceased, and that they were entitled to the benefit of S. 100, Penal Code. *Gaya Prasad v. If a person in defending himself exceeds the right of private defence and intends to cause the death of his assailant, he is not necessarily guilty of murder. A person in order to defend himself may kill his adversary provided he has a reasonable apprehension that otherwise he himself would be killed. But where there is no reasonable apprehension of his being killed but only reasonable apprehension of grievous hurt, and in defending himself he exceeds his right of private defence and kills the other, he is not guilty of murder but only guilty of an offence less than murder. ———S. 105—Private defence of property—Attack by persons armed with dangerous weapons—Death caused by one blow—Right of private defence, whether arises.

Accused, who were five in number, at night made a hole in the wall of a courtyard attached to a house and entering the courtyard attempted to remove a cow which was kept there. The inmates of the house, who were sleeping in the courtyard, woke up and followed the accused. One of them struck one of the accused with a dang whereupon the latter fell upon the former and caused severe injuries to him, one of which proved fatal. The accused were charged and convicted of offences under Ss. 304-II and 457 of the Penal Code; Held, that the death of the deceased having, however, been caused by a single blow given by one of the accused who had not been specifically identified and there being no charge under S. 149, Penal Code, the accused could not be convicted of an offence under S. 304-II, Penal Code; that the accused having armed themselves with dangerous weapons must have known that in case of opposition, the weapons would be used, and in all probability, grievous hurt at least would be caused and that, therefore, the accused were guilty of an offence under Ss. 325/114, Penal Code. Niamal v. Emperor.

———S. 105—Private defence of property—Trespass by cattle—Cattle chased by owners of land—Accused beating straggler chaser—Exercise of right of private defence.

Certain cattle belonging to the accused trespassed on the complainant's field and grazed there. An attempt was made by the complainant to seize them with a view to take them to the cattle-pound. The cattle ran away towards the field of the accused and were chased by the complainant and his friends. The chasers were joined by the deceased who, however, lagged behind. The accused inflicted fatal injuries on him: Held, that the accused had no right of private defence against the deceased who had not seized any cattle and was a mere straggler. Waryami v. Emperor.
